GEORGETOWN LOSES TO NAVY NEAR END, 10-7, BEFORE 22,000

BOB NORK BRILLIANT IN HILLTOP OFFENSE

G. U. Line Checks Middies, but Air Attack Sways Decision After Team Trails.

By SHIRLEY L. POVICH.

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 13.—Georgetown met the Navy and was beaten back. In the figures, 10 to 7, is unfolded the story of how the Midshipman eleven, foundering on the reefs of a bristling Georgetown line, turned to the air as its savior, and was rewarded with victory as the game neared its end.

Twenty-two thousand persons at Farragut field saw how Georgetown's lead dwindled, how Navy's repeated efforts to pierce the line of the Blue and Gray eleven from Washington went for naught, how the forward pass and the drop-kick were called into play by the Midshipmen as defeat loomed with the passing minutes, how Georgetown's lone vulnerable point, its aerial defensive, provided Navy with its chance for victory, and how Navy pounced upon the offering that was so apparent.

Georgetown was outscored but not outplayed—but the Navy won the game. The Navy came back after being faced with the possibility of joining the long list of those teams "that had figured to win." Navy had figured to win, but the 1,500 midshipment in the stands and the other partisans of the Navy team among the 22,000 in attendance, were not reassured as Georgetown took the play from Navy's hands and scored the first touchdown.

Field Goal Decides Game.

Tom Hamilton, a Midshipman from Columbus, Ohio, won the game for the Navy. With the score tied at 7-7 and the fourth quarter well toward its end, Hamilton was called upon in preference to another attempt at the Georgetown line. He dropped back in the center of the field to 18 yards from the goal line and booted the field goal that represented the margin of victory.

Lou Little, Georgetown's coach, produced an unheralded star for Navy's benefit—or discomforture. He was Bob Nork, chunky little fullback, whose forward passing hitherto had been regarded as his greatest value to the team. But today, he was the dazzling ball carrier. He crashed the line of scrimmage, shifted with his interference, and out-guessed the Navy secondary defense to break loose for extended gains.

Nork scored Georgetown's lone touchdown. He scored it in a manner that brought Navy to the realization that here was a man to be watched. With the ball on Navy's 10-yard line, Nork was called upon for the next offensive thrust. He received the pass from center, and crouching low, pointed for a dash through tackle. Navy men were there, and Nork, thinking quickly, changed his course. He raced far toward left end, cut in quickly behind hastily-formed interference and crossed the goal line untouched by a Navy hand.

That was not Georgetown's only offensive threat. For the greater portion of the contest, Navy was bent only on repulsing the fury of Georgetown's rushes.

Shapley in Long Run.

Navy, the team that had defeated Princeton and Colgate and has routed numerous other opponents, was taken back by the sheer power of Georgetown's play. First downs were not numerous, nor did Georgetown engineer long marches down the field, nor did Navy. But Georgetown followed the ball to every advantage. The Hilltoppers recovered fumbles, were down under punts and pressed Navy for every yard except for the moments when Navy's decisive passing game asserted itself.

Alan Shapley, Navy's recognized star, who had taken little part in the Midshipmen's gridiron contests this season, was the medium by which Navy tied the score in the third quarter. He was on the receiving end of a long pass from Hamilton with the ball on Georgetown's 40-yard line, and he ran 30 yards to a touchdown.

That effort was the turning point of the game. Shapley's run was

Notre Dame Beats Army, 7 to 0 by Run of 63 Yards

By WALTER ECKERSALL.

New York, Nov. 13.—Christy Flanagan, one of the best running backs in the country, placed himself alongside the football immortals of Notre Dame today when he ran 63 yards for a touchdown and those six points and the one made by O'Doyle on the folowing goal kick gave Knute Rockne's eleven a victory over the Army in the Yankee stadium.

This colorful struggle, which has grown into one of the most important in the country, marked the fourteenth meeting of the teams representing the two institutions. As a result of today's game, Notre Dame has won nine games, the Army four, while one resulted in a tie.

Seldom has a game of football been played in this section which was so stubbornly fought and cleanly played. The defense of both elevens was so impregnable that neither was able to maintain a sustained attack although both coaches added fuel to their ma-

Field goals were conspicuous in the football games played in the East yesterday. Four major games were won by three-point margins. Traditional rivalries were renewed by the majority of the leading colleges.

Princeton beat Yale for the Big Three title, Navy won out over Georgetown, Harvard bowed to Brown, Cornell eked out victory over Dartmouth, Maryland and Virginia played to a tie, Notre Dame defeated Army and Syracuse played Colgate to a tie.

Michigan's 1-point victory over Ohio State provided the feature in the West.

Navy, 10; Georgetown, 7.
Notre Dame, 7; Army, 0.
Princeton, 10; Yale, 7.
Brown, 21; Harvard, 0.
Penn, 3; Columbia, 0.
Cornell, 24; Dartmouth, 23.
Virginia, 6; Maryland, 6.
Holy Cross, 14; Catholic U., 6.
Syracuse, 10; Colgate, 10.
George Washington, 27; Randolph Macon, 0.
Michigan, 17; Ohio State, 16.

JUGOSLAVIA INDIGNANT; WAR WITH ITALY IS SEEN

MAY APPEAL TO LEAGUE

(Special Cable Dispatch.)

Belgrade, Nov. 13.—Jugoslavia has made repeated efforts to patch up some sort of friendship with Italy, as postwar complications have led to a strained situation between the two countries, often threatening war.

Since the last assault on Premier Mussolini, however, the Italians are accused here of tyrannizing and oppressing the Serb minorities in a manner hitherto unknown, culminating in the arrest and imprisonment of Signor Wilfan, a member of the Italian parliament.

A wave of indignation and excitement has swept over Belgrade, and all Jugoslavia at the unprecedented act. Interpellations were made today in parliament, when the opposition demanded that the government take vigorous steps to free Signor Walfan. The Jugoslavian government, however, is doing its best to allay the conflict, fearing a serious protest may disturb the relations with Italy, and has refused to take any steps.

The Italian government and fascists were violently attacked in parliament. One member called Italy the greatest enemy of peace and an international provoker. The speech, made in parliament my M. Radich yesterday, can not improve the relations between the two countries. The Italian Minister to Belgrade was closeted yesterday for an

Escaped Slayer Shot In Fight With Police

San Francisco, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Jo Tanko, San Mateo county murderer, who escaped from San Quentin in the spring of 1925 with Floyd Hall, and thereafter created a reign of terror in northern California, was shot and killed in a revolver fight with two policemen here today in which Policeman Earl Rooney was also shot, perhaps fatally.

END OF BRITISH STRIKE IS DEFEAT FOR MINERS

ALL MAIN CLAIMS LOST

London, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—To all intents the long coal stoppage, which dislocated half the country's industries and is estimated to have cost the nation $1,500,000,000, has ended with defeat of every important claim for which the miners fought so tenaciously.

It may still be a week or more before there is a general resumption of work, but the termination of the strife came today when the miners' delegate conference recommended that the miners accept the government's peace proposal. The card vote of the delegates was 432,000 in favor of recommending that the districts accept the terms, and 352,000 against the proposal.

That the miners, who vote by districts, not by ballot, will accept the recommendation is regarded as a foregone conclusion.

The settlement is described by nobody as a negotiated peace. It is peace virtually imposed by the government, and was accepted only after bitter opposition by a minority of the Welsh miners and in the face of a probable stampede of the men back to work had it been rejected.

The royal coal commission's report, which figured so largely in the earlier negotiations, is disregarded. The owners gained most of their points for the settlement, which means longer hours and decreased wages for the men and complete disappearance of the national principle in arranging the conditions of work.

Taylor Maid Cleared In $300,000 Robbery

New York, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Margaret McConnachin, maid, who was arrested on suspcion Monday in connection with the theft of jewels valued at $300,000 from the home of Myron C Taylor, a director of the United States Steel corporation, was discharged today. Detectives working on the case did not find sufficient evidence to hold her.

MRS. HALL LISTENS CALMLY TO ARDENT LETTERS OF RECTOR

Burning Words Penned to Mrs. Mills Bring Only Faint Quiver.

WONDER HEART, QUEEN, AMONG PHRASES USED

Heated Clash of Lawyers Marks Trial; State's Case Near End.

Somerville, N. J., Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Mrs. Francis Stevens Hall sat in a little courthouse here today and heard letters, telling of the professed love of her dead husband for another woman, also dead, read to a jury, which seemed less interested than the curious throng in the courtroom.

The widow of the slain rector sat between her brothers and codefendants, Willie and Henry Stevens, as extravagant phrases, represented as those of her husband addressed to Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills, singer in his church choir, were read into the record by the State, which charges the trio with the murder of Mrs. Mills. A light quiver of the lips as the reading was started, and the woman defendant was calm again, a very possessed but sorrowful figure.

The letters dwarfed all else of significance in the trial day. Submitted as evidence in the morning after they previously had been identified, they were admitted but not until the defense had vainly urged their exclusion.

Two References to Wife.

Most of the letters were written from Maine, where the Rev. Edward W. Hall was on vacation in 1922. Only two references to Mrs. Hall appeared. One told of Mrs. Hall's wondering "why I am taking only three Sundays off." The other said, "I can't talk to you any more in the presence of Mrs. Hall or Jim."

The letters were introduced by the prosecution as having been found with a diary said to have been that of Mr. Hall, discovered in Mrs. Mills' home after her death. They were printed, in part, in 1922, James Mills, the husband of the slain woman and the "Jim" of the letter having testified that he was paid $500 by a New York newspaper for the publication rights.

The letters were signed, for the most part, "D. L. T.," but some were read as bearing the name of the minister. The use of the initials was not explained.

ITALIAN FLIER WINS SCHNEIDER AIR RACE; SETS NEW RECORD

Americans Lose Coveted Cup, Twice Captured by Them.

U. S. MARINE PILOT GETS SECOND PLACE

All-Curtiss Racer, America's Only Hope, Goes Down; Ferrarin Also Quits.

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Maj. Mario de Bernardi, Italian royal air force, and his little Macchi-Fiat monoplane today broke all existing records for seaplanes, won the Schneider cup race for Mussolini and Italy and deprived the United States of its chance to retain the coveted international trophy permanently.

At more than four and one-tenth miles each minute, the little red streak walked away from everything on the course and when De Barnardi crossed the finish line his average speed was clocked as 246.496 miles an hour, the fastest man has ever traveled in a seaplane.

In addition he broke the records for the 100-kilometer closed circuit at 248.189 miles per hour; for the 200-kilometer closed circuit at 248.00025 miles per hour, and bettered the 3-kilometer record in six of his seven laps.

America's Only Hope Goes Down.

America's only hope in the race, the all-Curtiss plane, piloted by Lieut. George T. Cuddihy, went down as he started for the home plyon on his last lap. His average speed for the race at that time, however, was far below that of the Italian, being only 239.191 miles per hour for the first six laps.

Besides Cuddihy, Capt. Arturo Ferrarin, who had flown a splendid first three laps, came to the water and out of the race just after completing his third lap with a average speed at that time of 235.358 miles per hour.

Four planes finished with the following miles per hour speeds:

No. 6 (2d)—	Lieut. C. F. Schilt	231.363
No. 5 (1st)—	Maj. de Barnardi	246.496
No. 3 (3d)—	Lieut. Adiano Bacula	218.006
No. 2 (4th)—	Lieut. W. G. Tomlinson	136.953

The little "black racer" that won the race in Baltimore last year, tried valiantly, but could do no better than take a poor second place at a speed less than her own record of 232.573, made by Lieut. James H. Doolittle, U. S. A. She was also the craft in which the other records that went down today before the fascist machine were made by Doolittle.

Schilt Flies Race.

But little hope had been held for this craft winning the race with the weakest engine in the aggregation, but when she was given to Lieut. Schilt, a marine, it was believed that she would be able to run better than last year because of slight improvements. Lieut. Schilt flew his race well, but the speed was not there.

The other American entry to finish was the Curtiss Hawk, a service pursuit plane, which plodded away over the 350 kilometer course, giving away for the others, as they whizzed by. Lieut. William G. Tom-

MARRIAGE ANNULLED ON PLEA OF DUCHESS

Former Consuelo Vanderbilt, Not Duke, Presented the Petition to Church.

London, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—The petition for annulment of the marriage between the Duke of Marlborough and the former Consuelo Vanderbilt, was submitted by the former duchess and was granted by the Roman Catholic diocesan court at Southwark last March. It was confirmed by the holy rota tribunal in Rome in July.

The Duchess of Marlborough was diverced from her husband several years ago and was then married to Jacques Balsan, of France. The duke's second bride was Miss Gladys Deacon, of Boston.

Although first reports had it that the annulment was decreed on application of the Duke of Marlborough, the duke refused to discuss the case. The former duchess presented her petition to the diocesan court of Southwark, where one of the duke's legal residences is situated.

WINNER OF SCHNEIDER CUP RACE

BYSTANDER FELLS BROADWAY BANDIT BY FLYING TACKLE

Holdup Man, Clerk and Policeman Shot in Hail of Bullets.

New York, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Rudolph Beck, "innocent bystander," employed football tactics during an attempted robbery today and "got his man," with a flying tackle that thrilled a Times square crowd. Beck's man was one of three who attempted a daring daylight holdup of Henry Silberfeld's jewelry store at Broadway and Thirty-ninth street. That same robber shot a policeman and a jewelry salesman before a second policeman laid him low with a bullet under the heart.

The bullet that wounded the robber, however, passed through the flesh of Beck's knee, jammed deep in the robber's stomach as Beck held him pinned to the sidewalk, before it gained its objective.

Of the wounded, only the bandit, identified by police as Benjamin Grogan, is in a serious condition. David Jacobi, the salesman, had a bullet in his left shoulder and Patrolman John Lanigan had a bullet wound in his right side.

It all began when Grogan and two accomplices appeared at the jewelry store. Two stood outside. Grogan entered. Jacobi, the salesman, was helping Henry Hoffman, the store manager, dress the show window.

Hoffman left the window to serve Grogan and Jacobi held open the door for the porter to pass out. He locked the door behind the porter, without thinking a robber was in the store.

"I want a cigarette case," said Grogan.

Hoffman showed him a few. Grogan whipped out his revolver and forced Jacobi and Hoffman into the back room.

The porter returned and the robber, holding his revolver leveled at Jacobi, ordered him to open the door. Jacobi slipped out the door as the porter entered and Grogan followed him.

As Grogan sped after Jacobi he saw Patrolman Lanigan drawing his revolver. Grogan fired, and Lanigan fell. Grogan then continued his pursuit of the fleeing Jac-

THIRD RUM SUBMARINE IS CAPTURED ON LAKE

Last of the Undersea Craft Known to Be on Champlain Is Seized.

TOWED UNDER SURFACE

St. Albans, Vt., Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Lake Champlain bootleggers are back on the three-plane method of distribution—motorboat, automobile and airplane—upon which they depended before they took a leaf from recent military history and submerged.

A third rum-running "submarine," last of the fleet known to have been constructed for the nefarious traffic, is in the hands of Canadian authorities. Seizure was made by the royal Canadian mounted police in a cove near Fort Montgomery, N. Y., from which the American patrol on guard had been barred by high winds.

Financial loss represented by destruction of their "untersee" craft and realization of the effect of Canadian cooperation with American chasers, will prevent further effort along this line, according to Collector of Coustoms Harry C. Whitehill.

"There is no doubt, however," he said, "that rum running subma-

Suicide in Crashing Plane Indicated by Flier's Note

Special to The Washington Post.

Los Angeles, Calif, Nov. 13.—A letter from Donald Rossiter, 20-year-old air mail pilot, to his sweetheart, today indicated that Rossiter's death, when his plane crashed to earth yesterday, may have been a case of suicide.

Miss Alice Van Fleet produced the letter today. She received it shortly before Rossiter hopped off on his last trip. The letter follows:

"Dear Alice: I just wanted to tell you not to feel bad or figure this was your fault in any way. I think that if I go away, Dick will probably come over to see you. All that I want is to see you happy, and also want you to let the folks know that I did not do this on their account. I don't suppose that you can read this, but I am awfully nervous and can't hold the pen still. With lots of love. Don."

Rossiter, although he had a parachute strapped to his back, did not leap from the falling plane to safety, as his fellow aviator, Charles Widemer, did. Widemer's story today is that he called several times to get Rossiter to leap, but Rossiter would not.

QUEEN DENOUNCED, POLICE AT CHICAGO BEAT COMMUNISTS

Radicals, With Banners, Storming City Hall, Are Driven Back.

SHORTENING OF VISIT TO U. S. IS EXPECTED

Roumanian Party May Sail 2 Weeks Before Schedule; Home for Yuletide.

Chicago, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Three hundred communists, carrying incendiary banners derogating Queen Marie and the Roumania government, injected into Chicago's welcome to the queen tonight a feature not included in the plans which she approved for her reception.

Greeted with social and military pomp, Marie swept through the packed concourse of the Illinois Central station and into the royal car to find in the background of the welcoming throng members of the International Workers Defense league, flaunting legends, papers and handbills assailing her and the government she represents.

"Down with Roumanian terrorism," "down with Queen Marie, oppressor of Bukovina and Bessarabia," and "2,500 political prisoners rot in Roumanian jails," were among the inscriptions which the communists waved aloft.

No Indication She Saw Them.

The queen, sheltered from a dismal rain by her enclosed car, gave no indication if she was aware of the denunciation, and proceeded to the city hall where she was presented to Mayor Dever and the city council who gave her the keys to the city.

As she left the city hall by one exit, the bedraggled batallion of communists, which had marched in disarray up side streets to the building, stormed another door and carried their banners into the municipal building, only to find that the target of their barbs had gone.

The police beat them back and expelled them from the building, arresting several who resisted.

The royal party and the welcoming committee saw less of the demonstration than spectators who stood in the rain along Michigan avenue to get a fleeting glimpse of the guests.

Has a 27-Room Suite.

Darkness beset the city before Marie's train arrived at 5:30, but the glare of torches lit her path as she left the train. As she followed a military escort through the station she caught a chrysanthemum tossed by a red-haired girl and turned to smile acknowledgment. Countless times she halted to pose for photographers.

Her stay at the city hall occupied less than fifteen minutes, when she was whirled away to the Lake Shore Drive hotel, where the 27 rooms of the top floor are to be her home until next Wednesday.

Within another hour she was dressed for a small dinner given in her honor at the Drake hotel by the welcoming committee, and at 10 o'clock she was escorted to the hotel dining room, where a thousand reception guests greeted her. An hour and a half was allotted to her to meet her welcomers, and it was after midnight when the buffet supper was served and the queen closed a day which began sixteen hours before with the departure from St. Louis.

Radicals Hold Meeting.

The communist demonstration climaxed a rally of the Labor Defense council, which began two hours before the queen's arrival. William F. Dunne, editor of the Daily Worker, was the principal speaker. He reviewed alleged wrongs of the Roumanian government to its subjects, charging that "America is the only country in the world where royalty gets any support."

The workers marched down a wide street toward the station, but when they neared it they ran into a police squad, which made an effort to disperse the ranks. The sticks of several banners were broken in the encounter, but the communists rallied and most of their number grouped at a point of vantage across Michigan avenue from the station.

As soon as the royal party passed they hastened to the city hall. There two largest banners,

GAY CAPITAL CROWD TREKS TO ANNAPOLIS WITH GEORGETOWN

Brilliant Colors in Stands Vie With Cerulean Sky and Natural Setting.

CHANT OF MIDSHIPMEN RINGS AGAINST RIVALS

(From a Staff Correspondent.)

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 13.—The Naval Academy gave a recipe for a perfect football game today. It took 12,000 Georgetown followers from Washington in wintry holiday dress, a blue-uniformed, gold-braided contingent from naval officialdom, about 2,000 white-capped midshipmen, and here and there it got another 10,000 men and women and placed them in a huge saucer, the shape of an oval, and stirred well.

This, capped with a cerulean sky and banked on the one side by stately buildings in stone masonry, green roofed and slate covered, and on the other by the Severn river and weeping willow trees, gave it much of the color that goes with the Army-Navy game.

Secretary of the Navy Wilbur and Assistant Secretary Robinson had planned to be present, but their places were filled by Admiral E. W. Eberle, chief of naval operations, and Mrs. Eberle, and Admiral Shoemaker, chief of naval communications, with a party of friends. They were guests of Rear Admiral L. M. Nulton, superintendent of the Naval Academy.

Garbs of Blue.

But it was approximately 10,000 of the rank and file of Washingtonians who take their Georgetown football almost as religion, who had been planning and scheming for weeks for tickets to the game, who kept the Navy's stands in a delirium and who long after dark still were honking their horns and hoping for the congested roads to clear. They started early and in cars of every conceivable make and age.

Along the road there were remains of what had been cars, put together haphazardly for the occasion and chalk marked with loyalty to Georgetown and the determination to get to Annapolis or die in the attempt. It may be that all who started finally reached here, but there were any number of them who did not arrive in the cars in which they left home.

There were times when those fallen by the wayside reached the status of refugees. Perhaps it was they who straggled in long after the game had begun. But they came, their enthusiasm not lessened by the difficulty of their travel.

Boy Taunts Marines.

Their spirit may be exemplified by the lone boy who stood in the midst of a group of marines—pale blue trousers and olive green overcoat—and taunted them, taunted them until their sullen resentment showed well in their faces. Discipline in the marine corps accounts for that boy being alive tonight. And, compartively, there is not so much discipline in the navy.

There was a contingent of blue jackets in the northeast corner of the field, hunddled together, their hands far down in the pockets of their short, blue overcoats, and their white caps perched recklessly on their heads. There was a Georgetown supporter who derided them. He did it, in fact, until the third quarter, when Navy tied the game.

Then, as if springing into action aboard ship, the blue jackets made for the section of the stand from whence their torment had come. It took a good squad of marines and midshipmen doing police duty to extricate humans from the mass of swinging fists and feet.

The academy's section of the stands was taxed to its capacity. On one of the long sides were unbroken lines of midshipmen in their uniforms of blue and white, topped caps with gold strip in front. Two thousand of them, clapping, yelling, singing and waving their caps in unison—the notes of their Anchors Aweigh" floating out across the field to blend with "Bye-bye Baby," which rolled a melody out of the Georgetown camp.

Color in Stands.

They occupied only a center portion of their side of the field. To the right and left of them were civilians of Navy leanings—women in furs and varihued millinery, elderly men, heavily clothed in wintry sombreness, the monotony broken now and then with naval officers in uniform. Facing this stand at the two extremes of the field were masses of color and enthusiasm transplanted from F street and out Georgetown way.

Three hours after the game Annapolis had not yet rid itself of the influx. Only those who had tickets were permitted to run their cars into the academy grounds. At the end they were routed through the mesh of roadways out into the streets and unbroken streams were poured into the two narrow roads which lead to Washington.

Fatally Stricken Watching Navy Win

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 13.—While the Navy-Georgetown football game was in progress here today, A. L. Hughes, 13 years old, civilian employee at Edgewood arsenal, died of heart disese. He was seated in the stand beside his wife, when he was stricken.

He was hurried to the Naval hospital in an ambulance but died before reaching the institution. Mr. Hughes was a native of Dayton, Ohio. Naval academy authorities will send the body to that city. Besides his wife, he is survived by two children.

Man Faces 6 Charges After Auto Collision

Six charges have been placed by police against Walter H. Williams, colored, 39 years old, 147 T street northwest, who was arrested yesterday following an automobile collision at Second street and Rhode Island avenue northwest. Williams, it is alleged, failed to stop his car when ordered by Patrolman B. R. Campbell after his car struck an automobile operated by Leo Lyman, 19, 145 Carroll street southeast.

In police court Williams was charged with carrying a concealed weapon, reckless driving, leaving after an accident, operating without a permit and illegal transportation and possession of liquor. Williams is said to have leaped from his automobile and run into a nearby vestibule, following the collision. Patrolman Campbell arrested him and recovered a pistol, which the fugitive is said to have dropped behind a radiator.

Two Marines Marry In Double Ceremony

A double wedding, in which both bridegrooms were enlisted men in the marine corps, was held in Rockville, Md., yesterday. Charles H. Baker, 21 years old, corporal, married Miss Lillian May Ball, 19, and John L. Pumphrey, 22 years old, and Miss Ida Mae Sudduth, 18, were the second couple married. Both of the brides lived in Washington.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. B. W. John, pastor of the Methodist church. The couples returned to Washington after the ceremony.

Private Elwood V. Adams, company A, 121st engineers, District national guard, has been honorably discharged to enlist in the navy. Privates Earl H. Athey, Joseph M. Bowman, Fred P. Myers, Britt R. Pugh and Edward Wall have been transferred within the regiment.

Girl, Shot, Recovering; Assailant Dies by Gun

Miss Hazel Lafferty, 20 years old, 1215 Ninth street northwest, who was shot Friday night by Adam Maccarelli, 23, of New York, is recovering at Emergency hospital, according to physicians. Her assailant, who fired a bullet into his head immediately after shooting the young woman, died at the hospital early today.

A rejected plea of Maccarelli, who asked Miss Lafferty to return to New York with him, is said to have led to the tragedy. Police were told the man called at the Lafferty home Friday night and begged the girl to join him. He carried in his pockets a revolver, numerous bullets, $136 and a note explaining he would kill himself for love. Miss Lafferty refused his offer, her mother stated, and Maccarelli then fired at the girl and then shot himself.

5,000 JOIN CITIZEN ASSOCIATIONS FIRST DAY OF CAMPAIGN

COMMISSIONER BELL PRAISES MOVEMENT

Makes for Better Government, He Says; Encouragement From Churches Asked.

Five thousand new members of the various citizens' associations joined yesterday on the first day of the city-wide membership campaign being conducted under the auspices of the Federation of Citizens Associations. This was the official figures given out at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon by Jesse C. Suter, former president of the federation and in charge of the membership drive.

Thomas E. Lodge, assistant United States attorney, and president of the American University Park Citizens association, was the first to turn in his booklet showing ten new members joining the associations. Mr. Lodge is working on the downtown committee soliciting for members. The association that he heads is the most recent new body affiliated with the federation.

James Tanner, register of wills and clerk of the probate court, and Col. Robert L. Longstreet, son of Gen. Longstreet, of the Confederate army, were among the new members who joined citizens' associations yesterday.

Giving his support to the drive, Engineer Commissioner Bell yesterday stated:

"When the United States was formed there came into being a new type of government in which the people are the government and the will of the people is the law. On all of us rests the obligation to perform our duties as part of the government and to give evidence of our will. Citizens' associations furnish the opportunity to join with our neighbors in the study of public problems, and from such study comes the knowledge of public affairs which is the basis of intelligent action and good government.

Churches and motion picture houses will cooperate with the federation in the membership campaign. William L. Darby, executive secretary of the Federation of Churches, yesterday wrote letters to all local pastors urging them to stress the importance of joining citizens' associations in their sermons today. Slides urging citizens to join an association will be shown in the local movie houses all week, starting today.

Edgewood Citizens Hold Parade and Street Dance

A parade and a street dance were held last night by the Edgewood Citizens association to stimulate interest in its membership drive. At a meeting which followed, James G. Yaden, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, talked on the value of organized citizenry and urged all Edgewood citizens to join the association.

The committee in charge of the membership drive is composed of Thomas Tierney, chairman; Frank A. Murphy, vice chairman; G. Killian, M. A. Cook, Joseph Kretz, Arthur L. Wheaton, James Enright and C. B. Duckett. Officers of the association are George R. Marble, president; Harry L. Downey, secretary-treasurer, and Martin Cook, vice president.

ORGANIZED CITIZENSHIP MEMBERSHIP DRIVE

Believing Organized Citizenship beneficial to my neighborhood, my community and the nation, I hereby apply for membership in the citizens' association in whose territory I reside and pay herewith $1.00 on account of dues.

RUBY, LONG PRIZED IN COURT CIRCLES, PRONOUNCED FAKE

"Great Red Gem of Russia" Treasured by Catherine the Great.

FIGURED IN WAR BOOTY AWARDED TO SWEDEN

Stockholm, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—The "Gret Ruby of Russia," pride of crowned heads for centuries, once treasured possession of Catherine the Great, and considered one of the most valuable of the Russian crown jewels, is now declared by a Russian scientist to be merely a large rubellite and far from precious.

The bogus character of this long famed jewel is disclosed by Prof. Gregori Aminoff, head of the mineralogical section of the Swedish Royal museum. His statement is based on a report by Prof. A. Fersman, noted Russian mineralogist, published in the bulletin of the Russian Academy of Science, in which the Russian authority writes about it as follows:

"It was a matter of fact a light red tourmaline from Burma (rubellite) — genuine rubies are always dark red—weighing 250 carats, of irregular shape and representing nothing exceptional either as to size or quality."

Obtained as War Booty.

Thus ends the appeal of one of the most noted pieces of jewelry that have figured in Swedish and Russian history.

Originally the Swedish crown obtained it as war booty at Prague, its earlier history being shrouded in mystery, and Queen Christina, the spendthrift daughter of Gustavus Adolphus once "hocked" it for ready cash at Antwerp, where it was later redeemed by the Swedish government.

It was in the summer of 1777 while visiting Catherine the Great in St. Petersburg (now Leningrad) that the Swedish King, Gustavus III, had it removed illegally from the Swedish collection in order to bestow it on the empress in return for similar favors.

Since then there have been many proposals to have it redeemed once more by the Swedish authorities, but it is still kept in the Russian collection and now the Swedish interest has cooled off.

College Boy With Auto Unusual Insurance Risk

Chicago, Nov. 13 (By A. P.). The college youth and his automobile is regarded by at least one insurance company as an unusual risk and worthy of especial investigation before a casualty policy is written. That is the statement of C. L. Gibbons, manager of the casualty department of the Maryland Casualty Co.

Mr. Gibbons said he understood that while no blanket instructions to refuse insurance to the combination had been issued, many other companies had adopted the rigid investigation policy of the Maryland Co.

CAMERA EYE SENDS COL. MACIA TO CELL WITH R. GARIBALDI

Men, Netted Through French Inspector's Memory, Are Ordered to Prison.

MACHINE GUN AMBUSH LAID FOR CATALANS

Paris Officials Say That Plots Within Plots Caused Them to Act.

Paris, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Plot and counterplot, machine gun ambushes and keen detective work, all combined to make the discovery of the recent Catalan conspiracy a real chapter in a "thriller" that has all the elements of a dime novel and then some.

"It was the extraordinary memory for faces of Inspector Bringer of the French secret service that smashed the plot and resulted today in the formal arrest of Col. Francisco Macia, former Spanish deputy, on charges of storing and distributing arms and explosives, and Ricciotti Garibaldi, grandson of the Italian patriot, for conspiracy.

Bringer accidentally ran across an Italian secret service man in the streets of Nice only a few weeks ago. He had seen him only once, but recognized him and wondered at his unaccounted presence in France. He followed him and stumbled on a strange combination of plots within plots that was about to send the Catalan republican conspirators to a bloody ambush across the Spanish frontier.

French Seize Papers.

The Italian inspector shadowed by Bringer was found to have a false passport. His papers were seized and put the French on the track of what they described as a conspiracy smacking of medieval days. The scheme as unearthed in the beginning looked like a plot in which Italians were to help the Spanish republicans to invade Catalonia. The connection with the Italian police of some of the leaders of the intrigue, however, French police say, led to the revelation that the Italian participation was merely a blind and that Col. Macia was destined to be double-crossed.

An Italian emissary was shadowed, and when he crossed the Pyrenees to give the conspirators away to the Spanish authorities the French police were certain that the Catalan plotters were being led into a trap. Then began a search for the mainsprings of the movement, with the consequent arrest of Garibaldi and search for evidence that large sums of money had come to him from Italian sources.

The opinion expressed in official circles is that France would have been involved in grave unpleasantness with Spain if she had overlooked the organization on her territory of a plot against the safety of that country.

Col. Macia and Garibaldi today were transferred from the police to the judiciary authorities on order of Minister of Defense Louis Barthou. This afternoon they were sent to Sante prison to await further investigation into the conspiracy.

Burns decided to keep it "until after supper." Then he decided to save it until he was older and better able to appreciate it.

The longer he saved it, the more attached to it he became. He wrapped it in cotton, and moistened it now and then to keep it from cracking.

The day he was 77 he decided to smoke it. "I was afraid I might not be here to smoke it next year," he said.

PIRATES KILL GUARD; ROB FRENCH VESSEL

Chinese Take $50,000 Bullion and $20,000 From the Passengers.

Hongkong, Nov. 12 (Delayed) (By A. P.).—Twenty-six pirates boarded the French steamer Hanoi at Kwangchouwan, south of here, shot and killed a guard, ransacked the steamer, robbed the passengers and then abandoned the ship, taking $50,000 worth of bullion, $20,000 in loot from the passengers and a large quantity of guns and ammunition, it was learned here today.

The Hanoi, a vessel of 1,200 tons, plies between Haiphong, French Indo-China, and Hongkong, by way of Pakhoi, southern Kwangtung. The bullion was being shipped from the maritime customs at Pakhoi to a Hongkong bank.

Shanghai, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—A wireless message picked up here reports that bandits opened fire Thursday on an American vessel, a Chinese tug and a junk, at Chenling, on Tung-Ling lake, southwest of Hankow. The pirates demanded ransom, but the vessel was released Thursday night. No details were given.

J. G. CANNON'S BODY IN STATE AT HOME; BURIAL ON TUESDAY

DAWES TO REPRESENT COOLIDGE AT FUNERAL

Danville, Ill., Nov. 13 (By A. P.). Down between the rows of leafless elms which span Vermillion street messengers scurried in the rain today to the home where Joseph Gurney Cannon lies dead, bearing expressions of condolence and sympathy from around the world.

But not in the formal phrases of bereavement could Danville's grief be couched, for the man a nation knew as a ruler in the councils of the great was to his townspeople never more than Uncle Joe, neighbor, benefactor and comrade. For others was the paying of scholarly tributes. Danville's own tokens of sorrow arose from the home memories of a man whose civic spirit and whose benefaction touched the lives of his townsfolk not only collectively but individually.

It was Cannon money that gave Danville electric light and power and that built the city railway. It was Uncle Joe, the representative in Congress from Danville, who brought a soldiers' home to the city and got the appropriation for a Federal building. But more than this, it was Uncle Joe who got positions in Washington for scores of Danville boys, enabling them to work their way through college and law school. And it was Uncle Joe who befriended scores of others and got them started toward substantial careers.

Widows of the civil war and veterans of the world war owed gratitude to Uncle Joe for pensions obtained for them through special bills or personal efforts.

Tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock a long line of those who loved him will begin to file through the broad rooms of the Cannon home past the bier, nor will the line halt until the doors of the home swing shut again at 5 o'clock.

Danville's memory of Uncle Joe is not the memory of a statesman nor a political czar. It is the memory of a man whose fund of stories are traditions in his community. Until the end he loved a funny story and sought to inject one into every situation. In his last conscious hours he enlivened the gravity of the sickroom with anecdotes.

His last words were "have courage." He sensed the gravity of his condition and sought to comfort the daughters who stood beside his bed.

The funeral services at 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon will be as simple as the man they honor. The Rev. T. N. Ewing will officiate at the St. James Methodist church, of which Uncle Joe was a member, and past commanders of the Danville American Legion post will bear the coffin to the grave.

President Coolidge will be represented by Charles G. Dawes, Vice President, who wired the family today that he would attend the services.

Died a "Perfect One."

"Uncle Joe" died the "perfect death," his physician, Dr. C. E. Wilkinson, said today.

"I believe it will go down in history as one of the most unique which ever befell a great statesman. Usually they die suddenly, often comparatively young, through wear and tear. It was not so with Uncle Joe. He had no disease. Briefly, his physical machinery just wore out. He slept away peacefully."

Vice President C. G. Dawes will officially represent President Coolidge at the funeral. A telegram was received from Mr. Dawes today saying he would be present.

Dry Case Verdict Delayed.

Chicago, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—A decision in the prohibition conspiracy trial of Maj. Percy Owen and Lowell B. Mason was delayed further today when Federal Judge George A. Carpenter adjourned court until Monday because he did not want the jury tempted into a hurried decision.

By NORMAN W. BAXTER.

Colleagues of Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri, who are at the same time leaders in the Senate opposition to the seating of Frank L. Smith, of Illinois, and William S. Vare, of Pennsylvania, have asked the Missouri senator to do everything that he can to get the report of his primary and election investigating committee before the Senate at the opening of the coming December session.

There is reason to believe, especially if Senator George W. Norris, of Nebraska, presses his inquiry into the Pennsylvania election, that the committee's work will not be finished by December 6. In that event the opponents of the two senators-elect, whose right to sit is under fire, want a preliminary report covering the primary inquiry bfeore the house.

The reason for this demand for haste revolves around the possibility that the appearance of Smith may come before the opening of the Seventieth Congress in December, 1927. All reports that have reached Washington are to the effect that in the event of the death of Senator William B. McKinley, whose life is now despaired of, Gov. Small of Illinois will designate Smith to fill the unexpired term.

Anomalous Situation Seen.

His arrival as an appointee of the governor will beyond doubt create an anomalous situation, for it is apparent from the public expressions of many senators that the majority of the members who may vote to deprive him of his seat in the Seventieth Congress will not oppose his being sworn in as a member of the Sixty-ninth Congress.

The status of the same man on the two occasions will, these Senators say, be entirely different. The fact that he has been duly designated by the governor removes, they say, any possibility that his right to sit may be challenged. There will be nothing behind the face of that appointment that the Senate can challenge and that the Senate will, therefore, be obliged to accept without question the same man whose qualifications will be challenged a year later.

It is to meet this situation that the more bitter opponents of Smith have brought pressure to bear on Senator Reed for an early report from his committee. They believe that if the Reed report has been filed, even if only so much of it as deals with the primary investigation, it will be possible to make some headway in a protest against Smith's right to his seat.

That this view will be sustained lacks substantiation. The majority of the Senate will hold that the upper branch of Congress is not concerned with the man's character, but with the manner in which his appointment or election to the Senate was made.

The theory advanced will be that the primary and the manner in which Smith obtained campaign contributions from Samuel Insull has no bearing whatever on his appointment by Gov. Small, and that the Senate can do nothing but accept his credentials as they would in the case of any other man designated in a similar fashion.

Aside from the possibility that Smith himself will create the issue, few senators see any chance of action on either of the two cases in the Sixty-ninth Congress. It has been suggested that some form of attack might be made when the credentials of Smith and Vare are presented during the coming session, a step which will be necessary in order for them to qualify for their salaries and office and clerk hire beginning March 4 next.

Must Await Next Congress.

This contingency is, however, remote. The majority of the senators insist that the seats involved will not be vacant in the Sixty-ninth Congress and that it will be impossible to take any action until this formality has been complied with by the passage of time.

Investigation has revealed two precedents as yet not cited which may have much to do with the attack made on Smith and Vare at the time they present themselves to take the oath. The right of Senators James E. Watson, of Indiana, and George H. Moses, of New Hampshire, to take the oath was questioned at the time that they first presented themselves to the Senate on the ground that their appointments by the governor to fill unexpired terms were in conflict with the law relating to the direct election of senators. In each instance the case was passed over and debate followed, and in both cases also the accused man was seated.

BOY SCOUTS LAY WREATH UPON TOMB OF UNKNOWN

1,000 Participate in Annual Pilgrimage in Behalf of National Order.

RITES HELD FOR COMEGYS

Nearly 1,000 Washington Boy Scouts, led by Barry Mohun, District scout commissioner, yesterday made their annual pilgrimage to Arlington National cemetery, and in the name of the Boy Scouts of the nation placed a wreath on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

In addition to the tribute to the Unknown, another service was instituted yesterday in memory of Edward T. Comegys, the only Washington scout to lose his life in the world war. Comegys, while returning from a raid with the Eleventh air squadron over German territory, was shot down by an attacking group of German planes. Scot Wilson Leverton yesterday sounded taps over his Arlington grave, and the scouts stood at attention.

Following exercises at the tomb of the Unknown, Maj. Gen. Fox Conner, deputy chief of staff of the United States army, addressed the scouts, paying tribute to the soldier dead. "We should look backward," he said, "not only in gratitude for the past, but also to get inspiration for the present. Here the ideal of the Unknown Soldier and the ideal of the scout movement are one. He died for his ideal; may you live for yours."

Yesterday's scout pilgrimage followed a precedent observed by Boy Scouts of Washington and nearby Maryland and Virginia on the Saturday nearest Armistice day every year since the body of America's Unknown Soldier was laid to rest in Arlington.

CONGRESS CHANGING VIEWS, ARMY HEARS

Reports That Sentiment Disapproves Lower Appropriations Relieve Anxiety.

Anxiety somewhat was relieved in military service circles last week over reports that considerable sentiment exists in Congress against further curtailment of service appropriations and that thorough investigations will be made of estimates to determine whether they adequately can support the strength of the army deemed essential by President Coolidge and provide a sufficient force for the existing fleet and aircraft carriers.

The navy is expected to start its hearings before the House subcommittee on naval appropriations tomorrow, defending an appropriation of $315,000,000 for the fiscal year 1928, which is believed to be $18,000,000 below what is necessary for the present navy with its aircraft carriers. Under present restrictions, about 80,000 men will be available for present duty and this force will have to furnish 3,600 men for the aircraft carriers, meaning probable placement of five battleships out of commission.

COOLIDGE ADDRESS BRINGS NEW POLICY ERA, DIPLOMATS SAY

VIGOR OF STATEMENTS SHOCKS THOSE ABROAD

President Merely Patient Up to the Point of Action, Advisers Believe.

By ALBERT W. FOX.

President Coolidge's statement on the world court in his Armistice day speech is assuming more and more significance to officials and diplomats here who are studying the reaction at home and abroad with increasing interest. The first impressions gleaned from the speech are giving way to a conviction that the President has done more than put the United States on record in a single matter of international controversy and that he has, in reality, ushered in a new era—the era of Coolidge definiteness—in the foreign policy of the United States.

Instead of the usual diplomatic language and vagueness of expression which characterizes utterances by heads of governments in dealing with matters of prime international import, Mr. Coolidge, it now is emphasized, has struck out straight from the shoulder with definite, clean cut pronouncement which permits no misinterpretation and leaves no doubt whatever as to what the American policy is to be.

And the expressions of incredulity, if not dismay, which are coming in from abroad clearly show no such development was expected. The shock caused by the unmistakable definiteness of the statement has been even more of a surprise, it is hinted, than the position Mr. Coolidge has taken on the world court issue.

Diplomats Seek Explanation.

Does it mean the Coolidge administration is going to deal with debts and Mexico—in the same way, diplomats are asking? Does it mean Mr. Coolidge will follow the course of indecision and patience only up to a certain point and then abandon the ambiguous and soft-sounding diplomatic phrases in dealing with other important foreign matters? If so, what warning are the foreign powers to have of the fact that there is now to be a change from indefiniteness to definiteness in the foreign policy of the United States?

No foreign premier, it is explained, has had reason to believe the United States government even had approached the point where its patience might be nearly exhausted in dealing with any important foreign problem, either debts or the world court issue. Respecting the latter question, there has been ample evidence of divided opinion in America, and the government seemingly has permitted this opinion to crystallize.

Nothing has been done, diplomats point out, to indicate that President Coolidge wished to discourage foreign hope that America would join the world court on terms satisfactory to court members. With respect to foreign debt settlements, it is likewise declared by diplomats that the Coolidge administration has not definitely closed the door to further negotiations, although it has supported the efforts of the debt funding commission to reach mutually satisfactory settlements. And in Mexican negotiations, the patience of the United States government has kept alive the belief that no definite American policy had been formed, beyond the policy of letting matters work themselves out, it is explained here.

Upsets Past Calculations.

Nothing has been more firmly established in the minds of some of the diplomats than the conviction that the United States government had no definite policy with respect to major foreign problems and that Mr. Coolidge found it expedient—and rightly so—to refrain from committing the government to a definite stand. And now the Armistice day speech, with its deadly definiteness as to one of those major issues, upsets all past calculations, it is admitted.

And in this instance the President has the full support of the Senate, his partner in the responsibilities that go with America's foreign policy. It is noted Mr. Coolidge does not shift the burden of responsibility to the Senate or simply indorse the Senate's stand as a matter of necessity or expediency. He assumes full measure of responsibility himself, and the added fact that the Senate takes the same position shows, after all, the government of the United States can enunciate to the world a foreign policy which places America as firmly as the Rock of Gibraltar on the uncharted sea of world diplomacy as it is being shaped and reshaped at the present time.

Responding to puzzled inquiries as to the apparent change in Mr. Coolidge's handling of foreign affairs, several of the President's advisers simply say foreign statesmen and others have overlooked the significance of certain events in Mr. Coolidge's career. In the Boston police strike, for example, there was indecision and patience shown by Mr. Coolidge up to a certain point. But when the time for action came he acted with a decision and definiteness that later made him President of the United States.

Compared to First Message.

"There is a suggestion of the Boston police strike message in the President's definite statement on the world court," one of the President's closest advisers remarked yesterday in predicting that foreign nations soon would realize there is a dividing line between patience and action in dealing with problems which can not remain forever without a solution.

In some quarters the President's statement respecting the court is compared to his first message to the Congress, when his pronouncements were direct and incapable of misinterpretation. The question of whether the members of the court now accept the Coolidge pronouncement as final and proceed to reconsider plans for bringing America in is a matter about which little can be said authoritatively.

As the Geneva conference agreed upon conditions which Mr. Coolidge will not accept, the assumption is that nothing further can be done abroad at present. What the future has in store is problematical, but it now is conceded that the one fixed factor in the situation is the stand which President Coolige has announced for the government of the United States.

MILITARY ABBREVIATIONS TO BE PUT IN REGULATIONS

A. W. O. L., M. P. and the Like Are Being Mobilized for Army Use.

"A" STANDS FOR AIRPLANE

Many military abbreviations such as "A. W. O. L." for absent without leave, "M. P.," military police, and "G. H. Q.," general headquarters, are to be mobilized into an army regulation authorizing a list of military abbreviations for preparations of military orders, field orders and messages being excepted.

Some of the new abbreviations sound like radio station call letters and are as follows:

"Bln," balloon; "B. H. Q.," brigade headquarters. The initials, "B. O. W. D.," mean no less important a personage than the budget officer of the War Department.

"Cas.," casual; "C. D. D.," certificate of disability for discharge, instead of "S. C. D.," "C. O.," remains for commanding officer and the army cook will be designated "Ck.," although ancient unofficial references will no doubt stand through the ages.

Division headquarters becomes "DHQ." and "ER" and "EG," expert rifleman and expert gunner. "FSR" is still field service regulations, and "Fur" still a furlough.

A gun may be abbreviated "gn." "HE" is still high explosive, and "Ind" will continue to mean indorsement.

Others are "JAG," judge advocate general; "Lv," leave of absence; "LD," line of duty; "MG," machine gun; "MCM," manual of courts-martial; "NBPRP," national board for promotion of rifle practice.

To avoid confusion of the officer of the day with the well-known army cloth color the former will be abbreviated "OD" in capital letters, the latter in small ones.

"PC," meaning post of command in world war trench fighting becomes the abbreviation for the Panama canal. "QM" is quartermaster, and "rct" recruit. The longest abbreviation will be "SASRD Instl," subaqueous sound ranging development installation.

"TM" means trench mortar; "tel," telegraph or telephone; "USA," United States of America; "VG," very good; "vol," volunteer; "WO," warrant officer; "WD," War Department; "Z of I," zone of interior.

Man Begins Schooling On Reaching Age of 70

Council Bluffs, Iowa, Nov. 13. (By A. P.)—At the age of 70, when most men have stopped activity, Adam Y. Berry, retired farmer of Silver Creek, Iowa, is realizing a dream of years. Through dint of effort, this aged native of the Virginia backwoods is getting "larnin," determined that he will not die illiterate.

Several months ago, Berry sought out a business college where he explained that he has always desired to read and write but that he had been too busy and really never had the opportunity. He was directed to Ralph Letts, school manager, who finally pursuaded Mrs. Letts to tutor the man of three score years and ten.

After a hard and often discouraging effort, he is now able to write letters, add and speak fairly correctly.

BERENGER'S REQUEST TO RESIGN IS REFUSED

Briand Says Envoy to U. S. Needed in That Post by Paris Government.

Paris, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—M. Berenger, French Ambassador to the United States, offered his resignation to Foreign Minister Briand a few days ago, it is learned, on the plea that his work in connection with the debt funding settlement was finished.

M. Briand refused to accept the resignation, and M. Berenger consequently will soon return to Washington.

M. Berenger's appointment runs for six months at a time, in order that he may retain his seat in the senate. His third six-month term will begin next month.

When the Ambassador visited Foreign Minister Briand a few days ago and expressed his wish to resign, M. Briand threw up his hands and exclaimed: "Impossible!" The government, he said, could not spare M. Berenger yet, and he must return to Washington. M. Berenger finally consented.

GERMAN ENVOY ASSAILED FOR FLYING FLAG NOV. 11

Berlin Nationalists Ask in Reichstag if Recall Has Been Ordered.

OFFICIALS DEFEND HIM

Berlin, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Nationalists are bent on obtaining from the government an explanation of why Baron Ago von Maltzan, German Ambassador to the United States, hoisted the German flag on the embassy at Washington on Armistice day. They have filed an interpellation in the reichstag demanding to know what steps the government is taking to call to account the person responsible for this, which they declare "is incompatible with the self-respect of the German people." They ask also what measures are being taken to prevent "the repetition of similar humilating occurrences."

Attacking the German Ambassador, the ultra-nationalist newspaper Lokal Anzeiger, declares "this must be branded as the most disgraceful act of self-degradation of which a German diplomatic mission abroad can be found guilty."

On the other hand the German foreign office approves the Ambassador's action, on the ground that Armistice day is a nationwide holiday in the United States, and that it would have been highly improper for Germany to fail to follow the request of the dean of the diplomatic corps to display the flags.

(By the Associated Press.)

Criticism of Ambassador von Maltzan because he displayed the German flag on the embassy building on Armistice day is viewed by the embassy here as being wholly inspired by nationalistic politics in Germany.

"The display of the German flag on this occasion was purely in keeping with the resolution adopted by the Senate on June 4 last, which called for a general observance of Armistice day and the display of flags on all government buildings," said a high embassy official. "As it is customary for foreign missions to join in official observances when proclaimed by the President, the hoisting of the German flag on this occasion was wholly in keeping with traditional diplomatic usage."

The Austrian legation also displayed its national flag last Thursday, along with the other diplomatic missions in Washington.

Draft of Capital Would Bring Paralysis to Country, Missourian Holds.

MILITARY AUTOCRACY PICTURED IN COMMAND

Surprised, He Says, to Hear President Indorse Such a Monstrous Fallacy.

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—The recommendation of President Coolidge at Kansas City, Thursday for "all inclusive" conscription in time of war was characterized in a formal statement tonight by Senator James A. Reed (Dem.), Missouri, as "the most astonishing statement which ever fell from the lips of an American President."

Mr. Coolidge declared that in future wars there should be a general conscription of all people and all property, that the conscription "should all be inclusive," Senator Reed said.

"The phrase he employed was the 'conscription of capital' but capital embraces every form of property.

"I heard this phrase, the 'conscription of capital' first employed by that class of pacifists who insisted that the world war was deliberately brought on by capitalists who desired to enrich themselves out of the struggle, and that if capital should be conscripted, wicked capitalists would no longer promote wars.

"Of course, the idea that the recent war was the result of a conspiracy of capitalists is an absurdity which reasonable men do not for a moment entertain, but I never expected to hear the President of the United States publicly declare an acceptance of this monstrous fallacy and yet more monstrous doctrine of general conscription."

The one result of such a move, Senator Reed said, would be the abrogation of the right to life, liberty and property, guaranteed by the Constitution.

Capital Would Be Hidden.

"At the approach of war every dollar would go into hiding, business would be paralyzed, the wheels of industry woud cease to move, the entire machinery of trade and commerce would stop.

"No man would dare trade, barter, buy or sell; no one would venture to make an investment. Universal chaos would immediately result. Accordingly, at the very time when the government would most need to stimulate the activities of the people and to promote the highest commercial activities, everything would come suddenly to a standstill. The result would be worse than the loss of a hundred battles."

Under such a law, Reed said, a military autocracy would be erected "on the ruins of our civilization, the press would be throttled, the right of peaceable assemblage denied, women would be subject to command by military autocrats and the President could exercise powers greater than ever dreamed by a Roman dictator or an Oriental despot.

"The astounding thing is that a President should so far forget the principles underlying our civilization and our form of government.

"A draft of any kind, particularly for foreign wars, is obnoxious to the spirit of our civilization, but that is a very different thing from the proposal to conscript the women as well as the men, the old as well as the young, property as well as soldiers."

Speeech Cause of Shame, Foreign Policy Body Holds

New York, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Expressions of criticism of "a certain great Armistice day speech has made us all ashamed," and praise for the work of individual Americans aiding the League of Nations, formed the high points in speeches today at the first of the season's luncheon discussions of the Foreign Policy association.

The criticism of the Armistice day speech, apparently directed at President Coolidge's statements on the United States stand toward the League of Nations and the world court, was made by James C. McDonald, chairman of the association, who presided.

"In view of a certain great Armistice day speech, which has made us all ashamed and somewhat humiliated," he said, "I am glad to hear we have individual Americans aiding in the work of the league."

The chairman's comment followed upon his reference to the speech of Prof. Gilbert Murray, regent professor of Greek at Oxford university, who, in outlining the progress of the league, declared that "no one, not even Mussolini, has actually spoken against or disobeyed it."

The league, he said, has progressed to a degree beyond expectations. Its present difficulties he believed to be that the parliamentary government on which it is based is threatened by dictators wishing to sweep away parliamentary government, and antagonism of Russian revolutionists who regard the league as their chief enemy and buttress to the existing order.

Prof. Murray said the league, now that Germany had entered, must next try to bring in Russia.

Guard for Gov. Fuller Likely on Paris Visit

(By Associated Press.)

The proposed visit to Paris of Gov. Fuller, of Massachusetts, has been called to the attention of the American embassy there by the State Department, and it is expected the Paris police department will take care to guard the governor from any manifestations which might occur as an aftermath to the Sacco Vanzetti case.

Sacco and Vanzetti were convicted of murder in Massachusetts, and communists in various countries have held demonstrations in their behalf.

PHILIPPINE LEADERS ORGANIZE TO REGAIN BOARD OF CONTROL

ROXAS AND QUEON FILE LETTER OF PROTEST

Question Governor's Authority to Issue Order; Judge Proposes Plan.

Manila, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—The opposition to Governor General Wood began organizing today to fight for the return to power of the insular board of control, which the general abolished recently by an executive order. A conference of members of the legislature now in Manila resulted in the appointment of a committee of three to study various proposals for testing the executive order and to report to the full membership of the legislature next Wednesday the line of action to be pursued.

F. C. Fisher, justice of the Philippine supreme court, today declared he believed the order should be submitted to the test of judicial inquiry. Manuel Quezon, president of the senate, and Speaker Roxas, of the house of representatives, addressed a joint letter to the governor general protesting against the order.

Dissent Is Announced.

Gen. Wood issued the order after having received opinions from the Attorney General of the United States and the judge advocate general of the army holding that the insular law under which the board was created was not legally sound. The board controlled all government-owned corporations in the island and was composed of the president of the senate, the speaker of the house and the governor general. Now the governor general alone performs its duties. The Quezon-Roxas letter, which questioned Wood's authority to annul the legis- act, says in part:

"It is to be regretted that despite the fact that the opinions of the judge advocate general and the Attorney General of the United States were in your hands November 7, two days prior to adjournment of the legislature, you have found it convenient to delay their transmittal to us and withhold publication of your executive order until November 10. This fact deprived the legislature of the opportunity to consider the matter.

"Our duty constrains us to inform you that we dissent from and protest against the action taken by you. The board of control has been created by and its legal existence recognized by numerous acts of the legislature. We are at loss to understand how by mere executive order it can be abolished.

"It is a well established principle of constitutional government * * * that determination of the constitutionality of law falls exclusively within the province of the judicial department."

Judge Fisher's Plea.

Judge Fisher said:

"I am of the opinion that the decision of the Attorney General of the United States concerning the board of control is correct, but I believe it should be submitted to the test of judicial inquiry.

"The best way to test the validity of the ruling would be to wait until the governor general, exercising the voting power of the insular government, elects one or more directors of the Phillippine National Bank to other government controlled corporations. The other two members of the board of control, constituting a majority, could then elect some other person to the same office. The person elected by the governor general would no doubt obtain possession of the office. The person elected by the other members could then bring action against the de facto director and test his title.

"This will involve determination of the legality or illegality of the acts of the Philippine legislature whereby it was intended to create a board of control."

Mary Garden Through With Managing Opera

Chicago, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Mary Garden has no intention of managing another opera.

"Once is enough," she declared today, when asked concerning a report that she would tour the country with her own company in 1927 and sing the leading role in "Resurrection." She said she would stay with the Chicago Opera company until April 1, singing "Resurrection" on a tour of fourteen cities, after the Chicago season closes.

Mary was the first woman opera director when she had charge of the Chicago Opera company during the 1921-1922 season, which is remembered chiefly for its tempestuousness.

Kansas City, Nov. 13 (By A. P.). A posted notice said the directors had ordered the institution placed in the hands of the State finance department. The Terminal Trust Co. had total assets of $617,788.33. The statement of July 25 last showed it had deposits of $540,783.64.

PRESIDENT GREETS J. O. U. A. M. DELEGATES

Fred Miller, Post Staff Photographer.

J. O. U. A. M. PLANS LARGER MEMBERSHIP

National Council Has Dinner in Annual Sessions in Washington.

A program for increased membership was discussed last night by 75 delegates to the national council of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics at a dinner at Harvey's. The dinner concluded a busy day, marked by a visit to Mount Vernon, where a wreath was placed on the tomb of George Washington. The council of the order is an Armistice day observance and is held each year here near Armistice day.

This morning the delegates will visit Arlington cemetery, where a wreath will be placed on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier, this exercise concluding the program of the three-day session.

The delegates visited several other places of interest yesterday. Headquarters are at the Congress Hall hotel. Thomas H. Walters, of Philadelphia, national councilor, presided at the dinner last night.

Betrothal of Martha Is Denied in Norway

Oslo, Norway, Nov. 13 (By A. P.). Highest court sources today denied any knowledge of the reported betrothal of Crown Prince Olav of Norway to Princess Martha, sister of Princess Astrid, who recently married Crown Prince Leopold of Belgium.

Court circles express pity for Prince Olav because he is always being annoyed with rumors of his engagement to one princess or another. The leading newspapers here refrain from mentioning the rumor, which had its origin in Stockholm.

Turkish and Soviet Ministers in Parley

Odessa, Ukraine, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Foreign Ministers Tchitcherin, of Russia, and Tewfik Rushdi Bey, of Turkey, meeting for their much-discussed conferences, had a private conversation lasting three hours today.

Afterward it was stated that they went over all the questions of international interest to their two countries. The "highest satisfaction" was expressed that their "long-established common views remained unchanged."

Nude Figure on Statue Censored for Theater

Portland, Oreg., Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—The motion-picture censorship board of Portland ruled today that a nude figure, said to be copied from a statue in the cathedral of Leon in Spain, will have to be clothed with a slip of paper when a program bearing the picture on the outside cover is used at the opening of a new Pantages theater here.

The theater management then proposed to cover it with a slip of paper carrying two printed statements. The board permitted one of these statements to remain, reading: "An exact duplicate of this program cover was used for the dedication of the new Pantages theater, San Francisco."

The other statement was ruled off. It would have read: "By order of the Portland board of motion-picture censors the beautiful and historic statue depicted on this cover page has been condemned."

PICTURES OF ACTOR HELD UP FOR TARIFF

Canadian Admirers of Ben Lyon Wait; He Refuses to Pay.

New York, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—While Canadian admirers of Ben Lyon, the screen actor, await his photographs, customs officials are refusing to release the pictures until duty and sales tax payments are forthcoming.

Ben has protested against paying the amount assessed against him, particularly when he is complying with the requests of movie fans gratis.

The photographs, of which 32 were held at Montreal, are appraised by Canadian customs officials at 25 cents each. Ad valorem tariff of 22½ per cent and sales tax of 5 per cent was assessed against them—a total of $2.15. Ben wrote the officials that the pictures cost 6½ cents each, or about the same as the tariff and tax, in lots of 10,000.

Spencer, Iowa, Bank Closed.

Spencer, Iowa, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—The First National Bank of Spencer was closed after examination by a bank examiner. The bank of Everly, owned by C. P. Buckey, president of the First National Bank of Spencer, was also closed.

EJECTED FROM DANCE, KILLS MAN AND GIRL

Texan Slays Constable; Shot Fired in Struggle Hits Woman in Head.

Big Lake, Tex., Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Billie Coats, 34, a machinist, shortly before midnight last night, invading the ballroom in the Santa Rita hotel at Best, Tex., from which he had been ejected earlier, shot and killed Constable George Hayes, 45. As he struggled with C. A. Jones, 35, who had come to the aid of the officer, Coats' revolver was discharged and Miss Alta Bean, 19, fell dead on the dance floor, a bullet in her temple. Jones was wounded in the arm in the struggle.

Coats found an open path through the huddled, panic-stricken dancers and escaped through the lobby of the hotel.

Scores of armed men were searching for him throughout the Reagan county oil fields today.

MUSSOLINI APPEARS MORE FREQUENTLY TO DEFY ASSASSINS

"Live Dangerously," He Tells People of Italy, Keeping to Own Doctrine.

OFTEN OFFERS HIMSELF IN PUBLIC AS A TARGET

Most Stringent Scrutiny of Crowds, However, Always Is Maintained.

Rome, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Premier Mussolini, who preaches the doctrine, "Live dangerously," is living up to it by mapping out a program for the future which will carry him more than ever before the public despite pleas that he protect himself from further attempts at assassination by secluding himself.

Protection by keeping out of the public eye, the Duce feels, according to those close to him, would be treason to the Italian people, who see in him a symbol of the natoin's spirit of indomitable fearlessness. Keeping in the limelight may be an optional privilege for the ordinary mortal, but it is an obligation and a duty for a generalissimo who preaches the doctrine, "Live dangerously." Risk should not be the spice but the staff of life for "a weak nation which dares hope to be strong."

Practicing what he preaches, the premier, since the recent attack upon him at Bologna, has shown himself in public at every opportunity. He has walked through the streets and driven daily in his limousine from his home through the crowded center of Rome, has reviewed troops and fascist militia, has shown himself on the famous balcony of the Chigi palace, has presided at a public session of the chamber of deputies and in a dozen other ways has offered an easy target for bullet or bomb.

"Nothing Can Harm Me."

And now he has mapped out a program for the future which entails more rather than fewer direct contacts with the people.

"I am confident," he repeated on several occasions this week, "that nothing and nobody can harm me until my task is completed."

Although refusing to shut himself off from the people, the premier has consented to other means of protection from would-be assassins. By means of the new law for the defense of the regime every man, woman and child suspected even remotely of opposition to the regime is being closely watched on every occasion when the premier is within the range of danger. The throngs are literally honeycombed with police agents, soldiers and militiamen, while the most rigid cordons prevent any one from coming near him.

Regulations governing entrance to the chamber of deputies and the Chigi palace, whenever he is present, have been stiffened. When the premier is in the streets no one, carrying a package of any description or who is acting suspiciously, is allowed within several hundred yards.

This compromise arrangement of still exposing himself but protecting himself is explained as the result of the necessity of steering a middle course. So much of a barometer for the regime is he that his personal appearance before the people is considered essential.

When other fascist leaders speak, the crowds scream: "Il Duce, Il Duce, we want to hear the voice of Il Duce." Sometimes, even when he commands silence, shrill voices continue to cry "Our Duce."

Dolly Sisters Give Verdict to Charity

Paris, Nov. 13 (By A. P.). French theatrical charities are to be made richer by some $18,000 by the Dolly sisters.

Yansci and Roszika have announced that they will turn over to the charities the amount of 550,000 francs granted them in a civil court action yesterday in a suit against the Moulin Rouge theater, which they claimed wounded their artistic sensibilities by featuring the French dancer, Missinguette, and giving her more money and just as much publicity as they received when their contract provided that the sisters should be the big stars of the show in 1924.

Firestone Price Cut On Tires to Be Met

Akron, Ohio, Nov. 13 (By A. P.). Akron tire companies generally prepared to meet the price cut of approximately 15 per cent, effective next Monday, announced in San Francisco last night by H. S. Firestone, president of the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. Few official statements were made but the understanding was that "all manufacturers will make the same cuts."

The only apparent reason for a reduction at this time is the desire of the manufacturers to reduce their surplus stocks.

WILD COMMUNIST MOBS SPREAD DEATH IN JAVA

Numerous Lives Are Lost; Unknown Number Hurt in Disturbances.

USE ARMS AND TORCHES

London, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Communistic revolts of a militant type have broken out in various places in West Java. Dispatches from Batavia today reported serious disturbances, with the loss of numerous lives and an unknown number injured.

Throughout the night mobs ran wild with firearms and torches. At West Bantam the district chief was killed, together with several natives, and his wife and child wounded. The district chiefs at Tjenings and Laboens were attacked. The former was killed as well as the police guard which tried to protect him, while the Laboens chief, though wounded, managed to escape.

In Batavia a prison was attacked by communists, four of whom were wounded. The others fled and made a stand in a telephone station, but were dispersed by rifle volleys.

Much property was damaged. Railway lines were torn up and telephone and telegraph communications cut. After a time the natives joined forces with the authorities for the suppression of the disorders, and today the governor general of Java reported to The Hague that no further anxiety need be entertained.

Even if immediate danger is past, the clearly organized nature of the rising causes apprehension that this may be another definite instance of communist activity in the Far East. Those familiar with Dutch colonial affairs assert that the Dutch authorities have long been fully aware of the communist agitation in the East Indian archipelago. By deporting subversive elements and forbidding communist gatherings they succeeded in a measure in suppressing manifestations and disloyalty to the crown.

5 YOUNG TEXANS HELD AFTER TRIPLE MURDER

2 VICTIMS DIED BY FIRE

Houston, Tex., Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Five young white men, alleged to be the night raiders who shot and killed three negroes in Fort Bend county last Wednesday night, faced murder charges today.

The five in jail are H. B. Crowder, jr., John Crowder, "Buster" Roberts and Joe Rose, of Katy, and W. H. Holden, of Houston. Roberts was arrested and taken to jail by his father, a deputy sheriff.

The prisoners were held in connection with the deaths of Robert Brown, Sally Brown and Scott Evans. H. B. Crowder, jr., is charged in one complaint with burning the negro woman to death.

Officers advanced the theory that the triple killing grew out of the death of Wallace Crowder, a brother of H. B. Crowder, jr. He was killed a week ago by Tanner Ivans, negro tenant farmer, following an argument which began at a ranch house dance.

A Timely Reminder of Hamilton Watch Value

Emphasizing

— the unexampled accuracy and excellence of craftsmanship and design of the HAMILTON watch;
— the exceptional range of selection afforded by the HARRIS presentation of scores of new models;
— the appropriateness of the HAMILTON Watch as one of the finest of Christmas gifts available, and — the considerate courtesy of the HARRIS establishment in arranging payment terms to fit each purchaser's convenience.

Every Hamilton watch lives up to its long-won reputation as "the watch of railroad accuracy." . . . Every Hamilton reflects—in true handsomeness—the genius of artistic design and the skill of faultless manufacture . . . Pride of watch possession reaches its topmost height when you carry a Hamilton.

All the new models, in Hamiltons, are shown in the Harris pre-holiday display . . . Cases of gold, white gold and platinum . . . Models of as varied designs as are men's diversities of preference . . . Attractive thin models among them that typify ultra-refinement of design . . . Range of prices to fit convenience and means of all degrees.

Of a man's personal possessions his watch is invariably the most intimately and most highly prized . . . Let it be a Hamilton—given at Christmas time—and sentiment cannot suggest a more acceptable gift . . . But make selection early . . . Leisurely selection—ahead of the crowds always thronging the store as the holidays near—will give you the greater range of choice.

If we may facilitate your convenience, by means of credit courtesies, that is our pleasure . . . On payment of a small deposit, we reserve for you any Hamilton Watch you may now select . . . Or, should you so desire, we will make available the privileges of a divided-payment account.

PUBLIC RECREATION GROUNDS SHOW GAIN IN POPULAR FAVOR

One Out of Five of Capital Residents Participates Actively in Play.

TFO IN EVERY FIVE VIEW GAMES AS SPECTATORS

Office of Buildings and Parks Reports Large Increase in Use of Facilities.

One out of veery five persons in Washington play some outdoor game, and two out of every five watch them. This is estimated from figures of the bureau of recreation, office of public buildings and public parks, which furnishes play for people from under 6 to over 60 years of age.

From a standpoint of numbers, growth in participation in open-air games on the part of the people of the District has grown to a figure over half of its population and the number of spectators exceeds its population, many people being "fans" for several kinds of sports.

Participation in healthful games in the District runs from 106 playing the gentle golf croquet to 284,680 playing the more strenuous golf. The number of people who watch play ranges from 520 watching golf croquet games, to 577,980 "rooters" at the baseball games played on park diamonds.

Golf is the most popular sport from a point of playing, and baseball from an attendance viewpoint, is the national game here as well as in the rest of the country, but a growth of interest is shown in 23 of 32 games played in Washington during the past eleven years which the office of public buildings and public parks of the National Capital, or its predecessor, the office of public buildings and public grounds, has provided for people of the city.

Outdoor sports, band concerts, public amusements and recreational activities were first made possible for Washington in an official way August 1, 1914. The first appropriation provided for this purpose was contained in the sundry civil appropriation act, approved that date, which gave $10,000 for placing and maintaining special portions of the parks in condition for outdoor sports.

Since that time there has been appropriated yearly amounts varying from $10,000 to $20,000 to care for this work, and in addition, there have been sums provided for special recreation, such as bathing and recreational development in Anacostia park. Previous to the passage of the act in 1914, band concerts and a few recreation fields were paid for out of the maintenance of various parks and reservations in which they were held or located.

At the time of the passage of the first appropriation act there were located under the direction of the above-mentioned offices, seven baseball diamonds, three tennis courts and a three-hole golf course.

These recreational facilities have been extended from year to year until at the time of the latest report there were 2 archery courts, 2 athletic fields, 22 baseball diamonds, a cricket field, 12 croquet courts, 3 field hockey grounds, 10 football fields, an 18-hole and four 9-hole golf courses, a golf-croquet court, 21 horse hurdles and 55 miles of bridle paths, a hurling field and 2 lacrosse fields.

Two Fields for Polo.

Also 18 picnic groves, 2 polo fields, 8 quoit courts, 2 riding fields, a roque court, 11 sandboxes for children, a schlagball court, soccer field, 2 speedball courts, a Sylvan theater, 64 tennis courts.

In addition to these, many miscellaneous activities can be held in the parks, such as band concerts, bicycling, athletic meets, canoeing and boating, fly casting, angling, wading, cross country racing, miniature yacht and motor boat racing, horse shows, kite flying, drills, sleighing, skating, and others.

As an example of the response which the effort of the once of public buildings and public parks to give people of the District healthful play met with, records of the office show a marked increase in 23 of the 32 sports arranged, both from standpoints of players and spectators. Inclement seasons were responsible for the only decreases.

Marked increase is shown in riding, golfing, tennis and baseball play. Horseback riding and hurdling have grown from 960 participants in 1914 to 17,770 during the last sport calendar year. Lieut. Col. U. S. Grant 3d, director of the office of public buildings and public parks, is a devotee of this sport.

The growth of golfing has been phenomenal, office records showing that where 100 people played on public links in 1914, 28,680 played during the last calendar year covered. The number of amateur baseball players on municipal diamonds has increased from 16,920 to 108,386 during the eleven-year period. The number of spectators at these games has grown from 24,500 to 577,980 during the same length of time.

The number of spectators of public sports has increased steadily, the exciting polo drawing an attendance of 86,550 during the last year. Attendance at band concerts has increased from 80,660 to 147,573. Where 360 persons were picnickers in public parks in 1914, 96,632 held picnics in them last year.

Figures of the office's latest annual report on active participation in games and those watching them are the following, the number of players being given first, the number of spectators, second:

Sleighing, 7,500; yachting and motor boating, 508, 5,500; marathon racing, 176, 4,900; fishing, 7,700; field meets, 1,544, 9,300; Easter egg rolling, 12,500; community singing, 2,600; Christmas tree celebrations, 3,200; bicycle racing, 242, 5,050; volley ball, 2,940, 7,400; tennis, 163,842.

Many Pitch Horse Shoes.

Speed ball, 330, 700; soccer, 3,190, 53,850; schlagball, 114, 560; sand box play for children, 19,400; quoits, 2,990, 4,980; polo, 696, 86,550; picnicking, 96,532; lacrosse, 508, 1,900; skating, 28,725, 37,000; hurling, 3,179, 16,800; hurdling and riding, 17,770; golf croquet, 106, 520; golf, 284,680; football, 24,616, 156,670; croquet, 9,030, 14,000.

Hockey, 3,236, 22,800; cricket, 592, 7,460; boating, 836; baseball, 108,386, 577,980; band concerts, spectators, 147,573; athletic events, 5,692, 15,180; archery, 381, 4,050. Horse shoe pitching is as popular here now as elsewhere, but statistics on this recreation are not listed.

The development of the Anacostia parking project offers broad possibilities for public play. In Anacostia park there are facilities for baseball, tennis, football, track and field events, cricket, hockey, a bowling green, roque, play, parade and picnic grounds.

Location of Facilities.

A list of parks showing location of play facilities, included in the report follows: Chevy Chase circle area, croquet; East Potomac park, golf, picnics, tea house and tourist camp; Garfield park, tennis; the grounds south of White House, baseball, croquet, hockey, tennis, volley ball; Henry park, quoits, tennis; Meridian Hill park, bowling green, croquet, quoits.

Montrose park, croquet, picnics, quoits; Monument grounds, archery, athletics, baseball, basketball, football, soccer, speed ball; Sylvan theater, tennis; Rock Creek park, archery practice, athletics, baseball, croquet, hockey, football, golf, hurdles, skating, lacrosse practice, picnics, riding, tea house, tennis, volley ball; Rock Creek parkway, riding; Seaton park, baseball, football, roque; Smithsonian grounds, archery, croquet, golf-croquet, medicine ball, pushball, schlagball; West Potomac park, baseball, boating, cricket, croquet, football, golf, practice polo driving, hurdles, hurling, skating, lacrosse, polo and tennis.

Leiter Cook Asks Citizenship.

Miss Annie McIntosh Fraser, Scotch cook, who presides over the kitchen at the home of Mrs. Joseph Leiter, 1500 New Hampshire avenue northwest, applied to the District Supreme court yesterday for final citizenship papers. She came to this country in 1910 and applied for her first papers in December, 1923.

RUDOLPH'S PUBLIC WORK IS PRAISED AT LUNCHEON

BELL STRIKES KEYNOTE

High tribute to his public service and sharp rebuke for his critics were among the things heard yesterday by Cuno H. Rudolph, retiring chairman of the District board of Commissioners, at a farewell luncheon in the Wardman Park hotel, given in his honor by several hundred officials and employes of the District building.

Lieut. Col. Franklin Bell, engineer commissioner, struck the keynote of the occasion in a brief address in which he said:

"At the end of nearly four years of service with Mr. Rudolph on the board of commissioners, I can say that in all that time he has done nothing that has not been marked by the highest integrity."

Commissioner Rudolph responded with an expression of the difficulty with which he parted from his associates in the municipal building, and said there was no nobler cause for which to labor than advancement of the interests of the National Capital.

The commissioner was presented with a leather-bound, hand-engrossed tribute from his subordinates, bearing the signatures of more than 500 District workers. Assessor William H. Richards was toastmaster.

PARK SERVICE FIELD MEN HERE THIS WEEK

Entertainment Is Planned for Representatives Who Will Attend Conference.

Field representatives of the National Park service will hold a conference at the Interior Department building this week, which will be attended by superintendents of national parks and field supervisory officials of the bureau for the purpose of discussing fiscal, traffic, engineering, personnel and general administrative problems of the service.

Stephen T. Mather, director of the service; Arno B. Cammerer, assistant director; A. E. Demaray, assistant in operations and public relations, and H. M. Albright, assistant field director, are among the presiding officers. Secretary Work will welcome the visitors. They will make a horseback tour of Rock Creek park and the Zoological gardens Thursday, will be entertained at dinner by Director and Mrs. Mather at the Willard Friday, and will be given a reception by Mary Roberts Rinehart, at her home, 2419 Massachusetts avenue, Wednesday afternoon.

Countess to Present Claim.

Countess de Pimodan, of Paris, France, will present her claim against the alien property custodian for $20,000 of bonds to the equity court tomorrow for settlement. The bonds, issued by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Co., were purchased for the countess by the Hanover National Bank of New York in 1911 at the request of the Disconto Bank of Berlin, it is alleged.

Rule Will Contend Mishap in Shooting

Richard Henry Rule, 22 years old, Washington, who was indicted in Rockville Friday for first degree murder in connection with the fatal shooting Halloween night of William J. Barbee, jr., 19 years old, also of Washington, will contend that the shooting was accidental when he is brought to trial Thursday in the Rockville criminal court, his attorney, Thomas L. Dawson, announced yesterday.

The shooting occurred at the Blue Ridge Pleasure club, on Sligo road, near Burnt Mills. According to Attorney Dawson Rule drew the gun intending to fire it in the air, the weapon accidentally discharging as he was about to raise it. The revolver, Dawson said, contained but one cartridge at the time, the others having been discharged the afternoon before in shooting at targets. No attempt will be made to have Rule released on bail, he said.

Rock Creek Rezoning Opposed by Women

Opposing as a "shortsighted policy," the rezoning of land north of Rock creek and west of Connecticut avenue to permit erection of apartment houses in that territory, the parks and zoning committee of the Women's City club recommended that the club reaffirm its exception to the measure in its report yesterday to the executive board of the organization.

Although the commission already has approved the rezoning of the territory, delay in fixing a building height limit in the area prompted the committee again to oppose the measure. The committee further recommended that in the future the commission when passing upon such changes, "give wider advertisement, in popular as well as technical language."

Army and Navy Union Plans Veterans Dance

Plans for a dance and entertainment, representative of all of the veterans' organizations in Washington, to be held at the City club January 17 under the auspices of the Army and Navy union, were announced yesterday by Maj. Charles William Freeman, in charge of arrangements.

Maj. C. O. Howard, national commander of the Army and Navy union, and Maj. W. L. Peake, commander of the President's Own garrison, are assisting Maj. Freeman. Organizations which will be represented are the Spanish-American War Veterans, Grand Army of the Republic, American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Disabled War Veterans, Society of Santiago and the Veterans of Indian Wars.

COUNCIL OF JEWISH WOMEN WILL OPEN CONCLAVE TONIGHT

Mrs. H. G. Solomon, Founder, to Respond to Welcome by Local Section.

COOLIDGES TO RECEIVE DELEGATES TOMORROW

Borah, Husband and Dunlap Are Among Speakers on Program for Week.

The Eleventh triennial convention of the National Council of Jewish Women, meeting in Washington this week, will hold its opening session tonight at the Eighth Street temple of the Washington Hebrew congregation.

Throughout the rest of the week the convention will meet in the hall of nations of the Washington hotel. At tonight's session Mrs. Hannah G. Solomon, of Chicago, founder and first president of the council, will respond to addresses of welcome from members of the Washington section. Addresses of greeting also will be delivered by the presidents of five Jewish women's national organizations.

Tomorrow noon the delegates will be received at the White House by President and Mrs. Coolidge, following a morning business session in the Washington hotel. The business meeting will feature a presentation of colors by the color guard of the United States marine corps. Reports on the progress of the council will be presented by Mrs. William D. Sporborg, president, and Mrs. Estelle M. Sternberger, executive secretary.

To Discuss Survey.

Questions to be discussed during the convention include a scientific survey recently completed by the council of its 235 sections, and a new financial policy which would permit an expansion in the work of its various departments. Among those who will address meeting are Senator William E. Borah, chairman of the Senate committee on foreign relations; William W. Husband, of the Department of Labor; R. W. Dunlap, Assistant Secretary of the Department of Agriculture, and Mrs. John D. Sherman, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

Arrangements for the reception of more than 1,000 women, who are expected to attend the convention, are under direction of Mrs. Alexander Wolf, chairman of the triennial board, and Mrs. Leonard B. Schloss, president of the Washington section. The sessions will continue through Friday afternoon.

Members of the local convention committee include Mrs. Harry S. Lewis, Mrs. Adolph Kahn, Mrs. J. S. Kann, Mrs. I. Neuman, Mrs. Herbert Rich, Mrs. Stanley Lansburgh, Mrs. Alvin Newmyer, Mrs. George Hyman, Mrs. William Levy, Mrs. Charles Goldsmith, Miss Carrie Hart, Mrs. Mark Lansburg, Mrs. Harry Levy, Mrs. John Safer, Mrs. Louis Kronheimer, Miss Bertha Israel, Mrs. Henry Hirsh, Mrs. Sam Pack, Mrs. Abe Liebman and Maurice Eiseman.

ADVISER INDICATES DRAFT BY COOLIDGE OF COMMISSIONER

President Considering Three Classes of Men for Successor to Rudolph.

MUST BE WELL VERSED IN FINANCIAL MATTERS

Also Seeking Choice With Minimum of Private Business Affairs, Is Belief.

President Coolidge may have to "draft" a man for District commissioner to succeed Cuno H. Rudolph, it was said yesterday by one of his advisors.

Thre classes of men are being considered: One composed of men who want the job and have said so, another of men who have not asked for it but have indicated they would accept it, and the third of men who not only have not asked for it but in all probability have not even considered it.

It is in this latter class that the best material lies, according to those who are helping the President in this selection. In the end, they say, it may be necessary to call on one of them.

The chances are that such a man at first would turn down the job, but it is believed that the President would be able to persuade him to take it, by pointing out that it is his civic duty to serve. Thus the next commissioner may be a man who today is not giving the job a thought.

No Definite Choice.

So far, it was said yesterday, there has been neither a definite or tentative selection of any one man. The first class of men previously referred to—those who have asked for the appointment—seems to be barren of likely candidates.

It is known that government investigators have looked into the record of one man and have turned in an unfavorable report. It is probable, too, that others have been "investigated."

The man the President wants, according to those close to him, is one who is well versed in finance and who has little or nothing to disfract him in the way of private business affairs.

Several women still are in the field for the office, but those who should know say there is little or no chance for them.

ARRIVAL OF GARNER OPENS FIGHT ON TAX PLAN OF COOLIDGE

Democratic Representative Has Program for Straight Cut in Corporation Levy.

TEXAN TO SEEK REPEAL OF AUTO ASSESSMENT

President's Credit Proposal Only Way of Returning Proposal, Mills Says.

(By the Associated Press.)

Proof piled up here yesterday that President Coolidge's tax credit plan, if it ever gets through Congress, will emerge bearing the scars and bumps of an embattled passage.

One of the proofs was the coming to town of Representative John Garner, of Texas, ranking Democratic member of the House ways and means committee, who generally has a say, and a powerful one, as to the policies of his party in financial matters. He had with him a program of his own for a straight-out cut in the corporation tax from 13½ per cent to 12 per cent and for repeal of the automobile tax.

The Texan's arrival in Washington coincided with that of Representative Ogden L. Mills, of New York, a Republican on the ways and means committee, and his unbending opponent in everything relating to financial legislation. As if they were squaring off for a resumption of their perennial argument, Mr. Mills found the President's credit plan the only practical way of returning to the taxpayers at this time the $250,000,000 surplus in the Treasury, while Mr. Garner saw little good in it.

Lukewarm to Plan.

Mr. Mills did not say he would initiate any legislation to carry out the President's plan. He explained that he would prefer to confer first with Chairman Green of the committee. The chairman, with several other Republicans who have expressed themselves, have been rather lukewarm to the proposition. Representative Mills did say, however, that it would be "folly" from a financial viewpoint to attempt permanent tax reduction at the approaching short session of Congress, and in this he has the backing of Secretary Mellon and others of the administration.

The argument of Representative Garner put into concrete form the buzz of opinion heard in Democratic quarters recently that the President's plan largely would benefit corporations and not consumers.

"In 1924," he said, "we increased the corporation tax from 10 per cent to 12½ per cent, and in 1926 we increased it again from 12½ per cent to 13½ per cent. Each time we reduced the income tax and gave great reductions in surtaxes.

70 Per Cent by People.

Since more than 70 per cent of the corporation tax is paid by the people and less than 20 per cent of the income tax is passed on to the people, the corporation tax should be reduced by all means so that the purchasing public may get the benefit of tax reduction. The automobile tax is a consumption tax and the ultimate consumer pays most of it.

"If the corporations and the individuals are allowed a rebate on their taxes, as proposed by the President, it will be entirely for the benefit of the corporation and the individual.

"In other words, Mr. Mills and Mr. Mellon, who say the people ultimately pay all the taxes, now propose that 70 per cent of the corporation tax shall be turned back, merely for the benefit of the stockholders and corporations. My method would enable the corporations to reduce the cost of products to the consumers."

New Santa Fe Train Saves Day to Coast

Another advance in cross-country short time transportation will be marked tonight when the Chief, new extra fare train of the Santa Fe railway, starts on its first run from Chicago to the Pacific coast on a schedule that cuts the trip time to two business days.

Ten complete trains have been purchased for the purpose, and the service will be a daily one between Chicago and Los Angeles. The Chief will be provided with new steel equipment throughout, with a special lounge for women. It is a post-war edition of the De Luxe which the Sante Fe once ran weekly between the two cities. The new schedule saves a full business day.

Veterans' Club to Give Another Rural Party

The American War Veterans club will have another night of noise and fun making November 29 in the L'Aiglon salons, Eighteenth street and Columbia road northwest.

The country social and dance held recently proved such a success the club has been forced to repeat the dance because of requests. The participants will arrive wearing gingham and overalls as well as other comic costumes. Charles Riemer is chairman.

Bridge Pier Is Completed.

Completion of the first pier of Arlington Memorial bridge to the water level line was announced by the office of public buildings and public parks of the National Capital yesterday.

PRIZE BABIES AT FOOD SHOW

Henry Miller Service.

Mary Martha Wood (front center), adjudged the champion baby of Washington at the food show at the Washington auditorium yesterday. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. T. Wood. Left—Mary Lauck, winner of second prize, with her mother, Mrs. W. J. Lauck, and Lillian Mae Boyd, right, who won third prize in the contest, with her mother, Mrs. W. F. Boyd.

MARY MARTHA WOOD WINS BABY CONTEST

Chubby little Mary Martha Wood won her way to victory yesterday with an 18-month-old smile. She was acclaimed the most popular baby at the food show, which closed last night at the Washington auditorium. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. T. Wood, 4807 Davenport street northwest.

W. P. McBain, who has conducted the show during its two weeks session under the auspices of the Retail Grocers Protective association, announced last night that approximately 40,000 persons visited the show this year, 5,000 last night.

It was announced that R. D. Smith, 813 Decatur street northwest, has been awarded a Dodge sedan; Katherine Adams, of Potomac, Va., a gas range; N. C. Watts, of Cherrydale, Va., a radio, and Mrs. H. Wolfe, 616 Jefferson street northwest, an electric cleaner.

New Hadassah Head To Speak Tomorrow

Mrs. Irma Lindheim, newly elected president of the National Hadassah, women's Zionist organization, will be the principal speaker at the second meeting of the Jewish forum to be held tomorrow evening at the Jewish Community center, Sixteenth and Q streets northwest. Members of the local Hadassah will act as hostesses and the public is invited to attend.

The Jewish forum was launched a few weeks ago by Dr. Jonah B. Wise, of New York.

Alien Property Bill Hearing Tomorrow

Hearings on alien property legislation will be held before the House committee on ways and means tomorrow at 2 o'clock. Most of the members of the committee are expected to be back in Washington in time for the hearings.

Undersecretary of the Treasury Garrard B. Winston and other Treasury officials will give their views on what form of legislation is practicable. The committee will have under consideration the two Newton bills and the Treasury bill, and it is believed that a committee bill probably will result which Republican leaders hope to push through the House at the coming session.

RED CROSS CAMPAIGN FUND NEARS $10,000

Hopeful Quota of $40,000 Will Be Raised by Thanksgiving.

The roll call fund of the District chapter of the American Red Cross came within hailing distance of $10,000 last night when, at the close of the day receipts from the various booths and stations, it was reported $9,971.33 was on hand for the tenth annua roll call.

Workers at roll call headquarters were hopeful the full quota of $40,000 will be raised by Thanksgiving, it was urged that all persons having membership blanks sent to them with their monthly bills and statements from banks, the public utilities and other firms fill them out and send them in with their checks. The thrill that comes once in a lifetime was experienced by David Barber and Elsie Barber, of 2115 P street northwest, pupils of Force school, yesterday, when they recognized their pictures in a scene on the official Red Cross poster being used all over the country in promotion of the roll call.

CIVIC LEADERS BACK CASUALTY CAMPAIGN

Civic leaders in Northeast and Southeast Washington last night pledged their support to the drive of Casualty hospital officials for $250,000 and a new hospital.

Evan H. Tucker, president of the Northeast Citizens association; Harry N. Stull, member of the citizens' advisory council, and president of the Stanton Park Citizens association, and Guilford S. Jameson, president of the Lincoln Park Citizens association, were enthusiastic over the prospect of getting a new hospital for Northeast Washington.

They declared the site of the present institution on Massachusetts avenue, between Seventh and Eighth streets northeast, to be the "ideal site" for a new hospital. Mr. Jameson stated that there is a large field for hospitalization in this section of the city and if the citizens do their part, "we will get a hospital over here that has long been needed." The drive for funds will begin January 17. Hospital officials plan to erect a 200-bed hospital.

Postoffice Patronage Assailed by Foulke

Selection of postmasters and rural carriers by members of Congress and local political leaders was assailed yesterday by William Dudley Foulke, former president of the National Civil Service Reform league, in an article appearing in Good Government, the league's organ.

The attack was directed against Representative T. S. Williams, Republican, of Illinois, who replied, "I believe in party government" in preference to a poll conducted by the reform league on the question. "Every corrupt spoilsman," Foulke said, "has believed that public places are legitimate party plunder."

MILK EXCHANGE OPENS BOTTLE DRIVE TODAY

Will Seek Return of Containers Disappearing at Rate of 20,000 Daily.

The milk bottle exchange will launch a city-wide campaign tomorrow to corral missing milk bottles, said to be disappearing at the rate of 20,000 daily.

If any housewife hording milk bottles in her kitchen will telephone the exchange this week, a milk wagon will call for them. The Boy Scouts and Merchants and Manufacturers association will cooperate with the exchange.

Edward D. Shaw, secretary of the merchants' body, stated yesterday that more than 300,000 milk bottles were delivered in Washington every morning, but that 20,000 of these bottles were not returned the following day.

Big Ten Dance Places Ban on Dress Attire

Tuxedos and other "soup and fish" attire will be banned at the annual Big Ten round-up and dance to be held Saturday night in the Washington hotel. The entertainers will be headed by George O'Connor and Matt Horn.

The affair will be the sixth annual get-together of the local alumni of the ten universities that make up the Western conference. It is held at the close of each football season to acclaim the winner of the conference championship.

Holy Name Rally Speaker.

Andrew Hickey, of this city, will deliver the principal address at a rally held this afternoon at 3 o'clock at the St. Patrick's church at Mount Savage, Md., by the St. Patrick's Holy Name society. Delegations from other parishes in western Maryland will participate.

4,000,000 ON RADIOS LISTEN AS CAPITAL ASKS FOR SUFFRAGE

Whole World Is Reached in Addresses Broadcast From the City Club.

DISFRANCHISED STATUS TOLD BY FIVE SPEAKERS

Washingtonians Not Citizens in Every Sense of the Word, C. D. Darr Says.

An estimated audience of 4,000,000 persons heard by radio the demand of the District of Columbia for suffrage at the City club national representation day exercises last night.

The five addresses by prominent speakers, touching upon different phases of the subject of local suffrage, were broadcast over WRC and the new station WJZ in New York, rated the most powerful station in the country.

The latter station has a range, it is said, of 8,000 miles. The plight of Washington politically was heralded, therefore, to the world. Station WJZ is heard equally well in Germany and Australia.

Half Million Disfranchised.

The fact that more than half a million people live here "disfranchised" was thoroughly impressed upon this huge audience, and the speakers made it plain by the tenor of their talks that the people of Washington are not accepting the circumstance in silence.

The fact that Washington has no voice in the national government or its own was indirectly the result of the ill-advised act of the starving veterans of the Revolution who surrounded the State house in Philadelphia when the Continental congress was in session 150 years ago, and demanded their pay, Edwin C. Brandenburg declared.

"This incident evidently was the inception of the idea that the Capital of the Nation should be at some place over which the government would exercise control, exclusive of any State or other authority," he said, adding:

Oversight by Fathers.

"We do not believe that the silence of the Constitution upon the right of franchise for the District indicates a purpose on the part of the framers that we should have less rights than the aliens within our borders, but, on the contrary, we strongly believe it was a mere oversight on their part."

Charles W. Darr, prominent local business and civic leader, said:

"We are not in every sense of the word American citizens. We are not entitled to the great privilege of assisting in our government, and we believe that we are especially entitled to this representation for the reason that we are locally governed by congress."

Never Voted in His Life.

John J. Deviny, assistant director of the bureau of engraving and printing, spoke from the standpoint of the "typical Washingtonian," declaring that, as a native of Washington, he had heard naturally all the messages of patriotism and national fealty, but had never voted in his life.

Other speakers were Edward P. McGrady, chairman of the legislative committee of the American Federation of Labor; and Mrs. Anna E. Hendley, honorary president of the Susan B. Anthony foundation. Maj. Gen. Anton Stephan, chairman of the national representation committee of the club, presided.

The program was especially a radio affair, and was arranged by the committee, the other members of which were Rudolph Jose Henry Stringer, Percy McCoy, and H. J. Odenthal. The wide broadcasting of the program was provided by Gen. James Harbord, formerly Chief of Staff of the army, and now president of the Radio Corporation of America.

GOVERNMENT HOUSING CONDITIONS ASSAILED

No Private Business Would Tolerate Them, Building Commissioner Says.

$912,248 PAID IN RENTS

The annual report of the public buildings commission says: "A very careful and extensive survey of the government's workshop forces has confirmed the amazing indictment that the biggest business in the world, the business of the United States government, is conducted under housing conditions that no private business would tolerate."

Urging the need of the building program now being delayed, it states:

"Not only are conditions such that an accidental fire or a hurricane might unavoidably become a catastrophe, killing many persons and destroying essential records that can not be reproduced and the loss of which would intolerably embarrass the government's business; but at present, when every effort is necessary to bring the annual cost of the necessary Federal administration to a minimum, economical organization and methods are made impossible by the way the departments are scattered and the entirely unsuitable conditions under which a large proportion of the employes work.

"The waste due to these indirect causes undoubtedly exceeds the direct loss of $912,248 paid each year in rents."

The government is paying rent on 53 buildings, not counting the 34 substations of the postoffice, eight of which are in government owned buildings.

FOUNDATION OF JEWISH DRIVE GROUP COMPLETED

City-Wide Canvass for $150,000 Will Begin on November 29.

COMMITTEEMEN NAMED

With a view to reaching every Jewish home in Washington in the united Jewish relief fund campaign for $150,000, Rudolph B. Behrend, general chairman of the local campaign committee, announced last night he had completed the basework of a large organization which will open a city-wide canvass for funds November 29. The national goal has been set at $25,000,000.

Addressing a meeting of prospective campaign workers, Simon Lyon, who served as chairman of four relief drives here, expressed the opinion that Washington Jews "will raise their quota as they always have done." Joseph H. Hagedorn, civic and philanthropic leader of Philadelphia, pointed out that his city has raised $9,000,000 for Jewish causes in the last year, and now has set its quota at $1,500,000 for the national relief fund.

Chairman Behrend announced the following campaign officers and executive committee:

R. D. Behrend, general chairman; Rabbi Abram Simon, Isadore Hershfield, Harry Sherby, Joseph Wilner and Paul Himmelfarb, vice chairmen; Mrs. Charles A. Goldsmith, honorary chairman; Joseph Tepper, honorary secretary; Gerson Nordlinger, treasurer; Edmund I. Kaufmann, general of teams.

French Deputies Deny Clerks Higher Pay

Paris, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Thousands of French government clerks had dreams of higher salaries shattered this afternoon when the chamber of deputies turned down a socialist motion to increase the pay of the nation's white collar employes. The vote was 345 to 200 against the motion.

1,000 WILL ATTEND CATHOLIC CHARITIES DINNER TOMORROW

Event Will Begin Drive for $40,000 to Assist Needy of Washington.

ARCHBISHOP AND RABBI ON LIST OF SPEAKERS

Captains and Team Workers for Campaign Will Meet This Afternoon.

One thousand persons are expected to attend the fifth annual dinner of the Catholic Charities of Washington at the Mayflower hotel tomorrow. It will open the campaign for $40,000, to be conducted November 16 to 23.

Archbishop Michael J. Curley, of Baltimore, will be the principal speaker.

Other speakers include Rabbi Abram Simon, Arthur J. May, president of the Catholic Charities of Washington; Miss Mary Mattingly, president of the Sodality union; Charles Darr, chairman of the campaign, and the Rev. John O'Grady, director of the Catholic Charities. Dr. H. J. Crosson will be toastmaster.

Among those who have reserved tables and will act as hosts and hostesses at the dinner are Michael Heister, Francis R. Weller, Hugh Reilly, James E. Colliflower, Henry J. Auth, Adam Weschler, Allen Pope, John Saul, Raphael Semmes, Raymond Wise, James H. Johnson, jr., John Walsh, Leo May, Edward S. Handiboe, E. J. Cavanagh, George Potter, P. E. Gordon, Bertram Downham, John Heister, Earl Ready, Miss Gertrude Marron, Miss Bernadette Dore, Miss Mary Mattingly, Miss Emily Weems, Miss Gertrude Marsden, Miss Bessie O'Leary, Miss Rose Carragher, Miss Sarah C. Walsh, Miss Cecilia A. Ryan, Miss Minnie Mahler, Miss Minnie Harrigan, Miss Blanche Gardiner, Miss Margaret C. Diggins, Miss Catherine Dillon, Miss Catherine Doherty, Miss Anne Hagan, Miss Estelle Kearney, Miss Julia Linsky, Mrs. Rieman Chesley, Mrs. Harry Bicksler, Mrs. Andrew McIntyre, Mrs. Arthur McReynolds, Mrs. Nellie E. Early and Mrs. Ann Sweet.

Parishes Take Tables.

One of the features of the dinner will be the separate tables taken by the Catholic parishes in the city, at which will be seated the pastor, his assistants and the heads of the various organizations of the parish. The following parishes have reserved their tables: St. Aloysius'; St. Dominic's, St. Gabriel's, St. Martin's, St. Patrick's, St. Paul's, Sacred Heart, St. Stephen's, St. Matthew's, Blessed Sacrament, St. Joseph's, St. Mary's, St. Peter's and St. Anne's.

An elaborate musical and entertainment program has been arranged under the direction of Michael D. Schaefer and George H. O'Connor. Vocal selections will be by Miss Hazel Arth, George O'Connor and George Cowles. Thomas W. Brahany will render a monologue.

Sixteen teams have been completed and will begin Tuesday to cover the entire city and invite every Catholic in Washington to contribute to the campaign. The captains of the teams are Mrs. Thomas P. Brown, Miss Anna J. Keady, Miss Sarah McGarvey, Miss Estelle Kearney, Miss Minnie Mahler, Mrs. Alice Bicksler, Miss Gertrude Marsden, Miss Margaret Keane, Miss Margaret Breen, Miss Ethel Ammon, Miss Helen M. Anthony, Miss Annie E. Neitzey, Miss Blanche Gardiner, Miss Mary L. Bauskett, Miss Blanche Madigan and Miss Catherine Weschler. Two hundred women have volunteered to serve on the various teams.

A meeting of all the captains and team workers will be held at Carroll hall, 934 G street, today at 3 p. m. The captains will hold a meeting at 2 p. m., to precede the general meeting. The workers will be addressed by Arthur May, president of the Catholic charities; F. R. Weller, vice president; the Rev. Paul H. Furfey and Charles Darr, chairman of the campaign.

The report of the work of Catholic Charities in the current year will be given forth at the dinner at the Mayflower and distributed to the guests. The organization has accomplished great good for the poor and distressed of the District through its relief service to needy families, its care of dependent and neglected children and its protective work for boys and girls.

An increased budget is needed to meet the increased demand. It is commonly agreed upon that if relief agencies, such as the Catholic Charities, were enabled through larger financial support to deal with the problems of relief more effectively, there would be less demand for juvenile courts and for public agencies for the care of dependent, neglected, and delinquent children.

U. S. ASKS DISMISSAL OF BAKING POWDER SUIT

ARGUMENTS ON FRIDAY

The Federal Trade Commission, in motions filed yesterday, asked the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia to dismiss the petition filed recently by the Royal Baking Powder Co. to compel the commission to turn over to the court various records in proceedings brought by the Federal Trade Commission against the company involving charges of engaging in unfair competitive trade practices.

Arguments on the motions will be heard next Friday before Chief Justice McCoy.

In seeking to bring about the dismissal of the petition, which the commission's motion says "is bad in substance," the commission says:

"That the Federal Trade Commission act prescribes broadly the procedure to be followed by the commission, and authorizes the commission to make rules and regulations for carrying into effect the provisions of that act."

The Federal trade commission also contends that the court is without jurisdiction to review or set aside any order of the commission or to quash any proceeding or hearing by the commission under the act creating the commission to determine whether any person is engaged in the use of unfair methods of competition. It is contended that the United States circuit courts of appeals, under the statute, are vested with exclusive jurisdiction in this respect.

The commission adds that "the order of the Federal trade commission dismissing the complaint against the Royal Baking Powder Co. and its subsequent order vacating the order of dismissal are purely procedural and administrative, do not bind this petitioner and may not be reviewed by any court."

DRY HEADQUARTERS AT RICHMOND URGED

Merrick Recommends Change for Virginia and North Carolina District.

(By the Associated Press.)

Establishment of headquarters for the new prohibition district of Virginia and North Carolina at Richmond, rather than Norfolk, is under consideration by Assistant Secretary Andrews, in charge of the dry forces.

R. Q. Merrick, who was named by Andrews as the new administrator for this district, recommended the change at a conference yesterday with the prohibition chief and his assistant, Frank Dow. Merrick believes Richmond will make better headquarters than Norfolk because of the transportation problem in this territory and Andrews is inclined to agree with him. Merrick will take charge on December 1, when the transfer of headquarters will be effected.

West for Merchant Marine, Coolidge Told

President Coolidge yesterday was informed that the mid-West is unanimously in favor of a permanent American merchant marine, preferably under private ownership, but if this is impractical its operation under direct governmental control is urged.

This attitude was expressed by Malcolm M. Stewart, foreign trade manager for the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce, and chairman of the middle West foreign trade committee, who was escorted to the White House yesterday by Senator Fess, of Ohio.

Bill Gives Chilean Women Right to Vote

Santiago, Chile, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Women of Chile will have the right to vote if a bill now before the chamber of deputies becomes law. The bill recommends that the electoral law be changed so that the word "citizens" would replace the word "varones," which means males.

Women would be eligible to vote, under the bill's provisions, in elections of the president, senators, deputies and in municipal elections.

FOLLOWERS OF VILLA, ARMED, ENTER MEXICO

SUPPLIED WITH MONEY

El Paso, Texas, Nov. 13 (By A. P.)—Despite emphatic official denials, rumors persisted in Jaurez tonight that a serious revolutionary movement is developing in the State of Chihuahua and along the northern border of Mexico.

Los Angeles, Calif., Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—The Los Angeles Times El Paso correspondent says Gen. Nicolas Fernandez, former chief of staff of the late Pancho Villa, famous Mexican revolutionist and former outlaw, has crossed the border into Mexico, near Bosque Bonito, accompanied by fifteen other former Villa followers, and carrying machine guns and a quantity of ammunition and rifles.

Despite the small size of his force, Mexican leaders were said to fear that it may grow to large proportions, since thousands of former Villa followers are known to be working on ranches in the vicinity. Most of them, when they disbanded, kept their rifles, and only ammunition is needed to make them fighting men again. Fernandez, said to have succeeded to Villa's prestige with his men, would be assured of more followers than he could equip, the correspondent said it was believed.

Friends of Fernandez who recently assisted him in crossing to the American side at Bosque Bonito, say he had obtained funds from secret sources in the United States and that he left well supplied with funds and had all the ammunition he and his men could carry on their mounts.

Gen. Ramon Popez, Mexican commander at Juarez, apparently realized the seriousness of the situation when he sent out a detachment in search of Fernandez and his men. Two men, both believed to be agents of Fernandez, were captured near Guadaloupe, 32 miles east of Juarez, and were shot.

Former Villa officers here say Fernandez would not be expected to lead a revolution based on religious difficulties in Mexico, as he was said to be bitter against the church because of his former chief's pronounced views on the subject.

Schellenberger, Star Of Gridiron, Accused

Kansas City, Nov. 13 (By A. P.). Allen Schellenberger, former all-American football star, Princeton university graduate and Missouri student and assistant coach, was arrested here last night on a charge of issuing worthless checks. Police charge that the former athlete followed newspaper advertisements and proffered worthless checks for goods, which he then sold or pawned.

Schellenberger attended the University of Missouri in 1907, then went to Princeton, where he made the all-American eleven in 1909 and 1910.

Girl Killed, 2 Others Hurt as Car Hits Pole

Richmond, Va., Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Miss Pearl Casey, 19, of this city was fatally injured and two other persons received minor injuries last night when an automobile driven by W. A. Mathews, 27, overturned after crashing into a pole beside the Petersburg turnpike. Miss Dorothy Traylor, 20, received slight injuries and the driver of the car was cut about the face.

The young woman died on her arrival at he hospital, it was said. Her skull was fractured. Mathews said he was temporarily blinded by lights of an approaching machine. He is held on a technical charge of involuntary manslaughter.

BRILLIANCE MARKS COMMUNITY CENTER HARVEST FESTIVAL

1,500 Hear Miss Baker and Ballou Tell of Work at Central High.

FETE DEPICTS SEASON IN VARIOUS COUNTRIES

With a brilliance and enthusiasm exceeding all previous pageants of the harvest, the third annual harvest festival, presented under auspices of the community center department in celebration of community day, was held last night before an audience of approximately 1,500 persons, with Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, and Miss Sibyl Baker, director of community center department, telling of the achievements of community center in the Central High Community center.

The pageant was a kaleidoscopic review of the harvest time in many countries, using characteristic events from Greece, Palestine, China, the Balkans, America, and climaxed with a symbolic spectacle of the universal harvest of all nations.

The dancing, costumes and scenic effects were worthy of all the applause given by the audience. The Festival of Ceres, the goddess of the fields, and the Universal Harvest were executed with exceptional color and grace, as well as the Feast of Ingathering, the Chinese Tea Harvest, the Harvest of the Balkans and the First Thanksgiving in America.

Custom of Greeks.

The prologue, or the Festival of Ceres, represented the custom of the Greeks to gather at harvest time, bringing grain and fruits to the goddess. The picturesqueness of the sculptural group and the dancers, bedecked in white and garlands, bespoke the untiring efforts of Henry K. Bush-Brown.

The Universal Harvest, in which the horn of plenty poured forth its riches, could not have been executed more effectively. The colorful dancers moved through their part with a grace and harmony that invoked enthusiastic applause from the audience.

The portrayals of the Feast of Ingathering, the Chinese Tea Harvest, the Harvest in the Balkans and the First Thanksgiving in America were well managed. The costumes, lighting effects and acting were commendable. The children in the Harvest in the Balkans and First Thanksgiving in America did their parts with extreme realism.

Grace and Beauty.

Miss Alice Louise Hunter's dance in the Chinese Tea Harvest, as well as that of the others in this act, was performed with much grace and beauty. The success of the Feast of the Ingathering was due as much to Harold Snyder and Leo Conway, who were in charge of the lighting effects, as it was to the excellence of the actor's performance.

Dr. Ballou told the audience that the community center had become an important part in the life of the city. He pointed out that less than ten years' legislation prevented the schools from participating in anything but educational work.

Miss Baker declared she was glad that the Federation of Citizens Associations were opening their drive because it is only through such organizations that the citizens of a city can confer on important matters and register their opinions, so the community center department could know their wishes. It is the object of the department to make every school in Washington a community center, she said.

Washi Oldest Shoe Hous

'Way back when the smoking embers of the Civil War strife were just dying out---Robert Berberich, Sr., founded a shoe store in Washington. A modest and humble beginning in a nine-foot front store located on the present site of our Seventh Street Store---which now occupies nearly four thousand square feet of floor space on one floor. Reared from the start on the sole principle of SELLING SHOES TO FIT THE FEET---NOT MAKING FEET FIT THE SHOES.

For BERBERICH'S—throughout all the fifty-eight years of success now celebrated—has refused to admit to stock and shelves all but the shoes that add credit to the BERBERICH name and reputation. Faultless style, dependable leathers, enduring wear; these are the things you MUST buy, in footwear, every time that BERBERICH'S makes the sale. The range of selection offered you in this 58th Anniversary Sale carries the BERBERICH recommendation—not a single shoe excepted in this $100,000 stock.

CRITTENTON BAZAAR MODELS TO DISPLAY LATEST IN FASHIONS

Debutantes and Young Matrons of Society to Aid Cause of Mission.

JUNIOR LEAGUE TO AID COMMITTEES IN CHARGE

Booths to Offer Wide Variety of Fancy Goods and Useful Articles.

The annual Florence Crittenton bazaar will open its doors for two afternoons and evenings beginning November 22 in the ballroom of the Mayflower hotel. The committee in charge of the bazaar, headed by Mrs. S. L. Tabor, chairman, has made elaborate plans for the many features of the occasion.

On Tuesday afternoon from 4:30 to 6 o'clock a fashion show will be held with debutantes and young society matrons acting as models. Card parties will be featured both afternoons and evenings with Mrs. J. B. Gregg Custis, of the Kate Waller Barrett circle acting as chairman on this committee. The numerous ladies' circles of the city will display booths. Monday afternoon the "wonder bag," in charge of Mrs. A. S. Douglas, will be a novelty feature.

Members of the junior league will assist the chairmen on the different committees both afternoons under the guidance of Mrs. Edward Norris.

Circles to Have Booths.

The circles that will display booths are as follows: the Kate Waller Barrett circle, featuring toys and flowers; the Ingram circle, bake table; the All Souls' Church circle, magazines; the Emma Robertson circle, candies; the Sunshine circle, home booth; the Chevy Chase circle, fashion show; the Friendship circle, bake table; the Florence circle, kitchen equipment; the Wheel Club circle, aprons; the Good Will circle, utility booth; the Helping Hand circle, fancy articles; the Baby Lovers circle No. 1, towels and card table covers; and the Baby Lovers circle No. 2, bake table. The Twentieth Century club will have also on display a handkerchief booth, with Mrs. Frederick Farrington in charge of the arrangements.

MISSOURI'S STATUE TO CLARK UNVEILED AT BOWLING GREEN

PERFIDY, SAYS REED, COST HIM PRESIDENCY

Served State With Devotion Unequaled by Heroes, Asserts Governor.

Bowling Green, Mo., Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—More than 5,000 persons assembled here today to honor the memory of the late Champ Clark, of Bowling Green, former Speaker of the National House of Representatives, at the unveiling and dedication of the $25,000 State memorial to the statesman.

Undeterred by rain, which fell spasmodically throughout the day, the crowd stood for hours outside the Pike county courthouse on the south lawn on which the magnificent lifelike statue of Speaker Clark had been erected, to hear national and State personages deliver fitting eulogies to the noted Missourian.

United States Senator James A. Reed, of Kansas City, who was an old friend and colleague of Clark in Congress, delivered the principal address.

Grandson Pulls Cord.

Former State Senator J. D. Hostetter presented the statue to the State and Champ Clark, 3-year-old son of Bennett C. Clark, of St. Louis, a son of Speaker Clark, pulled the cord which unveiled the memorial. Gov. Sam A. Baker of Missouri accepted the monument in behalf of the State and paid tribute to Speaker Clark. He declared Champ Clark was one of Missouri's greatest citizens; that he served the people of the State in times of peace with an ardor and devotion unequaled by the bravery of heroic soldiers in time of war, and that if the people of the nation had known and regarded Clark as the people of his own county knew him, a different story would be on the pages of history about the Democratic national convention in Baltimore in 1912, when Clark came so near to the presidential nomination.

Senator Reed's Praise.

Champ Clark was the "champion of Democracy in the forum of the nation," Senator Reed declared. "He preferred defeat in a just cause, to success in an evil cause and subordinated personal advantage to the general weal.

"He knew that authority feeding upon authority, gathering strength by strength, is likely at any time to overleap the barrier of the Constitution and destroy the liberties of the people. He, therefore, declared that the reigns of power should be firmly held in the hands of the common people.

"A personal participant in many fierce campaigns, it was never suggested that his elections were tainted nor his title to office besmirched.

"When unspeakable perfidy snatched from his grasp the Presidency of the republic, he remained unembittered by disappointment; his loyalty to country and to party remained steadfast as the Pole star. Without complaint he continued his life's labor for honest government, the preservation of the Constitution, and the perpetuity of the republic."

Lineman Dies After Pole Falls Upon Him

Special to The Washington Post.

Winchester, Va., Nov. 13.—Funeral services were held today at Middletown for George Hensell, 26, a Northern Virginia Power Co. lineman, who was fatally injured yesterday when a pole on which he was working snapped at the base and fell with him. The pole is said to have been decayed at the bottom. His skull was fractured, and he was otherwise injured.

He was fastened by his safety belt, and when the pole toppled it fell upon him. Hensell leaves his mother, Mrs. Silas Hensell, a sister and a brother.

R. O. Alexander Dies Suddenly.

Charlotte, N. C., Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—R. O. Alexander, widely known cotton merchant and developer of the Black Mountain summer resort, died suddenly at his home here today.

U. S. PRESTIGE IS LOST IN EUROPE, SAYS CRANE

DECORATED BY MASARYK

Petersburg, Va., Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—It will be a long time before America recovers the prestige which her leaders so lightly tossed aside after the world war, Richard Crane, first United States Minister to the republic of Czechoslovakia, declared here today in acknowledging receipt of the Order of White Lion, first class, bestowed on him by President Masaryk. The decoration was delivered to Mr. Crane by Zdenek Fierlinger, Czechoslovakian Minister at Washington, at exercises sponsored by the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce, of which Mr. Crane is a director.

The exercises were started with folk dances by Czechoslovakians from a colony across the James river from Westover, Mr. Crane's home, followed by an address by J. Gordon Pohannon, remarks by Gov. Harry F. Byrd and the presentation of the decoration by Minister Fierlinger.

The Czechoslovakian representative in a brief speech stressed the friendly ties between his country and the United States, adding that "our sincere republicanism is based on the same moral principles as those of the American Constitution and the American Declaration of Independence." He pointed to the fact that the Czechoslovakian declaration of independence was signed in the Liberty hall in Philadelphia October 26, 1918, and praised the distinguished career of Mr. Crane and his activity and popularity at Prague when he was Minister there.

Mr. Crane paid tribute to President Masaryk as "the only statesman of the war period who has come through with undiminished prestige to the present time."

"Czechoslovakia," he said, "because she has whole-heartedly supported her great leaders has rapidly recovered from the ravages of the war. She is not only putting her own house in order, but at the same time is contributing incalculably toward the future peace of Europe."

"Although the great enthusiasm of the war has died down," Mr. Crane added, "it is apparent that the feeling in the United States for Czechoslovakia is a warm one. The idealism of those days seems to be obscured and America has played an ambiguous role in international affairs. While refusing to follow the political guidance of her leaders at the peace conference and abstaining as much as possible from direct participation in international affairs, she has whole-heartedly followed her financial leaders and loaned billions of dollars to Europe.

"This places her in a position when eventually she must take a stand on all important world questions, and, being disinterested in her point of view between the various nations of Europe, her influence will undoubtedly be of great good in the development of western civilization. However, it will be a long time before she recovers the prestige which her leaders tossed aside."

Restaurant Man Didn't Eat His Own Food

"It's pretty tough for a restaurant man to have stomach trouble. My customers were always telling me I ought to eat in a good restaurant. The fact was I couldn't eat a thing that didn't bloat me up and no medicine or doctors helped me. I tried everything recommended and at last MAYR'S, and I assure you I didn't have to look any further. Since taking it I have been a well man." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. Peoples' Drug Stores and druggists everywhere.—Adv.

WILLIAM, THE POET, PRINCE OF SWEDEN, WILL VISIT AMERICA

Brother of Gustavus Adolfus, Here Few Months Ago, Expected in January.

DUKE OF SODERMANLAND HAS GOOD NAVY RECORD

(Special Cable Dispatch.)

New York, Nov. 13.—There will be a chance for another royal reception some time in January. Once again a Prince of Sweden is expected. William, this time, the sailor and poet. Being as democratic as his older brother, Crown Prince Gustavus Adolfus, and possessing an added spark of literary talent, the prince is sure to be liked.

This interesting personage—sportsman, officer, writer—was born at Tullgarn castle, in Sweden, on the seventeenth days of June, 1884. His full name is Carl Wilhelm Ludvig and his title is Duke of Sodermanland.

Following the tradition of royalty, his family decided upon a military career for him. Unlike his brothers, however, who selected the army as their field, William enlisted in the navy.

At 24 years of age he became betrothed to Maria Pavlovna, Grand Duchess of Russia, a startlingly beautiful girl who was but 18 years old at the time of her marriage to the Swedish prince.

The ceremony took place in 1908 with appropriate prewar splendor at Tsarskoe Selo, the detached palace of the late Nicholous II. A year later a son was born. The boy was christened Gustaf Lennart Nicholaus Paul, and received in the cradle the title of Duke of Smaland.

Marriage Unfortunate.

The marriage, however, was an unfortunate one and, in 1914, the union was dissolved. The Princess returned to Russia where she, as soon as the war broke out, enlisted in the Red Cross. William was called to the colors and received the command of the destroyer Hugin and their son went with the queen. It is said that, although the relations between her majesty and the young Russian girl always were rather tense, the queen acquired a sincere love for Prince Lennart. He is now a fine lad, very devoted to his grandmother, with whom he spends part of the year.

Prince William's record in the navy was highly creditable. His physical vigor, quickness of decision and staunch patriotism were severely tested during the heavy years of 1914-1918. The prince had then reached the rank of lieutenant commander and his vessel was a unit of the flotilla of destroyers which did neutrality watch off the eastern coast of Sweden.

For months at a time his boat would maintain its ceaseless, vigilant patrolling, putting ashore only at intervals to coal and to renew supplies of food and water.

A story is told of how William frustrated the attempt of a German battleship to capture a Swedish merchantman bound for Finland. It was a precarious and delicate situation. The commander of the German vessel knew that the Swedish destroyer was not allowed to open fire, but he was surprised to see the Hugin, her high bow reeling in the choppy sea, headed straight toward him. The German had counted on the merchantman as a sure prey. Now he saw the narrow destroyer plant herself defiantly between the two other ships, her guns swung out and clear for attack, her crew at quarters. The German decided to retreat, allowing the Swedish trawler to continue unharmed.

Artistic Ability Also.

It has been said, and rightly, that the Bernadotte family is the most artistic of the European dynasties. Charles XV was a landscape painter and Oscar II wrote some charming poetry. It is needless to dwell upon the accomplishments of the present Crown Prince Gustavus Adolfus. His knowledge of archeology and ancient history is familiar.

Prince Eugen, the Duke of Nerke, is a renowned painter. His frescoes in the new city hall in Stockholm are fine examples of his skill.

Prince William has also received his share of artistic ability. His first collection of poems, "Slackta Fyrar" ("Extinguished Lighthouses"), possesses considerable merit. Two other volumes of poems followed.

William has also written fiction. His main contribution to this field is "Svarta Noveller" ("Black Novelettes"). The book contains a handful of short stories which show power of characterization and description and an ingenuity in plot. A few years ago the Royal Dramatic theater in Stockholm announced a play written by the prince called "Kinangozi." The play proved a success. It is a tremendous drama of the jungle, placed against the fantastic background of primeval instincts, pagan rites and strange customs.

An ever active man, Prince William has not only found time to do a great amount of writing, but also to deliver lectures, both in Sweden and in other European countries.

ARLINGTON COUNTY NEEDS COOPERATION, PLYMALE DECLARES

COMMITTEES NAMED IN GOVERNMENT MOVE

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Arlington county has reached the point where more cooperation must be created among the civic organizations if it hopes to even begin to carry out the plans for "greater Arlington county," said President Robert E. Plymale, of the Civic federation, last night.

Discussing the creation of the Arlington county better government commission, organized to study the needs of the county as far as a better form of government is concerned, Mr. Plymale stated that "We have talked county enough. What should be preached now is the talk of all organizations in the county working as a unit. Then we will get somewhere. Until we do that we will be crawling around in the dark.

"Create cooperation, working as a unit and with a strong organization, and Arlington county will be the greatest county in the State of Virginia," concluded Mr. Plymale.

Chairman L. C. McNemar, of the newly created Arlington county better government commission, last night gave out the following committee appointments: Legal committee, which will make a study of the powers of the board of supervisors under the State constitution as compared with the powers governing those of an incorporated town, Frank L. Ball, chairman; Charles T. Jesse, Frank G. Campbell, Clarence R. Ahalt and James Sherrier; committee to study the characteristics of Arlington county, C. A. S. Sinclair, chairman; H. A. Spillman, C. C. Lamond, Ashton C. Jones and Robert E. Plymale; committee for the purpose of studying whether the county government or the incorporation as a city is better for Arlington county, Arthur Orr, chairman; J. C. Byars and C. W. Fitch.

The legal committee will appear before the constitutional commission now in session in Richmond for the purpose of getting an amendment to the constitutions permitting Arlington county to perform all functions that would be performed under the constitution for a city, Chairman McNemar stated.

"The creation of this commission means more to Arlington county than anything that has been started in years, and with an active educational campaign which will be carried on, is bound to produce results," McNemar stated. "The commission is not prepared at this time to say that we should become a city. The county form of government may be found the best for this county, if worked along proper lines," he said.

Raymond Binsted, of Ballston, charged with violation of quarantine for diphtheria, appearing before Judge Harry R. Thomas, was reprimanded severely and was threatened with a jail sentence when he stated to the court that he owed a board bill and it had to be paid. Judge Thomas replied by saying, "if I put you in jail, how will you pay your board?" Binstead was placed under quarantine in charge of Dr. P. M. Chichester, county health officer, and told by the court if he attempted to violate it until released by the health department he would go to jail.

Judge Thomas stated later that any person violates the laws of the health department regarding quarantine, he will order a guard placed at the home or the person or persons will be confined to jail.

Twenty-four building permits were issued last week, representing $140,650. The records since April 1 show that 383 permits have been issued, involving $1,528,522.83.

A marriage license was issued by the clerk of the court yesterday to Jeff Oreville Hicks, of Del Ray, and Eleanor Edith Saffel, of Braddock Heights, Arlington county.

Frank T. Stone returned last night from Richmond, where he attended the meeting of the State board of pharmacy. Mr. Stone, who is a member of the executive tion of Retail Druggists, held a conference with members of the board regarding drug conditions in northern Virginia.

Court Holds Up Man's Burial On In-Laws' Plot

A rule, which has the effect of a temporary restraining order, designed to prevent an alleged trespass on a family burial plot in Oak Hill cemetery by the proposed burial of an "in-law," was issued yesterday by Justice Stafford in equity court, returnable November 18.

The plaintiffs are Fred W. Cissell, 70 Adams street northwest, and his brothers Harry and Samuel and their sister, Mrs. Julia C. Moore, grandchildren of the late Maj. F. A. Whitney, U. S. A., who died in the Philippines. The defendants are Mrs. Margaret B. Reed, 6713 Thirty-third street northwest, sister of the plaintiffs. The deceased is William T. Reed, husband of Mrs. Reed, who died November 10.

It was planned, according to the plaintiffs, to bury Reed yesterday at 3 p. m. in the plot inherited by the Cissell family from Maj. Whitney.

According to the bill filed for the plaintiffs by Attorneys Dickey and Criz, there hardly is room left in the plot for the remaining members of the Cissel family, let alone a person not related to them by blood and who does not inherit the right under the Whitney will to be buried therein.

The plaintiffs have not consented to have their brother-inlaw buried in their plot, they declared, and they will not consent because of the lack of burial space.

The rule will have the effect of requiring the undertakers, Samuel Gasch's Sons, and the Oak Hill cemetery authorities, also named defendants in the plaintiff's bill, to deposit Reed's body in the receiving vault until the court hears the plaintiffs on the merits of their bill for a permanent restraining order.

Should the undertaker or the cemetery authorities permit the burial of Reed in the Cissel plot, the wife of the latter and the undertaker and the cemetry authorities will be required to show cause why the body should not be disinterred and placed elsewhere. The rule provides for such a contingency.

ALL SOULS' MEMORIAL CHURCH TO HOLD BAZAAR

Home-Cooked Dinner to Be Feature of Fete Thursday and Friday.

YOUNG WOMEN TO ASSIST

A home-cooked turkey dinner will be one of the features of the annual bazaar to be held in the parish of All Souls' Memorial church, Cathedral and Connecticut avenues, Thursday and Friday. The dinner will be served Thursday evening from 5:30 until 7 o'clock. The bazaar will open at 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon and will continue until Friday evening. Tea will be served Friday from 4 until 6 o'clock.

Miss Agnes Miller will have charge of the dinner, assisted by Mrs. John W. Burke and Mrs. William S. Quinter. Young women of the parish will serve.

Christmas suggestions as well as practical household conveniences will be on sale at the bazaar, which will be conducted under the auspices of the Rector's Aid society, of which Mrs. Frank S. Bright is president.

Tables of fancy work and seasonable novelties will be arranged by Mrs. George Y. Worthington and Mrs. Robert S. French. Mrs. H. L. West, Mrs. Thomas Eagan, Mrs. Louis S. Greene and Miss Anne Moore will have tables of household utilities, including hearth brooms, aprons and kitchen accessories.

Dolls of all sizes with complete wardrobes will be displayed by Mrs. J. B. Torbet. Mrs. George Eastmont will tempt the housewife with home delicacies, including jellies, jams, pickles, cakes and salads.

Decorations will be arranged by Mrs. H. H. D. Sterrett, wife of the rector; Mrs. Robbert Sterrett, Mrs. John A. Sterrett and Mrs. W. D. Sterrett.

PARIS LATINS RAISE PRICE AT CONCERTS

Paris, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—The "Rouge concerts" have been revived in the Latin quarter after ten years' interruption and there is joy among the long-haired men and short-haired women who keep the flame of intellect bright in the purlieus of the Boulevard Montparnasse.

Established 30 years ago, the Rouge orchestra—small but select—until laid low by the war, dispensed boiled-down masterpieces and refreshments in return for the modest sum of 1.25 francs. In New premises along the Rue d'Odessa, in the heart of the quarter, within a stone's throw of where Whistler sprang to fame, the price has been raised to 10 francs.

Many artists now famous won their spurs on the little low platform. Jaques Thibaud, the violinist, was discovered there by Edouard Colonne, the eminent conductor and launched on his brilliant career.

ARMY-NAVY WAR GAME TO HAVE HUGE AIR FORCE

Ninety Aerial Fighters to Fly in Narragansett Bay Action Next May.

PLANS BEING ARRANGED

According to present arrangements, the joint army-navy maneuvers at Narragansett bay next May will see the largest American air force ever assembled in operation Ninety aerial fighting craft will accompany 77 fighting ships of the battle fleet when it leaves its Pacific bases February 19, to operate with the scouting fleet in the Atlantic.

The air squadrons of the scouting fleet and army airplanes, also, will operate in the maneuvers which are being arranged between Admiral C. F. Hughes, commander in chief of the United States fleet, and Maj. Gen. Preston Brown, Boston, commanding First Corps area.

Joint army and navy exercises also are planned at the Canal Zone in March while the battle fleet is on its way to the Atlantic coast, and it also will engage the scouting fleet and control force in Cuban waters that month.

Steaming north April 23, the entire war fleet of the country, except the battle ships of the scouting fleet and submarine divisions of the battle fleet, will reach New York May 1, where the vessels will anchor and their crews will have shore leave.

On May 16, the United States fleet, including the battle fleet scouting fleet, fleet base force and control force, comprising 133 vessels with 150 airplanes, will proceed to the area of Narragansett bay for the joint army-navy maneuvers.

A general conference will be held during the week of May 22 by officers to determine the results of the maneuvers and study the lesson of the war game.

BIRDS AND ANIMALS EXPECT COLD WINTER

Livingston, Mont., Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—If birds and animals know anything about the weather, it's going to be a long winter, predicts M. P. Skinner, field naturalist for Yellowstone park.

"Ground squirrels began to hibernate 10 days earlier than usual," says Mr. Skinner. "Woodchucks went into seclusion two weeks before their ordinary winter bedtime and red pine squirrels started to gather pine cones much sooner than customary. Such nests of hibernating animals as I have opened are a good deal deeper this fall, indicating they are digging to get away from the frost.

"Birds from the north are coming in greater numbers and considerably in advance of the expected time."

Lonesome Student Dances With Girl He Sought in Ad

Lewis A. Hester, of Clarendon, Va., known as the "Lonsome Sophmore," of St. John's college, in Annapolis, was anything but lonesome when he appeared at a roof garden in Baltimore last night. In his arms as he circled the dance floor was Miss Maxine Rankin, of Baltimore, a young woman whom he had never seen before and whom he never would have seen had he not advertised.

"If I don't get a girl soon," said Hester to a classmate last week, "I am going to advertise."

"Well, why don't you," challenged the classmate. "I will pay for it."

The next day Hester's advertisement appeared in an Annapolis newspaper. And that night the deluge of replies began. Miss Rankin sent him a telegram asking him to telephone to her. He did, and a meeting was arranged. When the couple appeared on the roof garden last night there was a big crowd on hand to cheer them.

Evidence in Chicago Sewage Case Sets Record for Bulk

Out of 27 years' litigation over lake water diversions for Chicago's sewage disposal has emerged the transcendent problem of what to do with the evidence.

The case, which already has established new frontiers in the history of American jurisprudence, both for the number of States involved and the diversity and complexity of issues, may achieve immortal distinction through the introduction of rubber-tired motor trucks for the mobilization of exhibits.

Only the celebrated case of Jarndyce vs. Jarndyce, preserved for the world in Charles Dickens' "Bleak House," now stands rival for long sustained legal action in a non-shooting controversy, and even that record may fall under the bulk of maps, charts and tables now being unloaded daily at the door of Charles E. Hughes, the Supeme Court's special master in the case.

With long-based taxicabs already in use to cart about the evidence, those in charge are looking with concern to the transportation problem of the future. The log of Christopher Columbus' first transatlantic voyage has been searched for reference to the American water level in 1492, and the documents relating to the case date from that time.

ALEXANDRIA TRADES COUNCIL APPROVES FREE SCHOOL PLAN

Other Aid Sought for Mrs. Howard's Proposal of Night Classes.

USE OF LEE BUILDING IS OFFERED BY BOARD

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
124 N. Patrick St., Alexandria, Va.

The Alexandria Trades Council, representing all branches of organized labor in this vicinity, has given its indorsement to the plan presented by Mrs. T. Clifton Howard for the establishment of a free night school, and the aid of other organizations is being sought.

Mrs. Howard, accompanied by Mrs. George E. Pickett, Mrs. George Buddin and Mrs. J. S. Blackwell, all of whom are interested in school matters, appeared before the trades council and outlined their plan, stating that their investigations have shown that there are at least 70 persons who are unable to attend day schools and would be benefited by the night school, with the probability that many others who are employed during the day would take advantage of it.

They have asked that all organizations and individuals interested communicate with them, and the plan will be desribed fully. The city school board has offered the use of the Lee school.

Miss Emma M. Giles, chairman of the campaign in Alexandria for funds to establish a chair of nursing at the University of Virginia, is in receipt of a letter from Miss Martha V. Baylor, president of the Graduate Nurses' Association of Virginia and general director of the endowment fund drive, acknowledging $1,949.88 sent by the Alumnae Association of the Alexandria Hospital. Alexandria was asked to raise $1,500.

The first annual banquet given by Robert H. Cox, teacher, to the members of the Valiant Knights' Bible class of the First Baptist church Friday night was attended by 125 guests. Ervin C. Brooks, president, presented a pair of gold cuff links to the host on behalf of the class, and also gave a brief history of its organization.

The principal speaker was Jere M. H. Willis, of Fredericksburg, Va., and others on the program were the Rev. P. L. Vernon, Robert H. Cox, George Bartlett, vice president, and Elliott F. Hoffman. Music was by the quartet from the First Baptist church, Washington; Richard R. Snellings, H. F. Remy, J. A. Ryan and H. F. Ryan, accompanist, and Thomas Clarke.

A concert was given Friday night in the Young People's building by the Citizens' band, for the benefit of the Henry K. Fields Bible class of the Southern Methodist church. The Leonardo quartet, an organization of local talent, organized 35 years ago, and composed of J. Gordon Phillips, Lewis E. Monroe, A. L. Nalls and Frank W. Smith, sang.

The Rev. Joseph R. Sevier, of Hendersonville, N. C., who is to conduct a ten days' evangelistic service at the Second Presbyterian church, beginning with the service this morning, is being entertained by the church at the George Mason hotel. He was pastor of the local church fifteen years ago. The services will be held each day at 10 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.

Harry Hammond, secretary-treasurer of the Mutual Ice Co., has directed all drivers of ice wagons and trucks not to drive on King street, other than for ice delivery, to assist in relieving the crowded traffic on that thoroughfare.

John Dixon, colored, charged with felonious assault with a knife on Fred Ware, colored, Friday night at the corner of Wolfe and Alfred streets, has his case continued in police court yesterday morning, as Ware is in the Alexandria hospital and unable to appear.

Policeman Bayliss, who is engaged in inspecting weights and measures, reported having recently closed four gasoline pumps, condemning them for incorrect measure, caused by faulty mechanical construction.

The week of prayer under the leadership of the Golden Links Missionary society of the Methodist Episcopal Church South closed with a talk by Mrs. William Lewis Lipps, of the local society, and Mrs. T. A. Groover, conference superintendent of young people of Mount Vernon Place church, Washington.

linson, who wrecked the Packard-Curtiss entry Friday on the eve of the race, drove the Hawk to make sure that America would have at least one to finish. When the others were all through he came with a zooming flourish. Her time was 1 hour 35 minutes 16.72 seconds for a speed average of 136.953 miles per hour.

Race Superbly Run.

Lieut. Bacula, pilot of No. 3 plane, evidently was ordered to loaf around the course in his plane to save up and take no chances of letting the Hawk win. His speed of 218.006 obviously was not all that the 800-horsepower plane was capable of.

Major de Bernardi's race was superbly run. He made his first lap in 7 minutes 47.11 seconds, at the rate of 239.443 miles per hour, his worst lap. After the first lap of 31.07 miles, he picked up gradually and never again during the race dropped below 247 miles per hour. His speed by laps was first, 239.443; second, 247.077; third, 248.52; fourth, 247.103; fifth, 247.886; sixth, 248.492; seventh, 247.207. The total time of his run for the 350 kilometer triangular course was (217.4725 miles) 52 minutes, 56.22 seconds. Other times were:

Bacula, 59 minutes, 51.30 seconds.

Tomlinson, 1 hour 35 minutes 16.72 seconds.

Schilt, 56 minutes 23.96 seconds.

The times taken for the two flyers who were forced out of the race were given as of the last time the planes crossed the finish line. Capt. Ferrarin went out just after he had completed his third trip, and Lieut. Cuddihy went into the water only after starting toward the home pylon on his last trip.

The Curtiss plane failed to show all that was expected of it and its best lap fell far below the performance of the Italian victor. Lieut. Cuddihy made his fastest lap in 7 minutes 43.71 seconds, a speed of 242.16 miles per hour, while the machine before the race was reported as capable of 256 miles per hour.

Congratulations by Officials.

"I want to congratulate the Italian team on winning the Schneider cup and capturing official seaplane records. Italy deserves great credit for the recent advance she has made in design and construction over her previous entries."

Glenn Martin, one of the hundreds of builders of airplanes, in announcing that he might himself build a racer to go to Italy for the race next year said:

"America should have had the latest in aeronautical design and not have attempted the race with the planes they had. The navy pilots without exception flew expertly and did the best they could with the ships they had. The planes of Italy have demonstrated to us that we must look to our aeronautics."

125 CAPITAL PUPILS RATED AS GENIUSES BY TEST FOR 21,188

6,234 HAVE BRILLIANT MINDS, STATES REPORT

Half of Total Enrollment Above or Below Average Capacity.

One hundred and twenty-five children with an intelligence of from 41 to 86 per cent greater than the average for their years, were found among 21,188 elementary school children given the Binet test in the District schools last year.

This was revealed by Superintendent of Schools Ballou in the seventh section of his annual report, released yesterday, which included the annual report of Miss Jessie La Salle, assistant superintendent of schools, in charge of the department of educational research for the white schools.

Miss La Salle's tabulation of the results of the Binet test for the 21,188 pupils showed that in addition to the 125 geniuses, there were 6,234 brilliant pupils from 11 to 40 per cent above the average intelligence for their age; 10,133 of average intelligence, 3,714 "dullards," 975 "typical," of from 51 to 75 per cent of average intelligence, and 7 "noneducable" pupils below 50 per cent of average intelligence.

Study Adjustments Needed.

The score in the Binet tests represents the difference between the age of the child and its mental age, the average child being rated at 100 per cent. Thus a 10-year-old child with a mental age of 15 years is rated a genius with a score of 150 per cent, and conversely a 15-year-old child with an intelligence of 10 years is rated at two-thirds of normal intelligence with a score of 66 plus per cent.

There still remain 14,869 elementary school pupils to be tested, but on the basis of results already obtained, Miss LaSalle said:

"We safely can assume Washington public schools have a range of intelligence from 50 to 186 I. Q., distributed in groups as follows: 212, geniuses; 10,610 brilliant; 17,245, average; 6,320 dullards; 1,658 a typical, and 12 noneducable pupils." I. Q. means intelligence quotient, which is the ratio between chronological and mental age.

The foregoing figures show more than half of all the elementary school pupils fall either in groups above or below the average and therefore need curriculum adjustments.

Little Trouble With Average.

"The public schools have been having little trouble with the academic success of the average child in the elementary schools," Miss LaSalle said. "The problems lie with the groups above and below the average. According to this, therefore, (the above figures) 10,822 above average children and 7,978 below average pupils need curriculum adjustments—a total of 18,800 or more than half the elementary school enrollment."

This problem has been met partly by organization of special classes for those above and below normal intelligence. Approximately 500 children are in 22 dullard opportunity classes and 1,000 in 28 acceleration classes for the children who can do more than one year's work in one year. As yet only 8 per cent of the dullard and 9.4 per cent of the brilliant children are having some attempt made to adjust the school to their mental capacity by means of such group divisions in teaching them.

One of these schools with the special classes with an enrollment of 700 pupils, has reduced failures from 69 to 28, an approximate reduction of from 10 to 4 per cent. This means a saving in re-teaching 41 pupils. The report from this school was said to be typical of results being accomplished in all of them.

Socks Will Be Made By Women Prisoners

San Francisco, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Socks will be the center of a program of industrial activity designed to keep women prisoners busy when the new three-story, steam-heated women's building is completed at San Quentin penitentiary.

Machines will be installed on which the women will make all the socks needed by nearly 3,000 male convicts, as well as all the stockings they themselves need. There will also be looms on which the women will weave all the blankets used at San Quentin.

U. S. WORKER DIES

Harris & Ewing.

GEORGE L. DANT,
520 Seventh street southwest, for 34 years employed in the engraving department of the bureau of engraving and printing, who died yesterday.

G. L. DANT, ENGRAVING BUREAU WORKER, DIES

George L. Dant, for 34 years employed in the engraving department of the United States bureau of engraving and printing, died yesterday morning in his home, 520 Seventh street southwest.

Mr. Dant was a native of Washington and was well known for his works of charity among the poor and those in distress. He was a graduate of Georgetown university and was a member of the Southwest Citizens association. He also was a member of the advisory board of the American Security Trust Co., a director of the Mutual Serial Building association, member of the Catholic Charities, Knights of Columbus, Society of St. Vincent de Paul and treasurer of St. Dominic's conference.

Mr. Dant is survived by two brothers, Joseph Dant and J. Blake Dant, and a sister, Miss Ella Y. Dant, all of Washington. Funeral services will be held at 9 a. m. tomorrow in St. Dominic's church, Sixth and E streets southwest.

9 Hurt at Ohio Game When Bomb Explodes

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Nine persons were injured at the Ohio stadium today when a mortar bomb, fired in the pregame celebration, exploded in the midst of 6,000 people seated on a temporary grandstand, at the Ohio State-Michigan game.

The bomb, intended to add color and noise to the game, failed to explode in the air, and was wafted into the stadium's open end by a strong south wind and burst after it hit the floor planking of the bleachers.

FLYING TACKLE FELLS BANDIT ON BROADWAY

obi. As he sped along Broadway, firing, Beck made his flying tackle and brought him to the sidewalk.

A tussle followed, with Grogan trying to get in a position to shoot Beck. Hundreds had gathered to watch the battle and police reserves were rushing in from side streets in response to shrieks of a burglar siren Hoffman had turned on.

The first policeman to arrive at the spot where Grogan was struggling with Beck fired at the bandit. After passing through Beck's knee the bullet penetrated Grogan's chest and his revolver fell from his grasp.

"I wanted to get that clerk (Jacobi) and not to shoot a policeman," Grogan said in hospital.

Shortly after the attempted jewelry store robbery three armed men held up two employes of the Reuben H. Donnelly Co., publishers of a telephone directory, in Twenty-third street, just off Broadway, and robbed them of an $11,000 pay roll.

THIRD RUM SUBMARINE CAPTURED ON LAKE

rines on Lake Champlain proved their usefulness."

The existence of these "mystery boats" has been known to the authorities for some time, said Capt. J. B. Kendricks, lake patrol chief, today. Reports reached him last spring that New York and Vermont bootleggers had combined and had under construction three craft that could be towed under water.

The customs men were fooled the first time they stopped one of the towing launches, but later one of the strange craft was found adrift with 5,000 bottles of ale, in Broad lake. Then followed the capture of the second, with 4,000 bottles, as it was being towed on a 175-foot hawser. It had not been submerged quickly enough.

All three of the boats captured measured about 28 feet in length. They are equipped with towing rings fore and aft. The decks are completely covered with a small entrance that may be sealed against the water. Periscopes serve a double purpose in these craft. Both air and vision are had through them.

STANDARD CLASSICS REGARDED TOO BOLD FOR MOVIE SCREEN

But Milliken, at Farm Youth Meeting, Asserts They Aid Reading.

SAYS "SCARLET LETTER" WAS PURGED FOR USE

Public Would Not Countenance Its Stark Tragedy, He Declares.

Standard classics have to be placed under the steam roller, flattened out to a level taste, and then put through a refining process to remove plain treatment of the immoral dramatic tragedy, and other undesirable elements before they are adaptable to the American screen, it was brought out before the convention of the American Country Life association yesterday at the Willard hotel.

Kenyon L. Butterfield, East Lansing, Mich., president of the association, made the proposition to former Gov. Carl E. Milliken of Maine, representing the Hays organization, that the production of "standard books" should be waived, since, he said, the soul is taken out of them and the "beauty of the English lost" in the screen versions.

Milliken admitted that the old accepted works are "toned down" to fit the uses of the screen, but declared their presentation has greatly stimulated the reading of classics, as shown by statistics.

Discusses "The Scarlet Letter."

He disclosed some interesting facts concerning what had to be done to "The Scarlet Letter," by Nathaniel Hawthorne. He said:

"There was for a long time considerable discussion over the question of whether 'The Scarlet Letter' should be presented at all. However, when it finally was decided to present it on the screen it became apparent that the stark tragedy would have to be let down, for an audience would not countenance the tragedy contained in the book for an hour and a half.

"Then other parts had to be changed. If the character Dimmesdale, the minister, had been presented as Hawthorne delineated him there would have been a riot in this country. Dimmesdale undoubtedly was changed through conferences with ministers."

Holds Taste Is Improving.

Milliken declared the taste of the country in respect to movies is improving. He urged the representatives of the farm youth agencies present to use their influence with local exhibitors in the small towns to procure better pictures.

Farm youths must depend on town taste, it was declared, even though they do not like it. Milliken proposed as a remedy that the local town exhibitors be informed of what was desired.

He repeated the dictum of Hays that no movies would be passed that contradicted, discouraged, or "poked fun" at the Volstead act.

Meeting Comes to End.

International rural trends were discussed by speakers at the annual banquet which closed the convention last night. Dr. C. J. Galpin spoke on "Europe's Farm Youth." Dr. A. A. Mann discussed "Rural Europe's Tendencies."

Miss Grace E. Frysinger, of the Department of Agriculture, spoke on "The Women of Rural Europe." E. C. Lindeman, an editor of the New Republic magazine, told of conditions in Denmark, and the effect of the tourist influence which he says is invading that country.

There still is a bright hope for Russia, E. T. Colton said in an address on Russia. Butterfield spoke of the possibility of an international farm cooperation, the "seeds" of which have already been planted in an international conference at Brussels, he said.

Woman, 72, Ends Life With Razor on Farm

Petersburg, W. Va., Nov. 13.—Mrs. D. C. Mongold, 72, ended her life at her home near here yesterday by cutting her throat. She left the house about noon saying she was going to feed the pigs.

She was found two hours later in a corncrib, her throat cut and a razor nearby. She is survived by her husband and several children.

Berlin Divorce Mill Is Working Overtime

Berlin, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Berliners are rushing to the divorce courts with nearly twice the frequency they sought those tribunals before the war.

Statistics reveal some 8,000 divorces in 1925, as against 4,600 in 1913, while marriages dropped from 36,000 in the year before the war to 35,100 last year.

Pretzel Peddlers Do a Good Business

New York, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—What's the crookedest business in Manhattan? The pretzel business, and the pretzel venders sell their husky-looking twisters from coaster wagons, baskets and corner stands everywhere.

And though their trade is not as funny as the name implies, dealers in chestnuts also do a thriving business.

PUBLIC HEARING CALLED ON CHANGES IN ZONINGS

Meeting to Be Held Nov. 24, on Proposed Lifting of Various Restrictions.

HEIGHT LIMIT INVOLVED

A call was issued yesterday for a public hearing at 10 a. m., November 24, in the District building, on proposed zoning changes.

Among the requested rezoning projects is one from the American Security & Trust Co., which asks to have the west side of Twenty-fourth street northwest, from Woodley road to Calvert street, changed from residential B to residential C area and permitted height of buildings increased from 40 to 60 feet, to permit erection of apartment buildings.

The following properties are sought to be changed to commercial C area, with 90-foot height limitation:

Tract bounded by Maine and Maryland avenues and Third and Sixth streets southwest; square bounded by Iowa circle, Vermont avenue and Q street northwest, and several surrounding lots; west side of Seventeenth street northwest, between Q and R streets.

Other proposed changes are:

Northeast corner of Massachusetts avenue and Thirty-eighth street northwest, residential A restricted to residential C; east side of Georgia avenue northwest, between Varnum and Allison streets, residential B to first commercial C, and residential B area in tract bounded by Rabdolph, Eighth and Quincy streets and Georgia avenue, from 40-foot to 60-foot height restriction.

Smith officially will represent the War Department. Maj. Gen. Creed C. Hammond, chief of the militia bureau, War Department; Col. John W. Gulick and Col. Frederick B. Shaw and Lieut. Cols. Nobel J. Wiley and John P. McAdams also will attend.

Musolit Club Hears Talks on Paris Trip

Sidelights of a recent trip to Paris and other cities of the continent were given members of the Musolit club Friday night by Whitefield McKinley and Thomas H. R. Clarke. Mr. McKinley treated the sociological phases of Parisian life. Present interracial relationships in France, he stated, were due to the economic situation.

A contrast of the architectural magnitude and beauty of Paris with cities of the United States, was made by Mr. Clarke. He expressed surprise that he had found that the French woman has withstood the feminist movement, which, he said, was conspicuous in America by comparison. He also gave detailed accounts of the successes of Josephine Baker and Florence Mills on the Parisian stage.

Alumni to Be Host To Ousted President

Dr. Henry Suzzallo, ousted last month as president of the University of Washington by the governor of the State, will be the guest of the Washington chapter of the University of Washington Alumni association, at its luncheon tomorrow in the Cosmos club.

Dr. Suzzallo was placed on an "indefinite leave of absence," from his university October 3, following a conflict in his policies and those of the governor of the State. The move was followed by a mass meeting in Seattle at which a petition was drafted asking the recall of the governor. The luncheon will be attended by residents of Washington State as well as alumni of the university.

GEN. NOBILE WILL OPEN GEOGRAPHIC LECTURES

Address on North Pole Flight to Launch National Society Series Nov. 26.

NO AFTERNOON TALKS

The 1926-1927 lecture season of the National Geographic society begins November 26, in the Washington auditorium, with an illustrated address by Gen. Umberto Nobile, navigator of the Norge in its famous flight across the north pole. The lectures will be held evenings only.

The society's announcement to members explains that this arrangement will accommodate all members who previously attended afternoon and evening lectures, will relieve speakers of the hardship of speaking twice within a few hours, while newest and best projection machines and an amplifying device will enable members to see and hear from any seats used.

Among the speakers on the season's program are Prince William of Sweden, who will tell of his big game hunts in the pygmy lands of Africa; Lieut. Comdr. Richard E. Byrd, jr., U. S. N., retired, who will tell of the first flight to the north pole; Sir Alan Cobham, who will describe his famous flight from London to Cape Town; Dr. Thomas A. Jaggar, who studies volcanoes from his home laboratory perched on the edge of Kilauea, Hawaii, and Knud Rasmussen, who will relate his adventurous 20,000-mile trek through the frozen north by dog sled.

Richard Halliburton will describe and picture his trip along the route which Ulysses roamed, including his swimming the Hellespont where Leander met his death, and George Finlay Simmons is on the program to tell of his trips back and forth across the south Atlantic in a tiny "windjammer," one-third the size of Columbus' Santa Maria.

Lumberton, N. C., Fire Causes $250,000 Loss

Lumberton, N. C., Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Two stores were nearly destroyed and two other buildings were badly damaged by fire here today, causing an estimated damage of $250,000.

The blaze started in a storage house of the Caldwell department store and spread rapidly when tanks of linseed oil, turpentine and denatured alcohol exploded.

The fire was in the business district and it was feared it would sweep to several nearby buildings. Calls for assistance were sent to the Fayettesville, Maxton and Fort Bragg fire departments.

CLASSICAL CLUB HEARS MRS. MITCHELL CARROLL

No Period Like Golden Age of Greece, Says League Head.

MEET IN GUNSTON HALL

Mrs. Mitchell Carroll, who has spent a year of study in Greece, gave an illustrated lecture on "Athens" before the Washington Classical club at Gunston hall last night. Mrs. Carroll is president of the Art and Archaeology league.

The speaker referred to the history of the Classical club, which was founded in 1908 by the late Dr. Mitchell Carroll. As president, he brought many distinguished men to address the club, including Lord Bryce, then British Ambassador to the United States.

"Lord Bryce was a firm believer in classical training," said Mrs. Carroll. "He declared we make a mistake in living so entirely in the present. As a result, the power of broad thinking suffers. He maintained that a knowledge of the best thought of Greece and Rome is valuable, not only to the historian and statesman, but to all men of affairs. Many will agree that an acquaintance with Greek art is an intellectual and spiritual asset to every man or woman.

"More than 2,000 years have passed since Athens gave to the world her supreme achievements in the arts. No period since, however great, has equaled the Golden Age of Greece. Today, architects may revel in skyscrapers, and so-called modern artists may experiment with cults and isms, but the soul-satisfying standards of taste, established some 20 centuries ago in Athens, have preserved for our monumental buildings and works of art the classic ideals of beauty."

The lecture presented by means of lantern slides the many historical sites and structures of ancient and modern Athens. In conclusion a view was shown of the new marble Gennadeion, recently dedicated at Athens. This building contains the priceless library of manuscripts and books given to the American School of Classical Studies in Athens by Dr. Johannes Gennadius, Greek scholar and diplomat.

This rare collection, made over a period of 50 years, has greatly augmented the facilities of this American school as a center for scholarly research. It was while Dr. Gennadius was in Washington on a diplomatic mission that, at the suggestion of Dr. Mitchell Carroll, he decided to make this contribution.

SOLDIERS OF FRANCE ON RHINE ARE MADE PAUPERS BY FRANC

Coln That Once Bought Goose and Champagne Barely Brings a Pretzel.

OFFICERS NO LONGER SEEN IN RESTAURANTS

French Now Unprofitable to Them, Germans Are Saying "Heraus Mit Em."

(Special Cable Dispatch.)

Mayence, Nov. 13.—By the simplest mathematics it takes at least seven unhealthy little French francs to weigh the scales against one sturdy mark. This cold fact has more to do with the current unrest in the Rhineland than the idealists either of Paris or Berlin dream.

The French army of occupation can hold the bridgeheads and fulfill the other duties under the treaty of Versailles until 1935, unless that much-battered document is further mutilated, but armed with francs it can not fight the cost of living in regenerated Germany. Its 52,000 soldiers garrisoned at Coblenz, Mayence and a score of little towns in Rhenish Prussia, Rhenish Hesse and the Bavarian Palatinate are miserable. With their few francs, they can not go anywhere or do anything.

French prestige has suffered lamentably from this 7-to-1 calculation, over which the Rhinelanders do a lot of private gloating. They have not forgotten the nightmare years of inflation, when the franc looked as big as the sun, when, if you could get French officers billeted in your house you were on Easy street, and when the mere presence of the armies of occupation shielded the Rhineland from the misery under which the rest of Germany shivered.

Gets Everything From France.

So now the Rhinelander's natural desire to see the invader gone no longer is obscured by business instincts. The French army can not buy its produce in the Rhineland. It sends to France for everything except the feed for the horses and a few potatoes. Its dapper officers no longer decorate the heavy gilded restaurants of the great hotels of Mayence, Wiesbaden and Coblenz. They can not afford to stir from the clubs which form a part of the army cooperative society and which buys food, clothes, cigarettes, everything, in France. The few officers and noncommissioned officers who are wealthy enough to keep their families here buy from the cooperative society too.

"These people have got nothing more to give us—heraus mit 'em! Their country is bankrupt, let them go home to work." This is the sentiment all along the French zone of the Rhineland. All of which means that every turn of slow moving post-Thoiry negotiations is followed with fervid interest. The nationalist agitators from the other side of the Rhine find a fertile field and there is no longer reason or desire to overlook even the slightest incidents in the garrison towns.

Soldier Desperately Unhappy.

One of the most pathetic figures is the youngster doing his eighteen months of forced service. Despite the heroic efforts of the army to keep him happy, he is desperately unhappy in the Rhineland.

With his few pitiful francs is not the chance for an independent carousal. Even the most innocent amusements are out of his reach and he is forced to satisfy all of his instincts for pleasure in the black walls of the Foyer des Soldats, which has inherited the goods and spirit of the Y. M. C. A.

The apple-cheeked maidens, who forgot patriotism to hang their arm on the skyblue uniform a few years ago, now snub him for the solid German lads who may dig ditches, but get marks for it.

In the old inflation days when the mark found new depths, the cafes were packed with privates, the hotels with officers and everybody sent for his father, mother, brother, sweetheart, sister or aunt and fed them on roast goose, chestnuts and champagne for a franc a plate — equivalent then to about 1,000,000 marks. Today one franc will buy two small sized pretzels.

Beer Too High to Buy.

The cheapest bock beer costs more than 3 francs. A tall stein of Pilsener with foam atop costs 6 frincs. Two weeks' pay for a private just buys a balcony seat at the movies.

In a week spent in the Rhineland, the correspondents saw not a single officer dining in any hotel. He saw two non coms making a cup of coffee last a long time in a corner of the "Holy Ghost" beer hall at Mayence, while all the customers started at the unwonted sight. And the yell that goes up now when it is a question of billeting a French officer!

Follies Girl, Injured, Sues for $100,000

Philadelphia, Nov. 13 (By A. P.). Alleging a defective stairway had caused her to fall and suffer what she feared are permanent injuries, Ruth Grace, of New Orleans, a member of the Ziegfeld Follies, who appeared here in October, today filed suit against the Nixon-Nirdlinger New Forrest Co., owners of the Forrest theater, for $100,000.

The dancer's statement set forth she had tripped on a defective step while descending from her dressing room on the third floor to the second floor and suffered severe injuries to her back and leg, which may destroy her grace, so essential to a professional dancer.

$50,000,000 Spanish Gold Still in Treasure Island

Pieces of Eight, Doubloons, Bars, Says Cleveland Museum Curator, Buried by Pirates, Waiting to Be Dug Up.

Cleveland, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Doubloons, piece of eight, and treasures of the Spanish seas lie buried on a South American treasure island, ready for the person who is willing to dig for $50,000,000.

George Finlay Simmons, curator of ornothology of the Cleveland museum of natural history, said upon his return from the island that the treasure, taken from the Inca Indians, lies undisturbed where it was buried a century ago by two pirates on the island off the coast of Brazil.

Reminiscent of the days of Capt. Kidd, the story of the treasure is replete with lore of roving buccaneers, slashing cutlasses and treasure maps.

One of the hoards, Simmons said, amounts to $40,000,000 and was buried by a Spanish pirate, Jose Santos, who captured a ship laden with gold and silver bars, altar vestments, and candalebras from the churches of Lima, Peru. More than $8,000,000 more was buried on the same island by an English pirate who styled himself "Zulmiro," Simmons said. Records of this "prize" were kept, and were in the possession of the Russian quartermaster of the ship, until he died in the Far East.

Eight expeditions were made to find the treasure between 1800 and 1892, Simmons said, but most of them never reached the desolate coast of the island. Those that did found landmarks recorded on the map wiped out by a landslide.

"Robert Louis Stevenson used the island as the scene of 'Treasure Island,'" Simmons said, "but the loot found in fiction is still there in reality."

Simmons was commander of the Blossom, research ship of the Cleveland museum which cruised the South seas for two and a half years, visited three continents and brought back specimens for the museum's collection.

OPERA "JINX" HITS 3 AT METROPOLITAN

Queena Mario Left Voiceless; Gigli Hurts Ankle; Taucher Undergoes Surgery.

New York, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Beniamino Gigli, Italian tenor, and Curtt Taucher, German tenor, fell victims today to the jinx that stalked into the Metropolitan Opera house last night and struck Queena Mario voiceless before her completion of the role in "La Juive."

Toward the end of the second act of "La Boheme" ths afternoon, Gigli turned his ankle. He winced, but completed the act and took curtain calls. During the intermission, his ankle was bound and he returned for the other two acts. The sprain was said to be not serious.

Taucher was compelled to undergo an operation for mastoiditis today. He was operated on for an abscess in the ear last Sunday, but he sang Monday night in "Tannhauser." Tonight he was reported out of danger.

Enrico Caruso died soon after singing in "La Juive," and Martinelli succumbed to typhoid fever after singing the Caruso role. Rosina Galli found sudden and unexpected difficulty in interpreting solo dances called for in "La Juive."

Union Is Favored By Catholic Alumni

Philadelphia, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—As a means toward furthering the cause of the Catholic higher education, union with the Catholic alumni in Europe was advocated here today in resolutions adopted by the National Catholic Alumni federation.

The activity of the alumni clubs was reported by Judge Charles T. Grave, of the United States circuit court of Cincinnati. Other speakers were John O. Baxendale, of the University of Vermont; William H. Kingsley, Philadelphia, and Dr. C. E. Clewell, of the University of Pennsylvania's new placement service. The latter advocated similar bureaus in all colleges as a means of keeping the alumni and college in closer relationship.

Londoners Ironical On Coolidge Address

London, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—The British press continued to comment on President Coolidge's Kansas City speech. The Sunday Observer realizes regretfully that there is no present hope of American participation in the world court, but at the same time sees that real guarantees for stability in the world will continue to exist, as Premier Bruce of Australia had declared in his Walter Hines Page lecture, though not in documentary form.

The Sunday Times, in a somewhat ironical editorial, makes allusion to Mr. Coolidge's "tone of moral superiority" and declares "eventually America must learn by the stern logic of events that her problems and Europe's can not be separated."

First 3 Marriages "Training," Says Star

New York, Nov. 13 (By A. P.). Princess Divani, of the royal house of Georgia, Russia, known to the movie multitude as Mae Murray, was on the briny deep today with her latest, fourth, and (so she asserted) her last husband.

Prince David Divani, one time a driller's helper in Harry Sinclair's Oil Co., in Oklahoma, was Georgia-bound to see what could be done about getting the royal permission for him to go into the movies too.

Miss Murray was asked if she was happy with the prince. "I never knew what happiness was until now," she replied. "All the rest was merely training."

Boys Are Made Taller By Ultraviolet Rays

Smethwick, England, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Taller and fatter schoolboys are being developed here by the simple expedient of equipping classrooms with a kind of window glass that allows ultraviolet rays to pass into the room.

Dr. J. B. Ferguson, the school medical officer, has reported that during a nine months' test in a classroom so fitted, the boys grew half an inch taller and 3 pounds heavier than colleagues in an adjoining room, lighted by ordinary glass, which, the doctor says, cuts out the vital ultraviolet rays almost completely.

BANK BANDITS SEIZED BY A GAME WARDEN

Waukegan, Ill., Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Thirty minutes after they had robbed the Spring Grove State Bank at Spring Grove, Ill., and escaped with nearly $4,500 in currency, two young bank robbers today quailed before the rifle of Victor O. Siegler, deputy State game warden, surrendered the money and submitted to arrest.

In the county jail they gave their names as George Nelson and John Such, both of Chicago.

Siegled heard of the robbery, borrowed an army rifle, commandeered an automobile and started in pursuit. The robbers, in their haste, ran against an embankment in a "blind" street, where they were overtaken by Siegler.

Marital Vacation Of 6 Months Decreed

Special to The Washington Post.

New York, Nov. 13.—As a cure for black eyes, heated arguments that result in coldness, and other incidents of domestic warfare, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Long, formerly of Brooklyn, today commenced a six months marital vacation at the suggestion of Magistrate Liota of Fifth avenue court.

With her baby, Helen, Mrs. Long went to the home of her mother, Mrs. Josephine Hanson, in Brooklyn. Mrs. Hanson wasn't surprised to see her daughter home again. This is the fourth time that Mrs. Long has come home. "Both of them are young," said Mrs. Hanson, "and headstrong. This six months vacation should work their problem out for them."

Food for Diplomats Upsets Detectives

London, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Detectives can not eat as much rich food as diplomats, if the experiences of Scotland Yard operatives assigned to guard the dominion prime ministers at the imperial conference are any criterion. The detectives have been suffering from indigestion after attending banquets every night for three weeks.

Mackenzie King, of Canada, and Stanley M. Bruce, of Australia, have withstood the royal banqueting even better than any of the other prime ministers, and have actually taken on weight. The detectives, on the other hand, have become pale and worried in appearance, though they are hanging on gamely at the call of duty.

Great Potash Field Is Found in Russia

Moscow, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Chemical experts of the soviet government declared today that the monopoly of Germany and France in potash production will soon be broken. In the Solikamsk district, in the western part of the government of Perm, Ural mountains, an area of potash-bearing land 30 miles square has been discovered, which is estimated to contain 600,000,000 tons of potash.

The deposits in this area are only 300 feet feet below the surface, while in Germany, the Russian authorities assert, the deposits are generally found only under subterranean water, and in France at a depth of not less than 700 feet.

OPPOSITION IS FILED TO OIL CASE APPEAL

(By the Associated Press.)

Opposition to the appeal of Harry F. Sinclair and Albert B. Fall in the conspiracy case involving the Teapot Dome oil leases was filed by the government yesterday in the Supreme Court.

Fall and Sinclair asked for a review of the District of Columbia Court of Appeals decision which dismissed a plea for quashing the indictment. The appeals court acted under a law depriving it of jurisdiction and Fall and Sinclair appealed the ruling on constitutional grounds. The government argued that the appeal was based on "irrelevant propositions of law."

ITALY DEMANDS NATIONS ADMIT HER PLACE IN SUN

Will Be Obliged to Take What Is Hers by Right, Premier Tells Germany.

MAJORITY HOLDS RIGHTS

Berlin, Nov. 5 (By A. P.). Italy demands that the other powers absolutely acknowledge her "requirements in the sun and on the earth," if not Italy would be obliged to take what is hers by right. Premier Mussolini is thus quoted in an interview at Rome published by the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung.

The duce, however, did not believe that the others would force such an issue. He said to the correspondent that Italy demanded that the other nations practice the liberalism they professed also to Italy and recognize the fascist form of government. Mussolini declared that Italy would soon, possibly in ten years, catch up with the others who were now in the lead.

With regard to Italo-German relations the Italian premier expressed the conviction that nothing existed that was likely to estrange the two nations.

"I cannot consider the rights of minorities a cause of conflict," said he, "for I can counter with the rights of the majorities. The Italian nation is so homogeneously constructed as to differ from most other nations."

The premier was of the opinion that the pending negotiations for an arbitration agreement would ultimately be succesful and concluded: "I firmly believe in happy future German-Italian relations."

JUGOSLAVIA, AFLAME AT ITALIAN POLICY

hour with Foreign Minister Ninchich.

The general opinion in Serbia is that sooner or later war must result. Jugoslavia is in an awkward predicament, and wants to avoid armed conflict if possible, as it feels itself surrounded by enemies and can not risk war with Italy now. On one side is Bulgaria and on the other Hungary, who might attack.

Owing to the peace treaty between Italy and Jugoslavia, a large territory with a population of 600,000 Slavs now belongs to Italy. These minorities, it is charged, are oppressed. Jugoslavia probably will join Austria in a protest to the League of Nations on this question.

BURIAL URN OPENED IN RAID, IS CHARGE

Houston, Tex., Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Charging that prohibition agents broke into an urn containing the ashes of her 8-year-old son and scattered them on the floor while raiding her home November 7, Mrs. Evelyn Edwards filed suit for $30,000 damages here today against George A. Hammons, deputy administrator of the Federal prohibition forces for the Southern district of Texas.

The petition set out that the urn was labeled with the name of the child, the date of his death, and was covered with a photograph of the boy and his dog. Notwithstanding the caution of a nurse, the agents pried into the urn with a knife, the petition alleges, scattered the ashes about the room and jeered at a suggestion of a regard of the mother for the boy's remains.

Mrs. Edwards alleges that a quart of whisky which the agents assert was found in her home was "planted."

New York, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Mrs. Beatrice Mary Hackett, wife of James K. Hackett, noted American actor who died recently in Paris, is bequeathed his estate, estimated at more than $1,000,000, under his will filed today.

After Mrs. Hackett's death, the estate goes into a fund for the Actors home, Staten Island, N. Y., and funds for the library of the Players' club, the Lambs club and the Actors Equity association.

Alda and Husband Are Living Apart

New York, Nov. 13 (By A. P.). Giulio Gatti-Casazza, general manager of the Metropolitan opera company, and his wife, Mme. Frances Alda, the singer, are living in different places, but deny they have separated.

Mme. Alda explains that when the apartment in which they lived for many years was torn down recently, she moved to her country house, at Great Neck, N. Y., and Mr. Gatti-Casazza moved to a hotel here, in order to be near his work, but that the arrangement was perfectly amicable.

Mandatory Rat War Planned for Berlin

Berlin, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—A three-day war on rats will begin here a week from today. Poison, popguns, small-calibered rifles, fox terriers, rat traps and any other methods for exterminating the pernicious vermin will be in order.

The call to arms is not merely an appeal to the populace. On the contrary, it constitutes a very emphatic injunction to all house and landowners to slay. Disregard of the order will be punishable by a fine up to 150 marks, regardless of whether rats were ever observed on a premises or not.

Outings and Use of Cars Offered for Housemaids

London, Nov. 18 (By A. P.). No nagging, ten weeks' vacation, plenty of fresh eggs and bacon, radios and the use of an automobile are all inducements offered by wealthy London women in search of domestic help, so difficult to get these days. Here are a few "want" ads from London newspapers:

"Housemaids — Ten weeks' holiday in the year, with board and wages. Use of car now and then."

"Maid — Good outings, also whole day and night every three weeks. Plenty of fresh eggs and bacon."

ARCTIC COAL BY AIR, IS BYRD'S PREDICTION

Vast Deposits Believed to Exist in Frozen North, Commander Says.

Chicago, Ill., Nov. 13 (By A. P.). Before 40 years pass the United States will be hauling coal from arctic regions in airplanes. Lieut. Comdr. Byrd, first aviator to fly over the north pole, predicted here today.

He based his prediction upon promise that advances in the airplane industry undoubtedly would soon produce flying machines of almost absolute safety and suitability for heavy commercial use.

Commander Byrd expects in the near future, probably next summer, he said, to fly again to the arctic regions and claim for the United States some million acres of unchartered land north of Siberia and Alaska, where, it is thought, there are many rich coal fields. He also plans a trip to the southern polar regions for the purpose he said, of "popularizing" transarctic airplane travel.

Missionary Makes Head-Hunter Friends

London, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Formosa's 120,000 head hunters have not caused the Rev. Thomas Barclay to lose any sleep in all his 52 years as a missionary on the island, and he has gone back to his work after six months' leave in England.

Dr. Barclay has often spent nights in the head hunters' villages, and always found them quite friendly. But the minister explained he always made his visits when the head hunters were not on the war path.

The head hunters inhabit the mountainous interior of Formosa. The Japanese, masters of the island since the war with China, keep them carefully cut off from the 4,000,000 other inhabitants. The Japanese have at times used live wires as barriers in some places, the minister said.

England Loses Plea Against a Recount

Charleston, W. Va., Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—An effort to prevent a recount of the votes cast in the Sixth West Virginia congressional district failed today when the State supreme court denied a petition of E. T. England, Republican candidate, asking for a writ of mandamus to direct the Kanawha county court to issue a certificate of the official returns without a recount. The Kanawha county commissioners order a recount in that county on petition of Representative J. Alfred Taylor, Democrat, who was defeated by England by 38 votes on the original returns. The recount will be started Monday.

Duchess of Bedford Takes Up Aviation

London, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—The Duchess of Bedford, one of the newest recruits to flying, threatens to become a rival of Mrs. Sophie Elliott Lynn, Britain's pioneer airwoman.

The duchess does not have her own airplane as she prefers to hire one for occasions. She makes frequent trips to Manchester by air, and also always goes to her seat at Newton Stewart, Wigtonshire, by the same method.

The duchess contends that to keep pace with the times, it is much cheaper, in a way, to hire machines and thus avoid the expense of upkeep.

Sanity of Manley, Banker, Up to Jury

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 13 (By A. P.). A jury in superior court is expected to decide Monday whether W. D. Manley, president of the defunct Bankers Trust Co., of Atlanta, is insane.

Attorneys for the former banker have produced testimony by mental experts in an effort to prove Manley insane and thus avoid his prosecution on eighteen indictments growing out of the failure of the trust company and correspondent banks. The State sought by numerous associates of Manley to show he was feigning insanity to escape criminal prosecution.

Buckingham Duchess Scorns Car for Horse

London, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—The Duchess of Buckingham never uses a motor because she prefers her stately carriage and pair of fine bay horses.

GIRL SEEKING REVENGE KILLS MAN IN STREET

HE SOUGHT BLACKMAIL

New York, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—A 16-year-old girl tonight shot and fatally wounded a man as he stepped from a barber shop in the Pronx.

The girl fired two shots at the man and as he fell stepped over his body and fired a third time. Then as the revolver jammed, she turned the gun over to a policeman. When arrested she said she was Catherine Denino, 16, of Evanston, Ill.

The man, who died while being taken to a hospital, was Louis Fino, 34, a tile setter of the Bronx.

Desire for revenge for a wrong done her four years ago brought her alone from Evanston, she said.

Her purpose was accomplished now, she told police and she was content.

Without tears or remorse, she explained that she had been attacked by Fino when she was 12 years old. In 1925 she married Rocco Denino, and the couple went to Evanston to live. Two weeks ago her husband received a letter from Fino, demanding money and threatening exposure. This letter is now in possession of the police.

Brother of Official In Chicago Is Shot

Chicago, Nov. 13 (By A. P.). An attempt to assassinate Morton Kallis, 40, a brother-in-law of Moe Rosenberg, whose brother, Michael Rosenberg, sanitary district trustee, recently was the object for a bomb attack which damaged his home, failed early today when four shots were fired by two men, one bullet wounding him in a leg.

Kallis, head of a printing concern, was about to enter his home, when the men fired from shrubbery. Both escaped. The bombing of the Rosenberg home, the burning of the furniture in a lawyer's office, threats made by telephone and the Kallis attack all have been attributed by police to vengefulness growing out of the recent election.

Mexico Forms Reply To Kellogg Objection

Mexico City, Nov. 13 (By A. P.). Announcement was made by Foreign Minister Saenz today that a reply was being drawn up to the note of Frank B. Kellogg, American Secretary of State, respecting the Mexican land and petroleum laws, to which the United States objects. Saenz said the date on which the note would be forwarded to Washington had not been fixed.

The foreign minister added that the new note of Mr. Kellogg embodies several new viewpoints of the American government, in addition to some already expressed in previous notes and that the Mexican government is being forced to reply with its usual argument upholding the Mexican constitution, against which the protests of the American note refer.

REED'S BIRTHPLACE WILL BE RESTORED AS NATIONAL SHRINE

Movement to Purchase Humble Virginia Home Finally Meets Success.

NATION'S DOCTORS HONOR YELLOW FEVER MARTYR

Deed to Be Held by Medical Society, Which Will Maintain Property.

By DAISY ROWE HEVESSY.

Belroi, Va., Nov. 13.—The humble two-room house here, in which was born the late Walter Reed, U. S. army surgeon, who became famous for his discovery of the cause of yellow fever, in which investigation he sacrificed his life, is to become a national shrine. The movement, begun three years ago, to restore the Reed home, has at last been crowned with success. The recent contribution of $1,000 from the Virginia Medical association, and an additional $500 from various groups, have made possible the transfer of the title to the old house and garden plot to the Walter Reed Medical society which began the movement. This organization will take in hand the work of restoring the old house and see that it is maintained as a shrine.

Already the deed has been prepared transferring cottage and tract of land 100 by 220 feet from its present owner, George D. Stubbs, upon whose farm the old Reed house has been used as tenant property, to the Walter Reed Medical society. This society is composed of members scattered throughout the United States who have been cooperating with the Walter Reed Memorial farm of the University of Virginia.

Sufficient contributions covering the purchase price are now in hand. Future donations will be applied to maintaining the property, which is in Gloucester county, as a fitting memorial to the famous surgeon.

Familiar to Motorists.

Familiar to motorists, this tiny cottage near the Tidewater Highway is about 160 miles from Washington, D. C. Before the door stands the pink crepe myrtle tree, planted years ago by the Rev. Lemuel Sutton Reed at the time he served as pastor of Bellymus M. E. church in Gloucester county. Here in the old-time parsonage of the circuit Walter, his youngest son, was born September 13, 1851. Later the family moved to Harrisonburg, Va., where the children of the preacher received the best schooling to be had under private instruction at that time.

Later Walter Reed, in 1867, attended two sessions at the University of Virginia, where he studied Latin, Greek, English literature and mathematics. In 1868 he studied medicine, and at the end of the session was graduated after one year's work, giving evidence that he was an exceptional student. Following his graduation he went to New York, and matriculated at Bellevue Hospital Medical school. A year later Walter Reed received his M. D. degree. From Harvard university he won his A. M. degree, and the University of Michigan later conferred upon him the LL. D. degree. In 1893 he attended Johns Hopkins university.

Worked Hard at Research.

From the time he was appointed assistant surgeon in the army with the rank of captain, on January 26, 1880, and subsequently surgeon, with the rank of major, on December 4, 1893, to the time of his death, on November 22, 1902, he worked indefatigably in the field of medical and bacteriological research.

Dr. Reed's heroic experiments while serving in the United States army in Cuba to rid the island of yellow fever are the outstanding accomplishment of his life. He believed the mosquito was the transmitter of the plague and to this theory he clung tenaciously in his determination to locate the guilty agent. He found that no less than 700 separate species of tropical mosquitoes exist.

After several years Walter Reed's experiments were no longer a mere theory, but were crowned with success in ridding humanity of the deadliest of diseases. Upon the female stegomyia he placed and proved responsibility for the havoc wrought upon human lives.

Problem Became National One.

In 1898, when Dr. Gorgas became chief sanitary officer for Cuba the problem of ridding the territory of yellow fever became a national one. Centuries of Spanish generations on this island knew no hope or relief from the peril.

One outstanding man of those years was Joseph L. Le Prince, engineer, who was of great assistance in making Havana sanitary. The United States appointed the yellow fever commission composed of Walter Reed, James Carroll, Jesse W. Legear and Aristides Agramonte. Names which now stand high in scientific research and heroism.

Dr. James Carroll permitted himself to be bitten by an infected stegomyia mosquito. He fell ill and narrowly escaped death. He died of a heart affection in 1907. Dr. Legear died September 28, 1900. A tablet to his memory at Johns Hopkins hospital reads:

"With more than courage and devotion of the soldier he risked and lost his life to show how a fearful pestilence is communicated and how its ravages may be prevented."

Lauded by Gen. Wood.

But the memory of Maj. Walter Reed, who learned the cause and concerned himself with the control of yellow fever is one which "makes him great in the eyes of science and greater in his service to his fellow men."

Gen. Leonard Wood, reflecting on Reed's great achievement, said: "I know of no man who has done so much for humanity as Maj. Reed. His discovery has resulted in the saving of more lives annually than were lost in the Cuban war, and the saving for commercial interests of the world of a sum greater than the entire cost of the Cuban war."

The Walter Reed Memorial hospital, occupying sixteen city blocks at Washington, D. C., is the gift of the Federal government and offers specialized training to army officers besides caring for enlisted men—a great tribute to the memory of Reed.

The purchase of the humble home in which Walter Reed was born in this quiet corner of Virginia and its use as a shrine has stirred the admiration and brought support from medical men throughout the world.

The term of the directors is three years, ten of the thirty directors being elected annually.

Federal Workers To Push Legislation

Reaffirmation of its campaign for action on three important measures at this session of Congress was announced from headquarters of the Federation of Federal Employes yesterday. They will be recommended to the Senate and House civil service committee.

They provide for amendment of schedules of the classification act making possible a minimum annual salary of $1,500 for adult government employes regardless of length or type of service, 30 days regular annual leave and cumulative sick leave over a period of years, and abolition of the personnel classification board and transfer of its functions to the Civil Service Commission.

Scranton Prelate Achieved Prominence in Settling Coal Disputes.

MADE STUDIES IN ROME

Scranton, Pa., Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Bishop M. J. Hoban, of the Catholic diocese of Scranton, died shortly before 9 o'clock tonight of pneumonia. He had been ill since Sunday. Earlier in the night priests and nuns had gathered at his bedside and offered prayers when physicians said he could not recover. Bishop Hoban was 73 years old.

Bishop Hoban had been bishop of Scranton for 30 years, coming here from Ashley, Pa., where he was pastor of St. Leo's church.

The Rt. Rev. Michael John Hoban gained wide prominence because of his activities in behalf of the miners in the anthracite coal regions, by whom he was regarded as a welfare leader as well as a spiritual chief.

Bishop Hoban frequently was called upon by the miners for advice and aid in their disputes with the operators. Several times he was credited with bringing the two sides together in amicable agreement, generally favorable to the miners. The confidence of the miners in the bishop was such that even at times when they did not agree with his suggestions they accepted them.

In the World War as a result of his appeals, the Scranton diocese was the first in the United States to contribute its quota of Catholic chaplains and for this he was specially commended by the War and Navy Departments.

Bishop Hoban was born at Waterloo, N. Y., June 6, 1853. At the age of 14 he was sent to St. Francis Xavier college, New York, and later to Holy Cross college. Concluding his college course at Fordham, he entered St. Charles' seminary, Philadelphia, and then was sent to the American College at Rome, where he completed his theological course in 1880 and was ordained priest May 22 of that year by Cardinal Monaco La Valetta.

Returning to the United States he served churches in Pennsylvania for 16 years. In March, 1896, he was consecrated by Cardinal Satolli as titular bishop of Alalis and appointed coadjutor bishop of Scranton. He became head of the diocese on the death of Bishop O'Hara in 1899.

Former Evangelist Sentenced to Prison

Special to The Washington Post.

Danville, Va., Nov. 13.—The Rev. Earl B. Moll, former Methodist evangelist, of Georgia, who, it is charged, passed a number of worthless checks in Southern States last spring, has been sentenced to two years in the penitentiary at Hattiesburg, Miss. Moll pleaded guilty to uttering a worthless check which was cashed by Sheriff Hardy Norseworthy, whose children the evangelist converted.

Moll was arrested here and served 90 days in jail, after which he was extradited to Mississippi.

and once "royal queen." "Dear, dear angel sweetheart" was a salutation, as were "My own dear wonder heart" and "Dear, dear heart of mine."

Burning Sentences Read.

The impatience of the lover was reflected in an expression, "Darling, only seven more days," referring to a separation, and a suggestion for a meeting was alluded to as "seeing you on our road."

One letter spoke of "burning kisses," and another of "holding you for the peace that nothing else brings." "I am not wild nor fierce," said the wirter in another letter, "but peaceful and exalted." "I want to feel the wonder of the universe with you, hold you close with my left hand and stroke your dear face with my right," was one sentence read to the jury.

"I am storing up health and strength to be your gypsy king," was a declaration, and later, "Oh, how I did want to get away with you to dreamland, hebenland. We can have next Friday afternoon together." Once the writer said, "Your letters are a blessing to me" and "I am a lonely boy tonight, but I know there are letters waiting for me."

Counsel Again Clash.

The day closed with the most heated verbal exchange of a turbulent trial for counsel. During the testimony of Bogart T. Conklin, former sheriff of Somerset county, who told of the position in which the bodies of the slain couple were found, Alexander Simpson, special prosecutor, pleaded "surprise" at at the testimony of the witness, declaring it was not exactly in accordance with testimony of the same witness at a grand jury investigation in 1922.

During a discussion of the question, Clarence E. Case, of defense counsel, was referred to as a "boss" by Simpson. The Somerville lawyer in turn spoke of Simpson as "coming from a county of bosses." The court finally intervened. "There must be no talk of bosses here," said Judge Charles W. Parker, presiding.

The prosecutor had alluded during the testimony of Miss Agnes W. Storer, organist of the church where Mr. Hall was rector, to "witnesses who are not hostile but certainly not friendly to the State, since they are friends of one of the defendants."

William J. Grealis told of "spots" on clothing of Willie Stevens carried by the witness to a tailor the day after the bodies were found.

Another automobile was located by William S. Randall, a rural mail carrier, near De Russey's lane about midnight on the night of the slayings. He described it as a "Dodge sedan with lights out and curtains up."

Simpson Sees Doctors.

With nearly 50 witnesses examined, the State was understood to be nearing the end of its list, with the stage fully set for the appearance of Mrs. Janes Gibson, reported eyewitness, who is ill in a Jersey City hospital. Although reports from her bedside seemed none too reassuring, the special prosecutor hoped to have her appear early next week. He left, on adjournment of court today, for a conference with physicians attending her.

The small visiting card which the State has made one of the cornerstones of its case in the Hall-Mills murder trial was made the target of defense fire again today.

Herbert Mayer, reporter for the New York Daily Mirror, resumed the witness stand for cross-examination as to the movements of the card just prior to the time it was photographed in the office of his newspaper, after having been taken from this State by one of the police investigators of the double slaying. Two fingerprint experts, who were present during the photographing in the newspaper office, previously have testified that the card, found at the scene of the crime, bore the imprint of Willie Stevens' left index finger.

Mayer testified that he made two visits to Middletown, N. Y., where the visiting card was examined by Joseph A. Faurot, former fingerprint expert of the New York police department. He said that on the second visit he passed two days in Middletown while Faurot and Frederick Drewen, fingerprint expert of the Jersey City, N. J., police department, examined the card. Drewen earlier had taken the visiting card from New Jersey to the newspaper office.

Holds Card Useless.

The defense contends that whatever evidence the card may bear in the form of fingerprint, it has been made unreliable by the extensive handling of the card during the four years since it was found.

Harry A. Kolb, who was a milkman in 1922, but is now a meat salesman, came to the stand to tell of closing a door when he delivered milk at the Hall home between 4 and 5 o'clock the morning after the double killing. He was not able to describe the door, except "the first one after leaving Redmond street." On cross-examination the defense brought out a sketch of the house in an effort to show that the door might have been one leading to a coal closet.

William J. Grealis, delivery boy for a New Brunswick tailor, testified there were some kind of spots, possibly dark ones, on a vest and around the waistline of trousers of a suit which Willie Stevens ordered him to have cleaned and scoured. Willie insisted, he said, that packages be delivered and received at the rear of the house. The young man attempted to deliver a new suit for Willie at the front door on the evening of the day the bodies were found and was sent to the rear with the information that there was trouble at the house. Once inside the building he attempted to take the old clothes out the front door, only to find Willie taking his arm and leading him to the side door.

"Willie" Very Nervous.

"Willie seemed very nervous," said Grealis.

It was brought out by Defense Attorney Case in cross-examination that when the tailor's errand boy knew Willie Stevens "had a way of getting food on his vest."

"This night, you say, Willie was nervous. Wasn't it the night his brother-in-law had been found murdered? Did you think that strange?" asked Case.

"Yes," answered the witness.

The youth, answering further questions, said it was shorter to return to the tailor shop by the back route suggested by Willie, but it was darker and he was afraid to go that way. Still later he said he never closely examined the spots on the suit which he had received from the Stevens home, but that he "just noticed them."

Peter Tumulty, who was gardener for the Halls when the slaying occurred, was the next witness. He said he had washed one of the family's cars, but not the sedan which the State is trying to prove was at the scene of the crime. Tumulty said he didn't see the sedan on Thursday, except about 10 o'clock in the morning, when some member of the family drove it down town. He left about 5:30 p. m., without having seen the sedan again, he testified. On Friday, the day after the double slaying, the gardener said he worked in the garden and did not notice whether the sedan was in the garage.

"You didn't wash the sedan on Friday?" asked Simpson.

"No," answered the witness. He said the first time he washed the sedan was probably about three weeks after the double slaying.

Never Asked Mrs. Hall.

Miss Agnes W. Storer, organist in the Church of St. John the Evangelist at the time of the killings, testified that on the evening before the bodies were found, which was the regular night for choir practice, Mrs. Hall telephoned her saying Mr. Hall was out of town and would not be present that night.

"You accompanied Mrs. Hall to Italy as her guest?" questioned Simpson.

"Yes," was the reply.

"And yet you never asked her why she phoned you Mr. Hall was out of town when she did not know where he was?"

The question was permitted over what Senator Case described as his "serious objection," and the answer was "No."

On cross-examination, with Simpson objecting, Miss Storer said she was, and is, a friend of Mrs. Hall.

The love letters written by Dr. Hall to Mrs. Mills were read to the jury at the opening of the afternoon session. A Christmas card sent by the minister to the choir singer also was introduced. On the card he had addressed her as "dear heart of mine," and had said that "this red rose, my Christmas gift to you is a symbol of my love for you."

One of the letters contained the phrase "What a gay gypsy you were this afternoon." In another letter the Rev. Mr. Hall wrote of how their love had "opened doors of another world" which he added was a "spiritual world." In still another letter the minister had referred to the choir singer's eyes as "deep wonder eyes of love," and described the "spiritual world" which they had found together as "more beautiful than one of physical beauty."

Quarrels Stepping Stones.

The minister wrote in one letter that "even our quarrels are but stepping stones to a greater love," and described his love as being "mountains of strength and oceans of depth." He told in another letter of how he longed to take her again in his arms and "crush her to him." He referred to her once as "my true mother, my heart, my life always."

Again he wrote "words are all too feeble" to express his affection for her. In one letter he made reference to the fact that Mrs. Mills kept a rose on his desk, and in a later letter he told her he would meet her "this evening by our rose."

"To see you, hold you, press you, pour my burning kisses on your dear, dear body, and enjoy the wonderful things of life." Read Prosecutor Bergen, of Somerset county, when Simpson asked to be given a relief in the reading. This was the first activity of Bergen in the trial. It was at his request that the warrant was issued for the arrest of Mrs. Hall, and Simpson was appointed special prosecutor shortly thereafter.

"A long, long burning kiss into your dear lips and liquid fire into your very soul," was the closing of another letter. "I have been thinking a great deal about prayer," the writer stated. "Have you been praying for me today, I am sure you have. Love and prayer. Isn't psychic influence a wonderful thing? Live, love, mystery, will-power and affection, all are bound up in you."

HOWARD U. TO DEDICATE BOWL THANKSGIVING DAY

MADDEN ASKED TO TALK

Decision of Howard university authorities to hold dedicatory exercises in the new stadium Thanksgiving day, just previous to the Howard-Lincoln football game, and an invitation extended to Representative Martin B. Madden, of Illinois, to make the dedicatory address, were received with interest by alumni and the student body yesterday. The stadium has been converted into a bowl, to accommodate 5,000 more than last year's attendance at Philadelphia, and a record crowd has been indicated by applications for special reservations.

A new tier of seats has been erected to the rear of Clark hall, facing north, and additional seating accommodations are to be provided for approximately 2,000 persons back of the present west tier of sideline seats. Dedication of the stadium will not interfere with preliminary gridiron practice or playing time of the annual classic. The exercises will start at 1 o'clock and consume less than 30 minutes, so that the field will be clear for warming up of the varsity squads at 1:30 o'clock.

Indications pointed yesterday to a gathering here at the holiday season of a more representative group of Howard men and women and well-wishers than ever has assembled in the National Capital. Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, university president, following special receptions by various organizations here, has been received enthusiastically in Indianapolis and Pittsburgh during the last week, and receptions have been arranged at other points. He will be given a special reception in New York two days before the game. All alumni centers have planned excursions here at Thanksgiving time.

Trustees of the university will assemble to participate in the dedicatory exercises. Before they depart, it is expected that a definite and close relationship between alumni and this board will be effected through an association of class secretaries and treasurers, graduate and undergraduate. The alumni secretary, in conjunction with this association, has made special arrangements for "homecoming week," reduced rates having been obtained on railroads in the United States and eastern Canada for graduates and their dependent relatives.

Under auspices of the student "rabble," larger in numbers than at any previous time, in the university chapel at 8 o'clock on the night preceding the annual game, a "pepfest" will be staged in the nature of a football mass meeting. Varsity veterans will be introduced and motion pictures presented of teams of other days in action against the Lincoln "Lions."

A notable feature of the homecoming celebration will be the morning Thanksgiving service in Rankin chapel, at which President Johnson will speak and extend greetings to the alumni.

QUEEN IS DENOUNCED; COMMUNISTS BEATEN

15 feet wide, said: "Down with oppression, murder and torture," and "Queen Marie, remember Cotzofanesti!"

The Daily Worker and handbills distributed by members of the party enlightened spectators as to the meaning of Cotzofanesti, reprinted from the Vienna Rote Fahn (Red Flame), an account of alleged orgies by Roumanian royalty in a city of that name in 1917.

The crowd which welcomed the queen was a neck-craning multitude. There were no cheers. Roumanians, many in native costume, were among the throng.

Pans Forida Trip.

Springfield, Ill., Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Queen Marie will make a trip to Florida before she leaves the country, it was announced on her train today. Previously it was planned for Marie to sail on December 24, but there are indications that she will depart at least two weeks earlier and be able to pass Christmas at home.

Dates of her passage through Virginia, the Carolinas and Georgia have not been determined and will be contingent upon possible change in her sailing date.

Details of the Florida trip have not yet been worked out with officials of the Atlantic Coast Line, over which the party will travel most of the way. Negotiations still are pending also with the Southern railway, which has refused to transport the special train at nominal cost.

Tentative plans call for a motor trip from Columbia, S. C., to Asheville, N. C., on the return trip. Marie will go to Atlantic City from Washington while Prince Nicolas and Princess Ileana are at the football game in Chicago. They will unite at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., on November 28, and it is probable that the Southern trip will begin from that point.

Marie stopped here nearly two hours today to place a wreath on the tomb of Abraham Lincoln before continuing on to Chicago.

Queen to Ride in Fox Hunt In Virginia on December 2

Richmond, Va., Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Queen Marie of Roumania has accepted for herself and for Princess Ileana and Prince Nicolas the invitation of the Richmond citizens committee to ride in a fox hunt here December 2, it was announced today.

The home of John Kerr Branch has been agreed upon tentatively as the headquarters for the royal party while in Richmond. The party is expected here December 1 for a two-day visit.

The fox hunt will be under the auspices of the Deep Run Hunt club.

Holdup in Queen's Suite Plotted, Detective Says

St. Louis, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Maurice O'Flaherty, 17, arrested here today, planned to stage a holdup in the partment of Queen Marie at the Coronado hotel, according to Detective Chief Kaiser. A loaded pistol was found in his room at the queen's hotel.

O'Flaherty admitted he escaped from the Mansfield, Ohio, reformatory after being convicted of robbery in Cleveland. He denied any intention of robbing the royal entourage.

"This young O'Flaherty is a 'publicity hound,'" said Detective Kaiser, "and in my opinion, he came here specifically to stage a holdup in the hotel rooms where were making their headquarters." the Roumanian queen and her party

Astrid of Sweden Is Royal Tennis Star

Special to The Washington Post.

Brussels, Nov. 13 (By A. P.). Princess Astrid of Sweden, now the bride of Crown Prince Leopold, is the best woman tennis player of the European royal houses.

Her royal uncle, King Gustav, who is a familiar figure on the tennis courts of the Riviera during the winter, was her teacher. He is an enthusiastic player and in spite of his advanced years, never asks for mercy from his opponents. In 1925, the king and his partner reached the third round of men's doubles. Their joy of victory in the early rounds was killed in a telegram coming from Stockholm. It read:

"Your adversaries must have let you win."

Longitude Is Checked 11,000 Miles by Radio

(By Associated Press.)

Radio signals for the purpose of checking longitude are now arriving regularly at the coast survey station in Honolulu from this city, on one side, and from Saigon, a point in Indo-China, on the other.

Director Jones, of the coast survey, said yesterday, in making the announcement, that the radio communication necessary for the work was proceeding satisfactorily over a distance of 11,000 miles. The longitude measurements depend upon flashing the exact time between the points named.

Montana Auto Bureau Operated by Convicts

Helena, Mont., Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Montana's experiment in using prison labor to operate its automobile license bureau apparently has proven successful. With the peak of the year's business passed and 8,000 more cars licensed than last year, the expense has been cut almost 50 per cent.

The bureau formerly was a part of the department of State.

Field Goals Attempted by Rival Leaders Are Wide.

By JACK ESPEY.

MARYLAND and Virginia must look to another year to settle the question of football supremacy and for one or the other to gain the edge in their series, for yesterday the Terrapin and Cavalier elevens left the gridiron at College Park in a deadlock, 6 to 6.

Among the crowd of 8,000 you could find many Virginia supporters today who will argue to their last breath that Coach Greasy Neale's team was the better of the two, but meanwhile you would have no difficulty finding Maryland rooters who will point to the score and say proudly, "We stopped 'em four times at the goal line, didn't we?" The conflicting opinions probably will be heard until the teams meet again.

It was the third clash of the Maryland-Virginia series. Both teams were confident before the opening whistle that they would win the rubber game. A victory over Yale the week before had spirited the Old Liners to the belief that they would take care of Virginia in handy fashion, but a surprise triumph over Washington and Lee had made the Cavaliers think that they were going to dispose of Maryland. And, as the result shows, both were disappointed.

The elusive Mike Stevens, captain and right halfback, continuing the brilliant running that he displayed against Yale, scored Maryland's touchdown in the first minute of play with a 63-yard dash through the center of the line, and with this lead the Old Liners gave their supporters a reasonable assurance that the decision was to be marked up to home side of the ledger.

This sprint of Stevens' was accomplished with the aid of perfect interference and team work, which indicated that Virginia was due for a troublesome afternoon if it hoped to stop Maryland's attack. But seldom thereafter did Stevens or his mates duplicate such splendid cohesion in offensive efforts, while Virginia four times ploughed through the Old Line eleven into the shadow of the goal posts, keeping Maryland on the defensive, and finally tied the score when Charley Mackall took a blocked punt to the 1-yard line and Johnny Hushion plunged over the final white stripe.

Mackall had made himself conspicuous throughout the game by smashing up Maryland's running plays and tossing long forward passes which endangered Maryland's goal time after time. Mackall, who captains the Cavaliers and plays guard, is a Washington boy, a product of Western High school like his opposing leader, Stevens. Oddly enough, the star roles in the contest were carired by the two captains, for while Hushion actually gave Virginia its six points, it was Mackall who paved the way for him to do so, and Stevens was responsible for Maryland's lone tally.

Incidentally, the two captains failed on chances to win the game. Stevens' attempted drop-kick for the point after touchdown was partially blocked and struck the crossbar, and Mackall's try with a placement kick was knocked to the ground by the outstretched hands of Donald Adams, Maryland's big right tackle.

After Stevens put Maryland in the lead Virginia started pounding the Terrapin line and dropping a barrage of forward

Vanderbilt Triumphs Over Tennessee, 20-3

Nashville, Tenn., Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Before a crowd of 18,000 persons, Vanderbilt this afternoon crimped Tennessee's championship hopes, defeating the visitors by a score of 20 to 3. The game was hard fought throughout, Tennessee's main offensive reliance being attacks on Vanderbilt's line. Spear's running and passing were factors in Vanderbilt's victory.

Olympic Committee To Be Selected Here

Selection of the American Olympic committee, which will direct preparation of the American team for the 1928 olympiad at Rotterdam, will be made here at the quadrennial meeting of the American Olympic association. The sessiin will begin November 17, and continue through the next day.

Bulldog Bows To Passing Attack

Princeton Wins, 10-7, on Field Goals by Baruch.

Interception of Pass Leads to Yale's Lone Score.

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 13.—Princeton's football team won the posthumous championship of the erstwhile Big Three this afternoon by defeating Yale 10 to 7, in a dogged bout that found Yale determined to win or be licked but running chances to compromise with a tie score.

They scored a touchdown apiece in the second quarter and each made the point afterward. Thereafter Earl Baruch, the Princeton left half, whose forward passes had jumped Princeton down the field in long strides for the touchdown, nudged a drop-kick over the indestructible steel goal posts from a distance of 30 yards for the field goal that won the game and provoked all the tumult and bawling and blatting of trombones that disturbed the leafy quiet of this sylvan college town tonight.

This drop-kick scored through the haze in the second quarter, also, so the gigantic struggles and heroic sprawling of the boys in the other quarters amounted to nothing in the end.

Baruch, who comes from Philadelphia, was a general nuisance to Yale as long as he was in the game, but for some reason he was taken out between halves and never reappeared to pitch those forward passes, although a few more of them might have given the score an even more pronounced bulge on the Princeton side.

The exact point at which Princeton began to lick Yale and win the posthumous Big Three championship was when Bunnell punted for Yale in the second quarter and Rosengarten, the Princeton tackle, gouged his way through to take a glancing impact of the ball on his chest. He didn't exactly block the kick, but he marred it so seriously that the ball tumbled in the air a few times, then plopped down at Yale's own 37-yard line after a flight of less than 10 yards.

Up to this time Baruch had done no serious pitching, but as Princeton took charge of the ball in the fighting zone, he flung a pass for a 7-yard gain and then used his arm again for a toss to Lawlor, the left end, who got away for a wild run and missed a touchdown when he was chased off the course at Yale's 13-yard line.

If you imagine that the Princeton side of the bowl experienced noticeably excitement at this juncture, you are not doing justice to the hullabaloo that came rolling across the premises from where the Orangemen sat facing Yale's half of the attendance.

The members of the Princeton band, in their white trousers and orange caps, leaped from their bench along the side line and blew the kinks out of their slide horns, and a sufficient number of people to populate a good-sized town went mad in concert.

West Virginia Downs Centre College, 21-0

Parkersburg, W. Va., Nov. 13 (By A. P.)—West Virginia University trampled over Centre College today for a 21-to-0 victory in a game marked by few thrills. To the Mountaineers' superiority over their opponents was added the zest of a rushing start when Latham, West Virginia center, broke through and blocked a punt. The ball rolled back some 15 yards and across the goal line. Latham fell on it for the first touchdown.

Again, in the second period, West Virginia pushed its way from its own 39-yard line to a second touchdown, Hardy smashing through right tackle for the score. The final quarter opened with West Virginia driving at the center line for consistent gains, reinforced by one successful forward pass. This drive culminated with Ryan's dive off right tackle that left him clear for a 23-yard sprint to make the last touchdown of the game.

OHIO BEATEN NEAR END BY MICHIGAN

Friedman's 43-Yard Dropkick Accounts for 17-16 Win.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Before the largest crowd ever assembled for a football game, Michigan, by the margin of a single point, today barred Ohio State from the Western conference football championship race. Ninety thousand persons were jammed into the Ohio stadium as the Wolverines slightly outpointed the Buckeyes throughout the contest and then emerge winner, 17 to 16.

A field goal kicked slantwise from the 43-yard line by Capt. Benny Friedman, Michigan ace, and a fumbled punt by Elmer Marek, Buckeye halfback, were the plays which gave Michigan the winning edge in a game full of deceptive plays and strategic maneuvers.

Near the end of the game, the Buckeyes just missed tying the score when Clarke's try for an extra point by a drop kick went a few inches below the cross bar.

The two teams used an aerial attack with about equal effectiveness. Michigan passers connected on 8 of 14 attempts for 132 yards. Ohio State completed 5 out of 7 for 98 yards.

Ohio State's land attack was more productive than Michigan's. The Wilcemen, with both Capt. Karow, fullback, and Fred Grim, halfback, bearing the brunt of battle in the first half, and with Eby slashing away in the last quarter, made 78 yards in 28 rushes from scrimmage. Michigan in 29 rushes, made 6 yards less.

Early in the first period Clark, Ohio quarterback, booted a field goal after Gilbert had recovered a

G. U. Harriers Lose To Navy Trackmen

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 13.—Athletes of Georgetown university were forced to absorb two defeats at the hands of the Annapolis midshipmen today. The Blue and Gray colors were trailed in a cross-country run, the run was over a 3½-mile course and the Naval lads came through by a point score of 13 to 24.

The time was 25 1-5 minutes. O'Connor, the Navy ace, came home first after a spirited contest with Desault, of Georgetown. Tegeschi, Bailey and Littert, all Navy, finished third, fourth and fifth, respectively. Then Silbeck, Kaiser and Sumbaul brought up the rear in the order named. The race was run just preceding the football game.

GREAT FINISH WINS FOR CORNELL

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Cornell smashed a weakening Dartmouth team for two touchdowns and a placement goal to overcome a 23-to-7 handicap in the final period today and whipped Dartmouth, 24 to 23, in the most thrilling gridiron battle those ancient rivals have ever staged.

The all-round brilliance of Eddie Dooley, Dartmouth quarterback, had given the Green a commanding lead with flashy passing and accurate booting when the Red avalanche broke through the tiring Green forwards in the final period.

Carey kicked a placement goal from the 15-yard line in the final minute of play when the speeding seconds seemed about to halt the last Cornell drive for the Green goal line.

PENN DOWNS COLUMBIA, 3 TO 0

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Playing hard to win, the University of Pennsylvania football team defeated Columbia University on Franklin field today, 3 to 0.

It was the third straight game in which Pennsylvania figured in a 3-to-0 game, the first when she was defeated by Illinois, and last Saturday, when Pennsylvania State went down before Pennsylvania.

The right foot of Paul Scull, Pennsylvania halfback, gave the home eleven the victory, as it did last week. Scull scored his field goal toward the end of the first period from the 43-yard line.

The game was stubbornly fought, especially by Columbia, when Pennsylvania was pressing close to the goal. The Pennsylvanians had a number of chances to score, but always lacked the power to put the ball over.

Columbia took the ball on downs in the second period on its own 18-yard line. In the third period, when Pennsylvania was pushing the ball toward the goal, Columbia took it again on the 27-yard

St. Xavier Runs Points For Season to 327

Cincinnati, Ohio, Nov. 13.—St. Xavier college this afternoon, by winning from the Kentucky Teachers college eleven from Murray, Ky., by a 48-0 score, increased its high scoring record for the year to 327 points, compared to 30 for opponents.

Paul Beatty, St. Xavier star halfback, scored four touchdowns in the game. Beatty has a total of 110 points this fall. St. Xavier plays West Virginia Wesleyan Saturday and Haskell Thanksgiving day.

Bruins Crush Way to 21-0 Triumph

Marches Make Scores for First Eleven; Subs Active.

Mishel and Randall Stars of Forward Pass Game.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 13. (By A. P.)—Clearly outplayed and outfought in every department of the game, Harvard went down in a stinging 21-0 defeat in the stadium this afternoon at the hands of Brown's "iron man" football team and a flood of substitutes injected by Coach Tuss McLaughrey in the closing minutes of play.

Brown scored her three touchdowns in the first, second and final periods after sustained marches of 65, 60 and 70 yards. Two of the scores came on forward passes, while a cleverly executed aerial game played a leading part in all three goalward parades.

The Crimson admittedly entered the game with a line-up weakened by Princeton game injuries, but the brand of running, passing, and defensive football displayed by the Providence outfit, would have downed a far better Harvard team.

The Bruins' first advance started on the Brown 35-yard line when Dave Mishel tossed a flat pass to Bob Randall for a gain of 23 yards A moment later Mishel broke through the Harvard right flank and reeled 24 yards through a broken field to a first down on Harvard's 19-yard line.

Running on delayed passes behind the line, Randall and Mishel gained another first down between them before Mishel tossed another pass to his quarterback for the touchdown. Mishel drop-kicked the extra point.

The second period parade opened at midfield after Chauncey, Harvard substitute left halfback, was hurried on his own 42-yard line and kicked outside at the 50-yard stripe. One line buck and the Mishel-to-Randal aerial combination got together for a gain of 23 yards and a first down on Harvard's 25-yard line.

Three line plays failed to gain perceptibly, so Mishel ran back with the ball and threw. Randall was in the proper place and another Brown touchdown was chalked up as Mishel booted the second extra point into the score via the drop-kick route.

In the closing minutes of the last quarter Mishel broke loose on his own 31-yard line and raced 40 yards before he was pulled down. Edes took his place after the play and punc-

Deposed Chisox Pilot Wants His Release

Philadelphia, Nov. 13 (By A. P.). Eddie Collins, deposed manager of the Chicago White Sox, hopes that he will be given his unconditional release by President Comiskey. Collins received formal notification last night at his home in Lansdowne of his release. He said his financial relations with the White Sox had always been satisfactory and that he would leave the club "without any malice." He added that he had made no plans for the future.

"I was formally notified by the White Sox of my release, and they also denied they had asked waivers on me, and that I would be made a free agent if waivers were asked," he concluded.

Bethlehem, Pa., Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Lehigh concluded its home season here today by defeating Rutgers, 14 to 0. Hand and Hayes skirted the ends for long gains, while O'Callaghan and Zahnow made consistent advances through the line. The Rutgers team was weakened in the first period when Preletz, flashy halfback, was forced out by injuries.

Sibley's Air Catches Triumph for Indiana

Bloomington, Ind., Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Frank Sibley, playing his last game for Indiana on the home gridiron, left the memory of a long, gaunt figure snagging forward passes from all angles today as the Crimson defeated Mississippi A. and M. 19 to 6. It was his catch of a long pass in the third quarter and subsequent dash to the goal line 25 yards away that put Indiana in the lead. Indiana continued an aerial attack in the remainder of the contest that the Southerners could not stop. Meeks and Stewart starred for the Aggies.

masterful. Thompson and O'Neil were between the Navy back and the goal when the ball was caught. Shapley side-stepped Thompson and turned to O'Neil.

The Georgetown safety man was able only to run Shapley to the side-lines, where his dexterous fotwork alone saved him from going out of bounds.

He eluded O'Neil and ran the remaining 20 yards to a touchdown unhindered. Hamilton's drop-kick for the extra point tied the score.

The seven men on the Georgetown line met the seven of Navy's first defense and was the better in the skirmishing. The aggressive play of Georgetown's forwards, pivoting about the work of Claude Grigsby, center, provided the Blue and Gray team with its opportunity in the second quarter.

The Navy was backed up within 30-yards of the goal it was defending when the first break of the game occurred. With Hamilton back to kick out of danger, Grigsby broke through the center of the Midshipmen's line and leaping high knocked the ball to the ground, where it was recovered by Saur, on the 22-yard line. O'Neil ran 12 yards to the outside line after taking a pass from Nork and it was on the next play that Nork made his run to a touchdown.

Continually harassed by the alertness of the Georgetown forwards, Navy was forced to kick on its early downs. Capt. McGrath and Waite, Georgetown ends, pulled Navy runners down from behind so repeatedly that the sweeping attempts to carry the ball were abandoned and the forward pass called into play with such decisive success.

Rushing attempts of the Midshipmen were wisely directed out of the range of "Babe" Connaughton, Georgetown's 275-pound left guard, the tales of his prowess having preceded him to Farragut field. Georgetown's line, perhaps, was in a measure responsible for Navy's victory, but innocently. With Connaughton, Saur, Monson and Mosko spilling virtually every thrust, the Navy abandoned its straight rushing tactics early enough to win the battle through the air in the later stages.

Georgetown gave first evidence of its serious intentions on the opening kick-off when Bucky O'Neil aided by well formed interference dashed back to Navy's 30-yard line. At this point Georgetown tried for an early lead but O'Neil's attempt at field goal went for a touchback.

Caldwell retaliated for Navy a few moments later with a 43-yard dash from scrimmage to Georgetown's 35-yard line.

The run, however, proved to be only so much yardage. After Georgetown had refused to yield, the Navy found itself engaged in a punting duel with Gormley, Georgetown quarterback, taking all the honors from Hamilton, Navy's kicker.

Alert defensive play by Connaughton and McGrath at the start of the second quarter forced Navy to resort to kicking and O'Neil took the ball on Navy's 45-yard line. A short match ensued with O'Neil and Thompson carrying the ball 20 yards. A play that was bungled behind the line of scrimmage forced Georgetown to punt and Gormley's kick went for a touchback.

A punt fumbled by O'Neil on Georgetown's 44-yard line was received by Navy and paved the way for a try at field goal by Hamilton. The kick from placement was low, but despite the distance, it went for a touchback. Regaining the ball on its own 40-yard line after Gormley's kick, Navy tried two long passes and then was the victim of Grigsby's alert play, when Hamilton tried to punt out of danger. Grigsby's rush blocked the kick and Saur beat two Navy men to the ball to recover for Georgetown. The pass to O'Neil and Nork's touchdown followed.

The ball was worked to Navy's 30-yard line by Georgetown in the third quarter by a short pass to Waite and runs by Thompson and Nork, but Navy repulsed all further attacks, and took the ball on downs only to be placed on the defensive a minute later after kicking.

Out sprinting Navy ends, O'Neil returned Hamilton's kick 20 yards and Nork broke away for a 20-yard run to place the ball on Navy's 20-

EDITH CAVELL BEATS CRUSADER FOR PIMLICO CUP

Track Record Broken In Feature

Princess Doreen, 40 Lengths Back, Finishes Third.

Long Joe Scores in Second Race, Paying Good Price.

Special to The Washington Post.

PIMLICO RACE TRACK, Nov. 13.—Weight brings 'em all together. This oft-proved theory of the race course had another demonstration at old Pimlico today when Crusader, mightiest son of Man o' War, was forced to lower his colors to Edith Cavell, a daughter of S. D. Riddle's superhorse in the two-mile and a quarter Pimlico cup. The Glenn Riddle colt forced to pack 126 pounds over a most trying route, proved unequal to the task of conceding 33 pounds in actual weight to his sister when that Miss journeyed the distance in 3:52 1-5, to slash four-fifths of a second from Exterminator's track record of six years' standing.

There was another packed house at this popular park today and, judging from the cheers that greeted Edith Cavell as she jogged back to the stand, the Walter Jeffords 3-year-old held a considerable following.

A few hoots also were tossed at Crusader, which were entirely uncalled for, as that colt ran one of his smartest races, to be 2½ lengths off his lightly burdened relative. He completed the distance in better than record time, himself.

The performance marked the second victory of the meeting for Edith Cavell and added $8,825 to her earnings. This Miss was rated at the top of her age and sex division early in the summer, following triumphs in the Coaching Club and Latonia Oaks. She went off at Saratoga when she started in the Alabama with insufficient training and now has just come to herself again.

Little Bourassa, who is riding in keen style, at this point made no mistakes with the daughter of Man o' War. He let her step away from the gate to widen out on her rivals in the first quarter, and then rated her at a steady clip to the final half-mile.

As a result she had considerable in reserve when challenged by Crusader and, after a sharp tussle rounding the final turn, put him away at the top of the home lane. She was not in serious trouble in the final furlong.

Crusader, perfectly handled by Earl Sande, had no excuses. He was smoothly rated for the first mile and a half and went up easily when urged after passing the stand on the final lap. Going down the far side, it appeared that he would run over the filly and when he was only two lengths off her at the half-mile pole, victory appeared certain.

However, his heavy package told from the 3-furlong pole to the wire. Sande roused him with the whip, once straightened out in the stretch, and, while the colt responded gamely, he was unable to cut down the filly's lead.

Hard driven with hand and heel in the last eighth, he was not abused when Sande realized there was no stop to the miss in front of him.

Princess Doreen and The Clown rounded out the field. Both were prominent in the early part, but tailed off and were badly beaten and eased up in the final sixteenth.

Rejuvenation, the consistent Son of Hourless—Duchess Kathleen, gave further evidence of his ability as a long distance performer when he made a show of the opposition that he encountered in the Jockey Club handicap, a gallop over the mile and one-half journey.

Leading his field throughout the gruelling test, the winner was never extended during any stage of the running and was home winner by four open lengths. The thrill of the contest came about with the spirited finish put up by Kanduit and Tomahawk for the place portion, with the former getting the call by inches, while Hijo and Toggery Bay, the other two starters, were well beaten.

Sweepster, who a few days back enjoyed favoritism in the Walden handicap, turned in a better race this afternoon in the Caswell, a gallop over the mile and seventy-yard route. He was sent into the lead entering the backstretch and only for a brief period did he cause his admirers concern. This happened when Wandering Minstrel moved up to his saddle girths at the furlong pole, but Fator had his mount in reserve and, when let down, he drew out to be home winner by a length. Wandering Minstrel saved the place from Bois de Rose by three lengths.

The opening event on the card resulted in one of the most stubborn contests witnessed during the twelve-day session when Highwayman, installed the choice for the mile and 70 yards route, just lasted, under a vigorous ride, to get the judges' decision by a scant nose over Slate, while a nose back came Dream Daddy.

The second affair, a claiming race over the mile and one-sixteenth route, found the favorites completely in the eclipse, none of them being able to take part in the purse distribution. The finish found Long Joe, at long odds, scoring brackets after leading the field for the entire journey to be home winner by a safe margin over Medius, who in turn had a safe lead over Signola.

A tight fight came with the Roland Park purse when Gamble, racing coupled with Flechita as the William Zeigler entry and installed an odds on choice for the number, made good in a terrific drive that lasted from the top of the stretch to the wire. Her margin over Mino was just a neck, while a nose back of them came Taps with the others in the small field beaten off.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—Highwayman, $6.10, $3.60, $2.90; Slate, $5.50, $2.90; Dream Daddy, $2.80

Highwayman forwardly placed in the early stages shook off Dream Daddy rounding the turn for home but had to be ridden out to the limit to outstay Slate. Latter improved his position rapidly the last half mile and closed with a rush through the stretch. Dream Daddy quit badly in final strides.

SECOND RACE—Mile and one-sixteenth. Purse, $1,300. For 2-year-olds; claiming. Start good. Won driving. Place same. Went to post at 1:50. Off at 1:53. Winner, A. J. Sullivan's b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—Long Joe, $19.80, $7.90, $6.40; Medius, $19.80, $18.90; Signola, 5.20.

Long Joe, quickest to get going, raced into an early lead; was rated under slight restraint, withstood bid from Medius and held her safe. Latter, poorly handled, being track up going to the first turn, closed a big gap. Signola went well.

THIRD RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,300. For all ages. Start good. Won driving. Place same. Went to post 2:25. Off at 2:26. Winner, W. Zeigler's ch. f. (4), by Sir Martin—Guesswork. Trained by W. J. Speirs. Value to winner—$1,000; second, $300; third, $200. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:48, 1:13 3-5, 1:40, 1:47.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—Gamble (Zeigler entry), $3.90, $2.50, $2.10; Mino, $8.40, $2.40; Taps, $2.30.

Gamble, slow to begin, improved her position steadily the last half-mile, and luckily slipped through on the inside of the leaders in stretch run and finishing gamely, was up the last 20 yards. Mino disposed of Shuffle Along after going 6 furlongs, but faltered the final quarter. Taps gained fast when called on and finished resolutely.

FOURTH RACE—Two and one-fourth miles. Purse, $10,000 added. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good and fast. Won ridden out. Place driving. Went to post at 2:55. Off at 2:56. Winner, b. f. (3), by Man o' War—The Nurse. Trained by S. P. Harlan. Value to winner—$8,825; second, $2,000; third, $1,000; fourth, $500. Time, 0:25, 0:50, 1:16 3-5, 1:42 3-5, 2:08 3-5, 2:34, 3:02, 3:26 2-5, 3:52 1-5. (New track record.)

The Clown	101	4	4	3½	4	4	4	4	Peternell	†

Two-dollar mutuels paid—Edith Cavell, $14.20, out, out; no place or show mutuels sold.

Edith Cavell sprinted into a long early lead and kept under a strong pull for the first mile and three-fourths; matched strides gamely when Crusader moved to her at the furlong pole and came away again the last furlong with one sting of the whip. She was going away at end. Crusader, raced under stiff restraint in the early stages, moved up boldly at the turn for home, but tired badly after getting to the winner. Princess Doreen could not keep up after a mile and one-half.

FIFTH RACE—Two and one-half miles. Purse, $1,500. For 3-year-olds and upward; claiming. Jockey handicap. Start good and fast. Won easily. Place driving. Went to post at 3:37. Off at 3:38. Winner, A. Halpin's b. c. (3), by Houriess—Duchess Kathleen. Trained by F. D. McElroy. Value to winner—$1,000; second, $300; third, $200. Time, 0:24 3-5, 0:49 3-5, 1:14 3-5, 1:40 2-5, 2:06 2-5, 2:34 4-5.

Toggery Bay	102	3	4	5	5	5	5	5	Taylor	15.30

Two-dollar mutuels paid—Rejuvenation, $8.10, $2.70, $2.30; Kanduit, $4.00, 2.70; Tomahawk IV, 3.00.

Rejuvenation sprinted into a long early lead and was rated in front for the remainder of the journey and won with much in reserve. Kanduit, always in nearest pursuit of the winner, was never able to make a serious challenge. Tomahawk IV gained rapidly the last half-mile and finished stoutly through the stretch.

SIXTH RACE—Mile and seventy yards. Purse, $1,500. The Caswell. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving. Place same. Went to post at 4:08. Off at 4:09. Winner, Rancocas Stable's b. c. (2), by Sweep—Okibbena. Trained by S. C. Hildreth. Value to winner—$1,000; second, $300; third, $200. Time, 0:23, 0:47 1-5, 1:13 2-5, 1:39 3-5, 1:44 3-5.

Son of Clubs	106	6	2	4½	6h	6h	7	7	Robbins	31.85

Two-dollar mutuels paid—Sweepster, $4.60, $3.40, $3.00; Wandering Minstrel, $6.50, $3.60; Bois De Rose, $5.90.

Sweepster moved into the lead on entering the backstretch; was rated in front under slight urging, saved ground, stalled off keen challenges from Wandering Minstrel and came away the last furlong. Wandering Minstrel moved up stoutly at the far turn; made several efforts, but was not good enough. Bois De Rose gained fast the last part of the trip.

SEVENTH RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles. Purse, $1,300. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving. Place same. Went to post at 4:45. Off at 4:46. Winner, Flamingo Farms' br. g. (6), by White Magic—Alope. Trained by W. Durnan. Value to winner—$900; second, $250; third, $150. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:49 3-5, 1:14 3-5, 1:41 2-5, 2:01 3-5.

Cross Tree	111	1	2	9h	9½½	9h	10	10	Thorndyke	46.00

Two-dollar mutuels paid—Alopex, $15.90, $7.80, $4.30; Hedgefence, $4.40, $3.00; By Gosh, $3.00.

Alopex, close to the pace from the start, moved into the lead with a rush at the half-mile and drew away under slight urging. Hedgefence, well up, outlasted By Gosh in final drive. Latter closed gamely.

Tia Juana Meeting Opens Thanksgiving

Tia Juana Race Track, Mex., Nov. 13.—From out of the East has arrived the Rosedale Stable, primed and fit for the season of racing to be opened here Thanksgiving day. The Rosedale Stable is owned by George Clarke, of White Plains, N. Y., and trained by R. F. Carman, jr. Fresh from triumphs on the Metropolitan circuit, the Rosedale string, containing several stars, likely will be one of the biggest purse and stake winners of the Tia Juana season. Jockey F. Stevens, a very capable rider, will pilot the Rosedale runners.

One of the outstanding horses in the lot is Dangerous, purchased at Tia Juana last season from Clarence Buxton. Dangerous was off form last year, but soon after joining the Rosedale outfit, found himself and became a star performer on the New York tracks.

German Horse Places In British Cup Race

Liverpool, Eng., Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Baron Oppenheimer's Weissdorn, the first German race horse to compete on an English race course since the war, took second place in the running of the Grosvenor cup for £1,000 here today. The race, at a mile, was won by Reid Walker's Inca. Mrs. Bancroft's Purple Shade was third in the field of thirteen.

HARTFORDS VS. HANOVER.

The Hartford football team plays the Hanover eleven at Sixteenth and Kennedy streets northwest today at 1 o'clock. Hartford players are asked to report at Third street and Missouri avenue at 11 o'clock.

Seagram Stable May Enter Three in Coffroth Handicap

Gaffsman, Edisto and Possibly Rolls Royce Will Be Trained for Rich Tia Juana Race. String Goes South With Bringloe.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 13. — The brothers Seagram, of Waterloo, Ontario, who for the last three or four years have had the most successful racing stable campaigning in Canada, will put their best foot forward at Tia Juana in the course of the winter racing that will begin Thanksgiving to continue upward of 100 days.

W. H. Bringloe, who has trained for the Seagrams all the while, is already on his way to the Lower California course with Edisto, Gaffsman, Rolls Royce, Sir Harry, Tetra Glass, Harass, Tamarind, Candy Kid, Beau of the West, Star of Gold and eight of ten 2-year-olds. Bringloe will be joined about the first of December by his very capable young rider, Olivia Bourassa.

Gaffsman, a Maryland-bred son of Jim Gaffney and Filante (she a daughter of Sardanapale), and a product of William Woodward's Belair stud, of Prince Georges county, and Edisto and, possibly, Rolls Royce will be trained for the next Coffroth handicap, a gallop of one mile and a quarter for 3-year-olds and over, that will be run March 13, with an added money value of $75,000 and gross about $100,000.

In Gaffsman the Seagrams have one of the most promising of the coming 4-year-olds. A first-class 2-year-old in Canada a year ago last summer the Jim Gaffney colt came down to Maryland to beat Crusader, Corvette and Blondin in the Laurel stakes and otherwise deport himself as a near champ.

He didn't winter particularly well and was not one of the smart 3-year-olds of the spring and summer past, but he came fast in Maryland this fall. A winner at Havre de Grace in September and at Laurel in October he brought up third to Crusader and Mars in the $25,000 Riggs handicap inaugural, a gallop of one mile and a half for 3-year-olds. He will be better in the winter and next spring, provided he ships well, than he has been hereabouts in the course of the last three or four weeks.

While Gaffsman was out of sorts last spring and summer Edisto was very much on the job. He won a $15,000 Philadelphia handicap at Havre de Grace and a $7,500 spring handicap at Pimlico and then went to Toronto to score a $6,500 King Edward cup. At Blue Bonnets in July he won a $5,000 Windsor Hotel handicap and he returned to Woodbine park in September to beat a big field in the $10,000 Toronto Autumn cup.

Always racing with the smartest handicap horses, Edisto has been out of the money only a couple of times in some 15 races. He is good at any distance and all going looks alike to him. He hasn't been very successful in Maryland this fall, but the toughest horse can't be kept on edge all the time. Edisto is 4 years old, son of Johron and Tunnin, she is a sister of Leocharos, Bromo and Nedna.

He is a recruit from the stable of Harry Payne Whitney, his breeder, as is also Candy Kid, a son of Peter Pan and a sprinter of rare ability. Edisto and Gaffsman will make a formidable Coffroth handicap entry.

Rolls Royce, a son of Tetratema and Device, was imported last winter by William A. Read, of the Laurel Park Stud Company, and developed last spring by Andrew Godfrey Blakaly. The Seagrams paid $25,000 for him at Jamaica in May and immediately had bad luck with him. He was taken with influenza and was out of sorts for several weeks.

It was not until the Seagrams got down to Saratoga in August that he began to pick up. He won there and repeated several times in Maryland. Rolls Royce, probably, hasn't struck his gait yet. The current notion of him is that he is a sprinter, but there is no reason why he shouldn't go on. He was just beaten at Saratoga in dashes of seven furlongs and one mile. The Tia Juana winter climate should bring him out.

Tetra Glass and Sir Harry, the former an imported son of Tetratema, the latter a son of Wildair, are the Tia Juana derby hopes of the stable. The derby in its renewal next March will have an added money value of $25,000, and gross about $35,000. It will be a gallop of one mile and a furlong. Commander Ross, another Canadian horseman, won a Tia Juana derby several seasons back with the Maryland bred colt Deep Thought.

Sir Harry was a stake winner in Canada. In Maryland he has shown an unmistakable liking for distance running. Tetra Glass is still a green youngster. He started for the first time at Laurel in October and ran second at five furlongs and a half to the thoroughly seasoned Buddy Bauer.

In Bourassa, a French Canadian, 23, weighing 95 pounds, who can do 90 if he tries hard, Bringloe has about the best lightweight rider on the continent. Bourassa began riding for Commander Ross in the autumn of 1922, and his progress upward has been fast. He left Ross' employ last winter and immediately signed up with the Seagrams. He has won 120 races this year. He was at his best Pimlico Futurity day when he rode Fair Star, the winner of that race, and two other successful horses.

HOLY CROSS, EXTENDED BY C. U. ELEVEN, WIN[illegible]

Cardinals Get Early Lead On Passes

Brookland Threatens in Third Period; Foley Stars.

WORCESTER, Mass., Nov. 13. The fighting Catholic University Cardinals fell before the strong, undefeated Holy Cross Crusaders in a bitterly played game here today by the score of 14-6. Not until the final of the play was the outcome decided, Capt. Billy Wise, Holy Cross quarterback, putting the fray on ice by taking the oval over the goal on a line plunge from the 5-yard line.

Ray Foley kicked off to Daly, who was thrown on his 30-yard line. After three unsuccessful line plunges Wise punted to the 36-yard line, where the ball was grounded by Holy Cross. The C. U. passing combination began to function.

Bill Harvey completed a 45-yard pass thrown by Foley, and an 18-yard pass by the same combination brought the ball to the Cardinal 10-yard line.

Short plunges were made by Harvey and Schmidt; and on the third down Harvey heaved a short pass to Foley, who took it over the line for the first score of the game. Foley failed to kick the try for point after touchdown.

The crowd seemed stunned by the dazzling onrush and hardly realized that the first score of the contst had been tallied.

Throughout the remainder of the period the Capital city boys outplayed the O'Donnell men and it looked as though they would be able to take the bacon back to Washington.

The Maroon scored more first downs than their opponents and time and again proceeded to the shadows of their goal posts only to lose the ball on intercepted or grounded passes.

In the third period Catholic university did some clever passing, Foley throwing the ball continuously to Hiener, Harvey and Shields for long gains. The feature of Holy Cross' play seemed to be in intercepting passes. The Maroon and Black would sweep down the field on a series of long passes only to have the procession halted on the ten or fifteen yard line by an interception of a pass by a Crusader.

During this quarter it seemed as though Catholic university would score again when Capt. Bill Shields caught a long 27 yard pass from Foley and started down the field with a clear field ahead of him only to stumble and fall, a Holy Cross man downing him for sure.

In the last period Catholic U's line showed its great strength when it held the Purple for downs on the 5-yard line. Jack McAuliffe then injected more substitutes and Catholic U started again down the field in earnest.

Nick Manfreda, who went in for Chick Hiener, hammered the Holy Cross line for several gains, and the ball was brought to Catholic U's 32-yard line. Foley and Harvey made 7 yards on line rushes. A pass from Foley to Manfreda was incomplete. In this play Referee Burk ruled that Manfreda was interferred with, but Umpire Scanlon failed to agree and overruled the decision.

Holy Cross then started down the gridiron, Wise and Daly taking the ball for long end runs. Practically the whole second team was in for Catholic U, and it did not seem able to stop the onrush. The ball was finally brought to the 6-inch line, and in the last down Wise took the ball over. Wise also kicked the try for point after touchdown, making the final score 14-6.

With but one minute to play, Holy Cross kicked-off to Smythe, who carried it back 15 yards. Foley then threw a 48-yard pass to Long and the game was over.

The field was in exceedingly poor condition, the mud being as deep as 3 inches in places.

Ritola Leads Team To Marathon Title

Philadelphia, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Willie Ritola, star Finn runner, led the Finnish-American Athletic club team to victory today in the world's championship marathon relay race over the 64-mile course from Atlantic City to Philadelphia. The winning team's time was 5 hours 39 minutes 35 seconds.

Ritola, holder of many records, was the anchor man for his team, and the eleventh runner. Frank Worthington, of the Meadowbrook club, was second across the finish line in 5 hours 42 minutes 45 seconds, more than 3 minutes behind the flying Finn.

Special to The Washington Post.

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 13.—The Howard Bisons remained undefeated after their second intersectional contest after downing Atlanta university, 7 to 0, here today before a colorful crowd. The game was full of thrills, each team holding on its 1-yard line. The touchdown was the result of a Bison drive in the third quarter, featured by a 35-yard pass from Ross to Sayles and the plunges of Ross, who crossed the goal. Coles kicked the point.

Buckowy's Dash Features As Marines Trim Detroit

Quantico Back Contributes to 24-7 Victory With Run of 100 Yards for Score After Intercepting Pass.

DETROIT, Nov. 13.—Thanks to John Buckowy's run of 100 yards after intercepting a Detroit forward pass on his goal line in the second period, Quantico Marines whipped University of Detroit, 24 to 7, on Dinan field here today, and made up for the 6 to 0 defeat of 1925 that came in the last ten seconds of play.

Buckowy, with Detroit leading, 7—6, and 4 yards short of a second touchdown, took Tom Connell's pass and never stopped until he was safe in the harbor behind the Detroit goal line. Interferers picked him up almost at once as he set forth and rid him of the only Detroit tackler. After midfield Buckowy steered into open country and held his course without trouble.

Previously the Marines had made a touchdown in the first period as a result of line bucking after an exchange of punts. Detroit had held Quantico on the first advance down field that ended at the 22-yard line. Maloney punted to the Marine 33-yard line. One forward pass, from Brunelle to Levy, mixed with the driving of Levy, Duncan and Buckowy, sent the Marines to the Detroit 4-yard line.

Detroit came right back with a passing game that brought a touchdown and a 1-point lead until Buckowy's run. Thereafter Detroit was in arrears and never came closer again than the Marine 39-yard line.

Marines scored twice in the fourth period after going scoreless in the third. At the close of the third, the Marines were 7 yards from home as the result of a 28-yard gain from a forward pass, Brunelle to Levy to Whitefield. At the opening of the fourth period Brunelle made 5 and Buckowy 2 for the third score; Levy landed the fourth and final score when he raced 38 yards outside left tackle and down the side line.

Detroit never had a chance after the first period. The service men were too heavy, too fast and too clever for Detroit's sophomore team.

Catholic Cubs Beat Naval Apprentices

Making all their points in the second quarter, the Catholic University Freshmen gridders defeated the Naval Apprentices of Newport News, Va., yesterday in the Brookland stadium, 16 to 0. The Catholic cubs concentrated their offensive on the Apprentices' line, Murphy and Champa scoring touchdowns via running plays. Tierney gave the winners two points when he tackled an Apprentice for a safety.

Chenworth, a Washington boy, played a fine defensive game for the Freshmen at end, while Hogge, Russ and Hansford occupied stellar roles for the Apprentices.

ALFRED WINS RACE.

New York, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Alfred University, of Alfred, N. Y., won the middle Atlantic States 6-mile cross-country championship run at Van Cortland park today, with 28 points. The individual winner was Richard Gwinn, of Johns Hopkins, whose time was 30 minutes 26 seconds.

Rail Man Gives $275,000 For Tarheel Stadium

Chapel Hill, N. C., Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—A gift of $275,000 for the construction of a football stadium at the University of North Carolina, has been made by William Rand Kenan, jr., of New York, president of the Florida East Coast railway, Dr. H. W. Chase, president of the university, announced here tonight. The stadium will seat 24,000 persons and construction will begin immediately. The plans call for its completion in time for the opening of the football season next year.

The gift is in memory of the late Mary Hargrove and William Rand Kenan, mother and father of the donor, and it will be known as the Kenan Memorial stadium.

Monroe Takes Honors In Local Trapshoot

Dr. W. E. Monroe pointed the way yesterday to Washington Gun club shooters over the club's traps at Benning, when he shattered 48 out of 50 targets in the added bird target race. In two other events he scored 23 out of 25 and 25 straight. H. B. Williams copped the added birds honors by turning in a 44 out of 50 score.

Dr. Wynkoop took the first leg on the yardage trophy with a card of 24 out of 25 shots and R. D. Morgan finished second after a shoot-off with Shelton and Blundon, who had scores of 23 out of 25. Doubles honors were divided between Eugene Beckwith and Morgan, who had for their scores 18 out of 24 breaks.

McCarron, 40; Shelton, 44; Beckwith, 38; P. Shelton, 45; Hunter, 46; Green, 31; Wynkoop, 44; Burrows, 44; C. Wilson, 44; Monroe, 48; Willson, 44; Merkle, 33; Reeves, 40; Cain, 28. Illini Seconds Win Over Wabash, 27-13

Champaign, Ill., Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—While Coach Zuppke watched Michigan down Ohio by one point at Columbus this afternoon, the Illini second team defeated Wabash 27 to 13, in a slow game before 5,000 spectators in the Illinois Memorial stadium.

The little giants from Crawfordsville staged a plucky comeback in the final quarter after Illinois had piled up a 27-point lead, scoring a touchdown in the last two seconds of play.

MICHIGAN BLUES SCORE.

The Michigan Blues yesterday defeated the Senators, 7 to 6. They will practice Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week for their Sunday game with the Georgetown Preps.

OLD LINE TIES VIRGINIA, 6 TO 6

passes over the Maryland secondary defense. All told, this attack netted sixteen first downs, while Maryland was unable to register a first down following the gallop of its captain.

Quarterback Kessler, of Maryland, caught the Cavaliers off their guard when he called for Stevens to take the ball. Virginia had regain, Mackall punting to the Maryceived on the kick-off and could not land 37-yard line.

Then Kessler, on Maryland's first play, signaled for a triple pass fake which brought Stevens through the center of the line behind a couple of interferers. Two other Terrapin backs were darting away in other directions, making motions as if they had the ball, and which completely fooled Virginia's defense. Stevens passed the line of scrimmage undisturbed and found himself in the open with not a single Cavalier in his path. The resulting dash to the goal was only a matter of continuing his speed, while his interferers were ready to brush aside any opponents who might try to overtake them.

A few minutes later the tide was swinging back in Virginia's favor, as Mackall hurled a pass to Ahner for a 40-yard gain, and was halted abruptly there when three more passes were grounded, while Kessler kicked out of danger with a boot of 60 yards.

Maryland, a short time later, was presented with its only other scoring chance. Buck Cuddy, the hard-running Virginia left halfback, fumbled on his own 35-yard line and Stevens recovered the leather and ran to the Virginia 20-yard mark before being hauled down. A 5-yard run by Thomas placed the ball almost in the center of the goal posts on Virginia's 15-yard line, allowing Stevens to attempt a drop-kick, but the latter's effort sailed below the cross-bar.

This came in the early minutes of the second quarter, and Virginia then opened up a terrific pounding upon Maryland's forward wall.

Interspersed with passes thrown by Mackall, the Cavaliers marched up the field for 47 yards, the ball being carried in off-tackle thrusts by Cuddy and "Red" Glauber, the stocky red-haired fullback. With the oval on Maryland's 20-yard line, two forward passes failed and Maryland took the ball on downs.

Maryland was unable to advance through the husky Virginia line, and Kessler was forced to punt. But Virginia marched back, only to fall short of the goal again when more aerials failed. A third drive got under way shortly after that which carried the Charlottesville team to within Maryland's 15-yard stripe as the half closed.

The first ten minutes of the third quarter saw Virginia in still another march, this time proving more dangerous to the Old Liners than in the others. Cuddy, Glauber and Hushion advanced the ball to the 8-yard line before Maryland braced and recovered the ball on downs.

Shorter marches were made by Virginia during the remainder of the third period and part of the final, but then the Cavaliers reached the goal line through a means that was entirely unlooked for. Kessler attempted a punt on his own 21-yard stripe which Mackall blocked. The ball bounded back toward Maryland's goal with Mackall and Kessler frantically trying to reach it. The Virginia leader was successful, and he got to the 1-yard line, Kessler bringing him to earth. Hushion then hit into the center for the touchdown.

Virginia threatened with an aerial attack as the game was nearing the close, but advanced only to near midfield where Mackall tried to gain the decision with a placement kick from the 48-yard line. It was blocked by Dent, Maryland left end, just before the whistle sounded.

A. A. U. Meets to Consider Requests for 217 Records

Paddock's Claim of 95-10 Century Dash Among Many Which Officials Will Act Upon in Baltimore Meeting Today.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Two hundred and seventeen record-breaking performances, including 65 turned in by track and field and 152 by swimming stars in the United States during the past year, will be acted on at the annual convention of the Amateur Athletic union in Baltimore, starting tomorrow. The list of applications, one of the greatest ever received, was announced tonight by Louis N. Goldsmith, chairman of the records committee.

Application of Charley Paddock, California sprinter, for a New Mark of 9 5-10 seconds for 100 yards, made last May at Los Angeles, features the list of track performers, which also include sprint marks by Roland Locke, of Nebraska and pole vault achievements by Charley Hoff, the Norwegian star who has turned professional.

Paddock's figures would constitute a new world's record if accepted. Locke has marks of 9 3-5 for the "100" and 20 4-5 for 200 yards, equaling present world records. Hoff's best pole vault mark, made indoors at Chicago, is 13 feet, 8 1-4 inches.

Other track stars seeking to have records placed on the books to their credit include George Guthrie and Chick Werner, hurdlers; Loren Murchison, Charley Borah and H. A. Russell, sprinters; Herb Schwarze and John Kuck, weight tossers; Lee Barnes, pole vaulter.

The aquatic performers are led by Miss Agnes Geraghty, breast-stroke star of the Women's Swimming association of New York, who is credited with 25 standards at her favorite style.

Her nearest rivals, in point of number of marks turned in, are Walter Spence, of Brooklyn, and Arne Borg, Swedish swimmer, who represented the Illinois A. C., each with applications for 20 records; Johnny Weissmuller, Illinois, A. C., with 15, and Ethel Lackie, of the same club, with 14, are next.

Butler Smothered By Minnesota, 81 to 0

Minneapolis, Nov. 13 (By A. P.). "Galloping Gophers" they were named this week, and at the christening ceremonies today in the memorial stadium the Minnesota squad proved its right to the name, swamping Butler university 81 to 0.

First Gopher regulars trod the turf, slippery from a misty rain, piling up 33 points in the first period, and with many substitutes in the lineup, garnered 34 more in the second period.

Then Coach Spears poured in second and third-string men, who scored a touchdown in each of the last two periods and stopped every threat of the Indianapolis men.

HAWK PREPS VS. COLUMBIA.

Stanford Nears Title; Trounces Washington

Stanford, Calif., Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—A Coast conference championship loomed for Stanford today as the big Cardinal eleven hurled what was considered its last big barrier and sent Washington tumbling into the depths of defeat under a crushing 29 to 10 score.

The flashing Red team, which early in the season Coach "Pop" Warner publicly announced as his "worst" eleven in fifteen years, rose to superb heights to overwhelm the powerful squad from the North and wipe out the sting of a 30-0 defeat inflicted by a Washington team last year, the first and only conference loss by a Warner-coached team on the Western seaboard. Some 50,000 persons saw the contest.

Baltimore Cueist Beaten in Title Play

Philadelphia, Nov. 13 (By A. P.). Arthur Ponzi, Philadelphia, tonight won from Pasquale Natalie, Baltimore, 125 to 92, in a round robin match for the world's pocket billiard championship. The game went 42 innings. Ponzi had a high-run of 26 and Natalie 21. The averages were Ponzi, 2 41-42; Natalie, 2 9-41.

In the afternoon matches, Harold Pindle, Appleton, Wis., won his first match in the series, beating Thomas Hueston, New York, 125 to 97, in 73 innings, and Frank Taberski, Schenectady, N. Y., defeated Arthur Woods, Pawtucket, R. I., 125 to 65, in 15 innings.

MINORS MEET DECEMBER 5.

Chicago, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—The club owners of the American association, instead of meeting in Chicago as usual, decided today to hold their annual session at Asheville, N. C., December 5, in connection with the meeting of the National Association of Minor Leagues.

High Grid Series Success In Every Way, Says Kelley

Schools Benefit Equally From Revenue; Friday Night Basketball Seen as Boom to Annual Championship Race.

By MIKE KELLEY.
Central High School Coach.

THE interscholastic football series, one of the best, in a competitive way, that has recently been staged, draws to a close Tuesday with Tech and Business engaging in a struggle to determine Tech's standing in the race. That the series has been a decided success financially, as well as one affording keen rivalry between our high schools, is an assured fact at this time, due to the good attendance at the games and the extra assessment levied this season.

Each school benefits equally in the added revenue, and now the attention of those actively engaged in directing high school athletics is turned to thoughts of keeping intact the profits of the football series, with basketball, which is usually a costly sport, the next major sport on the calendar.

Due to the fact that none of our high schools possesses a basketball court suitable to seating the crowds desirous of witnessing the high school contribution to the great indoor winter sport, outside auditoriums must be hired and this method entails a considerable financial outlay.

Last winter the basketball series was a decided success from an athletic point of view, but one that together with the baseball series almost wiped out the profits of the football campaign. The expense incurred in hiring a large hall such as the Arcade and the cost of officials twice a week certainly plays havoc with any athletic surplus.

The Saturday morning games of last year were poorly attended and failed to justify their retention as a means of helping to have basketball become self-supporting. Too many school children have tasks to perform Saturday mornings, and only the most ardent fans are present.

The contemplated move to play the week-end games on Friday nights must carry the sanction of the principals before it can be given a trial. This step was considered not only from the viewpoint that larger attendances would result, but also from the side that more of the parents would find it possible to enjoy the high school sport.

This aim is one to be heartily desired and encouraged by all concerned in our athletic welfare and in the interest of sports.

It is to be hoped that when the new Tech gym is completed the gym will fill the need, now prevalent, of a court for basketball within one of our schools large enough to put on the interscholastic series. When this condition is met it will be a blessing to the schools as a whole, and especially to the athletic finances, which are now sorely tried by the heavy expenses of running the basketball series in hired auditoriums.

Boston College Battles Haskell to 21-21 Draw

BOSTON, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Boston College and the Haskell Indians refused to leave the ranks of the undefeated today and played to a 21-21 tie. Haskell outplayed and outrushed the Maroon, making 22 first downs to their opponents' 13, but Boston College played for the breaks, scoring on an intercepted pass, a blocked kick and a Haskell fumble.

Colby proved a capable substitute for McLain, injured Indian fullback, making all three scores for his team and gaining consistently. Weston gave Boston the jump in the opening period when he ran 50 yards after intercepting a pass. In the second period Jennings, Haskell end, missed a 47-yard drop-kick by inches. In the same quarter Boston recovered a Haskell fumble and Weston scored after a sensational run.

Haskell plugged away at the Maroon line for two scores in the third period, Levi Smith and Colby carrying the ball. One march covered 75 yards. Boston took the lead when Whelan recovered a blocked punt behind Haskell's goal line, but the Indians came back strong and evened it up. Haskell lost a score in this period when Ward picked up a Boston fumble and crossed the line, only to be recalled on an offside penalty.

Another run by Nork after Navy was forced to punt again placed the ball on Navy's 35-yard line and Waite carried it 14 yards on a pass over the line. Another pass fell into the hands of Shapley, who was brought down by Thompson on Georgetown's 40-yard line. Shapley then took the long pass from Hamilton for a 30-yard run to a touchdown that tied the score.

The Blue and Gray team from Washington was not content to accept a tie score and employed passes freely in the final quarter. McGrath snared one heave for a yard gain, but another was intercepted by Hamilton.

A poor punt by Hamilton gave Georgetown the ball in mid-field and Nork and McCabe broke through for a substantial gain. Nork's run was another of his broken field dashes which netted 20 yards, but Georgetown was forced to surrender the ball on the 20-yard line. The ball was at a difficult angle and a field goal attempt was not tried.

Navy's passes brought the ball within distance for Hamilton to boot his decisive field goal near the end of the game. Ransford faked a throw and then gained 14 yards, and Hamilton netted 10 yards on a throw from Ransford. With the ball in mid-field, Hamilton tossed a pass to Lloyd for a 32-yard gain and Shapley carried the ball through right tackle to the 8-yard line, the only appreciable gain through the line Navy had made. Here Hamilton dropped back to boot his field goal that decided the game.

An 18-yard run was made by Nork on the following kick-off and Georgetown attempted to pass its way down the field. Two long heaves grounded and another was completed for a short gain that failed to make first down.

Forward Passes Give Badgers Victory, 20-10

The game was the climax of Wisconsin's homecoming and 40,000 spectators packed the stands. The gridiron was rainsoaked and the backfield men found it difficult to get started.

Wisconsin crossed the Iowa goal line three times, and each time the man scoring received one of the eight accurate tosses made by Rose.

Iowa depended almost entirely on a running attack. Cowboy Nick Kutsch, Armil and the other backs slashed their way through the Badger line for 20 first downs.

W. AND J.-PITT CLASH ENDS IN DRAW

26 Years' Deadlock Still Holds After Zero Tie.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 12 (By A. P.).—Washington and Jefferson was the favorite to break the 26-year deadock with the University of Pittsburgh before the annual battle today, but when the game ended the count remained at 13 wins for each school, the Panthers having held the Presidents to a scoreless tie.

The game was a battle of strength and was between two evenly matched teams, although the visitors seemed to have a little edge, while the mighty "Bill" Ames was in their line-up. Ames was hurt near the end of the second quarter, but came back in the fourth.

The closest Pitt came to scoring was in the first period when, by recovering a fumble, the ball was worked up to W. and J.'s 3-yard line, where it was lost on downs. The best the Presidents could do was to advance to the opponents' 16-yard line in the first quarter. Line-ups and summary:

New York U. Defeats Davis and Elkins, 10-0

New York, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—New York University overcame stubborn opposition today to conquer Davis and Elkins, 10 to 0. It was the eighth straight victory for Chick Meehan's versatile Violet eleven.

The plucky West Virginia invaders were outrushed and outpassed, but held the New Yorkers to a 3-point margin for three-quarters of the game and yielded a touchdown in the final period only after having taken the ball on downs on their own 1-yard line.

Kenneth Strong's placement goal from the 30-yard mark in the opening quarter put New York University in the lead. A 35-yard march early in the last period ended with Quarterback Conner carrying the ball through tackle for a touchdown, after which Strong booted the extra point.

With Ellis and Bowles starring, Davis and Elkins uncorked a rushing attack that threatened to score near the close of the game

In the second period Michigan opened up. Friedman, Gilbert and Osterbaan got going and eventually Friedman heaved 15 yards for a touchdown. Just before the half ended Friedman tied the count with his wonderful boot for a field goal.

Late in the third period Friedman threw a pass over the line to Hoffman and the Wolverines were out in front.

The Buckeyes started their big parade in the final session, Bell, Karow and Eby driving ahead until Eby went around an end for a touchdown. Clark was overanxious and his try for the point failed by inches.

YALE DOWNED BY TIGERS, 10 TO 7

Princeton Eleven Wins Grid Championship of Big Three.

Princeton then varied the attack with two slams at the line by Bridges, who gained 5 yards on his first thrust and two more on the second. Then Baruch, himself, walked into the line, but found the going rather gummy with the Yale team strewn before him. He gained a couple of yards and bogged down. The next play was a short, straight pitch from Baruch into the arms of Caulkins, who had only two jumps to go for the touchdown.

Baruch's drop-kick sent Princeton away to a lead of 7 to 0, but it was not long until Baruch's arm was throwing passes again and advancing the bow-backed row of black and yellow striped sweaters to the point where he decided that he could kick a field goal.

Princeton had kicked off to Yale after Caulkins' touchdown, but Yale got rid of the ball with a punt back to Princeton's 25-yard line. Baruch threw a pass to Caulkins for the getaway from this deep position and Princeton gained 20 yards at a single leap. Baruch threw another. Moeser, the right end, got this one and the gain was about 18 yards. Bridges crowded his way 4 yards through the line but Princeton was offside on the play so this was expensive progress, and Baruch pitched to Moeser again for a first down at Yale's 28-yard line.

This thing was becoming a serious matter to the well-dressed young gentlemen from New Haven who are wearing bowler hats this season, by the way, and rather trim black overcoats and dappled blue and white silk scarves in contrast to the shapeless felt millinery and laprobe coats affected by the frequenters of less elegant academies.

It became slightly more serious as Bridges lowered his head and butted his way through for a 4-yard gain. Baruch then pitched one to Miles that failed, but Princeton advanced 4 yards closer with a pass, Baruch to Caulkins.

Then Baruch dropped back to the 30-yard line and waved his foot at the ball in a drop kick that went straight between the riotproof uprights. Princeton had the game won there although Yale might have tied the score later had Yale hankered for the tasteless glory of a stand-off.

After the next kick-off, Jack Failing, the Yale right half, personally escorted the ball from the 2-yard line, where he caught the kick, to the middle of the field in three heroic staggers, including a 30-yard return of the kick-off, but on the last of these three efforts he was hurt and had to be carried off.

Johnny Hoben, a second string athlete, relieved him. This Hoben is a substitute to remember, for it was only a minute later that he fell just one stride short of the substitute's traditional hike to glory.

Crowding the ball into Princeton's own region, Yale punted to Princeton's 4-yard line, and on the next play, as Baruch threw a forward pass from behind his goal, a young opportunist in a Yale blue sweater reached up and wrapped his arms around the ball at Princeton's 20-yard line.

The Princeton men were pretty well distributed, though some of them were reclining in unconventional attitudes, when Hoben got that Princeton pass, and several of them took after the Yale substitute with no helpful intent. But the substitute was on his way and he was just a jump from a touchdown, on the 3-yard line, in fact, when Moeser brought him down.

Goodwine and Kline slammed themselves against the Princeton line for gains of only a yard apiece as the Tiger team dug in to defend the goal, and then Goodwine took a wide whirl around Princeton's right end for the remaining yard and the touchdown. Sturhan kicked the goal afterward.

chines by injecting fresh players continually.

From the very start of the battle it was apparent the team which secured the break would win. Neither would take a chance with the forward pass during the first half when straight football, tactics were resorted to. It was generally two or three plays and then punt, with the players of both elevens covering the kicks in faultless fashion.

After the first half had ended in a scoreless tie, with neither having a serious advantage, Notre Dame got its chance after an exchange of punts had left the ball in the Westerners' territory. Rockne's eleven had been pecking away at the Army line and shooting some plays off the tackles from the customary Notre Dame backfield shift formations.

On one of these plays the ball was passed to Flanagan. The clever Notre Dame back slid off his right tackle and pivoted out of the grasp of two Army tacklers. Instead of cutting in, Christy swung wide and started his dash for the Cadet's goal line. He ran the entire distance about 1 yard from the side line.

The Army had been playing a box defense; and Christy's long run, which gave his team a victory, was due to some of the cleverest blocking I have ever seen in any game. Although the play was sent off the right side of Notre Dame's line, it was Miller, the Hoosier left tackle, and Voedisch, the left end, who made Flanagan's run possible.

The moment the ball was snapped these players started for the Army secondary defense. Miller cut down Harry Wilson, the first man in the Army secondary on the Cadet's left side. Voedisch went through like mad and took off Harding, the last man of the Army box defense. Both Wilson and Harding were in commanding positions to nail Flanagan but they were cut down in superb fashion and almost as much credit is due Miller and Voedisch as Flanagan.

That run spurred Notre Dame to greater efforts. Rockne's line, although outweighed, rose in superhuman fashion and would not be budged one inch, despite the efforts of Wilson and Murrell, the Army backs, to puncture it. Even in the second quarter when Capt. Hewitt was injected into the battle, Notre Dame rallied whenever in danger and forced the Cadets to resort to the punt.

As the game wore on, Coach Jones, of West Point, sent every player of note into the game. The Army tossed forward passes to all corners of the gridiron, but Notre Dame was not to be denied and the Cadet passes were either uncompleted or intercepted.

Outside of Flanagan's run, there was really no other feature to the game except the aggressive and clean playing of both elevens. Contrary to expectations, Notre Dame did not depend upon the air game. The Western team attempted only two forward passes, one of which was uncompleted and the other intercepted.

Rockne used a straight line attack most of the time, as the slippery condition of the field made end running impossible, although Rockne had planned an impressive running attack directed at the supposedly weak Army ends.

In this style of attack the crisscross was used frequently. The delayed line back was also good for gains, as were the straight plunges of the Notre Dame backs. On several plays the ball was fed to the second back with the first acting as a decoy. On others, the ball was faked to the left half for a drive off his right tackle, but the ball went to the right halfback and he dashed just inside his left tackle.

It was such formations which caused the Army line to tighten and finally enabled Flanagan to slip outside his right tackle and then dash away for the only score of the game. The Notre Dame line played a whale of game. Although the Army gained at times, the Western forwards tightened when the Cadets started a march and either took the ball on downs or forced the Army to punt.

The Army attack was of the straight, bruising type although end runs were attempted frequently with the fleet Harry Wilson carring the ball. It was useless, however, to skirt the flanks because of the slippery condition of the playing surface, and shortly after the game got under way, both elevens resorted to the straight attack and depended upon their lines to open the holes.

Except for the uncertain footing of the playing field, weather conditions were ideal for the local struggle. The sun shone brightly at the start and the 70,000 fans who milled their way into the giant stadium presented a brilliant spectacle. This crowd is said to be the largest which ever attended a game in this section with the exception of those held in the Yale bowl at New Haven.

Half an hour before game time 1,200 Cadets clad in long gray coats entered the field and marched around the inclosure to their rooting section. No sooner had the future generals reached their seats than they started to root and sing their songs. This was very impressive, enough to inspire any football eleven. Even the Army mule was on exhibition, and appeared to enjoy the doings as much as any one else.

In that huge throng were thousands of Notre Dame rooters who wore the colors of the Western university. Over 1,000 had made the trip in special trains from Chicago and South Bend, while there were many others on hand with no college affiliations who claimed Notre Dame at their alma mater. When the final whistle was blown the Notre Dame rooters rushed on the field and tore up the goal posts. It appeared as if every one wanted a souvenir of the battle and either today or tomorrow pieces of the posts will be shown to other Notre Dame alumni not fortunate enough to make the trip.

TEAMS MEET FOR CUP HERE

Quantico-Fort Benning Annual Tilt Due Saturday.

THE third annual President's cup football game will be staged Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in the Catholic University stadium, when the Quantico Marines encounter Fort Benning. The Leathernecks will represent the marine corps and navy, while Fort Benning has been designated as the army standard bearer.

Although each eleven numbers several officers on its team, the rules allow but one officer to be on the field at any time during the game. More than one officer can appear during the course of the game, but two can not be on the field at the same moment.

The trophy was first contested in 1924, when the Third Corps Area beat the Scouting Fleet, 13 to 7, at Clark Griffith stadium here. The Scouting Fleet had previously beaten the Marines, 7 to 6, in New York, thereby earning the right to challenge the soldiers for the cup.

The idea of a President's cup series for the service grid laurels was not broached until after the Scouting Fleet had taken the measure of the Devil Dogs.

The Marines, however, captured the trophy last year, when they smothered Fort Benning. The Soldiers are determined to regain the cup this year and have been practicing two weeks for the game.

Maryland Frosh Tie N.C.U. Yearlings, 7-7

Chapel Hill, N. C., Nov. 13.—In a game marred by frequent disputes on the part of both players and officials, the Maryland freshmen held the North Carolina freshmen to a 7 to 7 tie on Emerson field here today.

The Tar Babies were the first to score when, early in the second quarter, Spalding, on a delayed triple pass, circled right end for 8 yards and a touchdown. The try for point was allowed when Maryland was off side.

Maryland scored in the third quarter when it completed three forward asses that gained 60 yards and placed the ball on Carolina's 17-yard line. Heagy made a beautiful onehanded catch of Dodson's pass over the goal line. For the touchdown, Dodson placekicked for the extra point.

Ward, Spalding, Wolf and Fenner were the Tar Babies' brightlights, while Roberts, Warcholy and Madigan played best for the Marylanders.

APACHES AND MOHAWKS HAVE HARD GAMES TODAY

Little Indians Will Test Palace

Fort Humphrey Team Has Fine Record for Season.

Stanton A. C. Seeking Revenge From Alex. Firemen.

BOTH the Mohawks and Apaches, guardians of American League and Union parks, respectively, are facing hard football games today. Palace and the Apaches are taking no chances that their game be finished in the semidarkness and have agreed to start at 2:30 o'clock. The kick-off for the Mohawk-Fort Humphrey battle is scheduled for 3 o'clock.

Two good games are expected. For fans who lean to the "home-grown" battles, which in this case involves two leading contenders for the District championship, the Apache-Palace game is offered. Those who have followed the clashes of the Mohawks with service elevens will probably travel to the home of the Nationals.

The Stanton A. C., Northeast's unlimited hope, journeys to Alexandria for a second clash with the Fire Department eleven, which came from behind recently to beat the Green boys by a single point.

Something of the relative strength of all the championship contenders will be known at the conclusion of the Apache-Palace game. The Mohawks have won and lost to Waverly and the Apaches defeated Mercury. Palace gets its titular baptism today.

Last year the Southwest eleven fought the "Little Indians" to a tie before at Washington barracks. Both teams have practically the same personnel this year. Palace offers as its backfield ace "Cotton" Clark, who earned his unlimited spurs last season.

The majority of fans are expecting the Mohawks to take the short end of the count in their game with Fort Humphreys. The Soldiers broke the winning streak of the Alexandria Fire Department eleven last Sunday by a 14 to 6 score, and earlier in the season defeated the Tank Corp team, of Camp Meade, Md.

With the exception of "Shorty" O'Connell, who suffered a broken collarbone last Sunday, the Indians are in top shape for the Fort team. Coach Heggarty has drilled the collection of stars gathered by Manager Patsy Donovan into a smooth-working combination, it is said.

Episcopal to Play 11 Basketball Games

Alexandria, Va., Nov. 13.—The Episcopal High School Athletic association announced the basketball schedule for the 1927 season here today, with eleven games comprising the card, which opens January 12, with Swavely, at Manassas, and closes at Orange, Va., on February 26 with Woodberry Forest School.

The games follow:

January 12, Swavely at Manassas, Va.; 22, Fishburne Military academy, at home; 26, Eastern High school of Washington, at home; 28, Augusta Military academy, of Fort Defiance, Va., at Charlottesville, Va.; 29, Virginia Episcopal school, at Lynchburg, Va.

February 2, Swavely Preparatory School, of Manassas, Va., at home; 5, Gilman Country school, of Baltimore, at home; 9, St. James' school, of St. James, Md., at home; 12, Tome Institute, at Port Deposit, Md.; 23, Baltimore Polytechnic institute, at home; 26, Woodberry Forest, at Orange, Va.

Soccer League Matches Will Begin Again Today

By RICHARD S. TENNYSON.

PLAY in the Washington Soccer league will be resumed today after three weeks of inactivity, except for the cup tie matches last week which do not figure as a part of the regular schedule, and as it pans out several teams that met last Sunday in the eliminations are named on the schedule to meet today. Last Sunday the teams played for the fun of it. Today the serious business of amassing points will be resumed.

Undaunted by the 13 to 1 defeat handed them last week by Marlboro, Clan MacClennan will go right back today against the same combination, and since the result counts in the league standing a different Clan eleven will no doubt be seen. The match will be played at Rosedale and Bill Castle will call the fouls.

Probably the best match in section 2 will be the Rosedale vs. Army Medical Center at Rosedale. In the cup tie tourney Rosedale defeated the Soldiers after a hard struggle, 4 to 1, but this result is no assurance that the same will occur today. The Medicos are not underestimating the youngsters now and are prepared to give and receive battle. J. Bullicek will handle the match.

The other match in section 2 brings together Concord and Rockville. Figuring on past performances Concord should win by two or three goals but Rockville is at the building stage and may strike a winning combination at any time. Field No. 2, Monument grounds, will be the scene of this match, and Ernest Slack will referee.

Games scheduled in section 1 should result in banner attractions. As it happens the teams that are to meet are as nearly evenly matched as possible and there is an unusual curiosity about the comparative strengths of the teams meeting.

The British Uniteds will face a severe test in the match with Walford on the Monument grounds, field No. 1, and if they come out of the match only two or three goals behind the champions, their showing will be considered creditable. Jess Burton, sr., will referee.

The Monroe youngsters will face the first real test of their strength when they encounter the German-Americans on the barracks field. A victory for the former schoolboys, which seems likely, will boost their stock to a respectable plane, while the German-Americans need the win to keep their heads above water, as they lost the first match of the season. Referee, J. Malloch.

The plucky little German-American Reserves will invade Fort Myer to give battle to the soldiers, and while a victory is hardly possible for the "Little Germans," soccer fans will journey to the military post for the action that is sure to result. Staat, Reserves goal keeper, proved himself one of the best at that position in the city last Sunday when his individual efforts held the strong Walford eleven to three goals. M. Krusse will officiate.

SOCCER GAMES TODAY

SECTION 1.

British Uniteds vs. Walford; No. 1 field Monument grounds at 3 o'clock. J. Burton referee.

SECTION 2.

Rosedale vs. Army Medical Center at Rosedale at 3 o'clock. L. Bullicek referee.

PALACE PROS IN BENEFIT AT ALEX.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Nov. 13.—The Palace club basketball team of Washington, will visit this city next Saturday night where it will engage the St. Mary's Celtics, local amateur champions, in a benefit game for the Alexandria United Charities. The game is booked for the Armory hall and will start at 9 o'clock.

It will be the first appearance of the Palace five of the season and will help sharpen the Washington American Basketball league entry for its pro debut on the Arcadia court in Washington Sunday, November 21, when Washington plays Philadelphia.

While the ultimate result is a foregone conclusion since the local Celtics are only youths of high and prep school age, the professionals played them last season and met a team that was surprisingly good on both the offense and defense for such little experience as the Celts have had. The score last year was 56 to 21 with Palace leading.

Calvary Quint Beats Epiphany "Big Five"

Led by Dunn and Scrivener, the former a product of Central High school, Calvary Methodist church tossers easily defeated the Epiphany Big Five last night, 28 to 16. Dunn and Scrivener each found the net four times from the floor, while the ex-schoolboy dropped 5 foul goals in as many attempts. The Calvary Reserves defeated the Peerless A. C., 34 to 9, in a preliminary game.

WASH. & LEE WINS OVER V. P. I.

Generals Stop Rally in Last Quarter for 13-0 Victory.

LYNCHBURG, Va., Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Washington and Lee defeated Virginia Tech here this afternoon before a crowd of 8,000 people by the score of 13 to 0. The touchdowns came in the second and last periods, the former from line plunges and a 21-yard forward pass, and the latter from a pass intercepted by Eagleback on Tech's 65-yard line, from which he carried the ball to the 10-yard line. Rauber scored on the third down and kicked goal. The Generals outplayed Tech excepting for most of the fourth quarter.

The Generals' first touchdown resulted from an offside penalty on fourth down, but for which Washington and Lee would have lost the ball.

In the second period Washington and Lee scored a touchdown but failed to kick goal. The score came as the result of an offside penalty which gave the Generals their first down. Two more center rushes by Rauber were good for 13 yards, putting the ball on Tech's 22-yard line. Here a beautifully executed pass, Whitehouse to Palmer, resulted in the score. The Generals' goal was never in danger from the Maroon and Gold's offensive.

Tech carried the ball 50 yards in the third period to the Generals' 28-yard line when Generals intercepted a forward pass and Rauber punted. After this the period became a kicking battle and at the end the score was still 6 to 0, in Washington and Lee's favor.

In the first half of the game Washington and Lee gained 156 yards and made six first downs against 41 yards gained by V. P. I. and two first downs.

Tech outplayed Washington and Lee in the first part of the last period until Eagleback intercepted a Tech pass on Tech's 35-yard line, and ran to Tech's 10-yard line. Here Whitlock got 8 through right tackle and 1 through center, after which Rauber went over for a touchdown. Rauber kicked goal from placement.

Just before the final whistle blew the Generals intercepted a pass on Tech's 25-yard line, but the game ended before the first down was run.

SPALDINGS TAKE FIFTH.

The Spalding eleven won its fifth straight game yesterday when it downed the Samosets, 3 to 0. Phau's drop-kick decided the battle.

CAPITAL CITY TITLE AT STAKE

Wintons Can Capture Honors Today at Fairlawn.

THE Winton A. C. eleven, of Southeast, can clinch the Capital City league's 150-pound championship today in its game with the Brooklyn A. C. team on Fairlawn field, starting at 3 o'clock. In the other league battle, the Northerns will tackle the Knick Preps on the Washington Barracks gridiron also at 3 o'clock.

With the exception of the Wintons, all the league teams have been defeated and have figured in tie games.

The Wintons, by winning today, will have three victories in as many starts and with a lone game with the Knick Preps remaining, will have the title in the bag.

Brokland has shown steady improvement and will be especially prepared to make the fight of its life. In its two games, Brookland tied the Knick Preps and lost by a single point to the Northerns.

The Northerns, beaten last Sunday on an intercepted pass on the final play of the game, are anxious to make amends in their battle with the Knicks.

Golfers Rally to Support Of Christmas Seal Event

Tournament, Planned at Jess Sweetzer's Suggestion, Will Be Held at Atlantic City December 8-10—Many Prizes Offered.

THE attention of local golfers has just been called to a national golf tournament scheduled to take place at Absecon, Atlantic City, December 8, 9 and 10 to be known as the Christmas Seal tournament, and to fix attention of several million golf players on the fight being made to stamp out the white plague.

The suggestion for this tournament was made by Jess Sweetser, the noted American golfer and British amateur champion, whose health recently failed and who is recuperating at Asheville, N. C. Sweetser sponsored the idea in a telegram to A. W. Tillinghast, the noted golf course architect and golf player of New York city. The latter at once arranged to have such a tournament at the famous Sea View club.

Already ambitious golfers from all parts of the country are sending in their entries either through local tuberculosis associations or to the tournament chairman, A. W. Tillinghast, 33 W. Forty-second street, New York city. Among the players so far enrolled are Richard A. Jones, jr., Finlay S. Douglas, John G. Anderson, Howard W. Perrin and Maurice Risley.

There will be mixed foursomes on the final day and prizes will be awarded to the winner of the qualification round; winner of the tournament; runner-up, and winner of the defeated eight, winner, runner-up and defeated eight winner in the other five flights. Those on the course whether players or spectators, will be required to wear Christmas Seal badges which, for the three-day event, cost $2, and for a single day, $1.

The hotels in Atlantic City are preparing for a large preholiday influx of golfers, not only because of the prominence and skill of the entrants now being enrolled, but because of the constructive suggestion made by Jess Sweetser, who believes that golfers should, as a body, take a hand in the present-day scientific fight for better health conditions.

Gen. James A. Drain, past commander of the American Legion, and a prominent member of the Washington Golf club, when asked his opinion of this tournament, said he was much impressed with the message from Mr. Sweetser, who is battling to regain his health, and heartily in sympathy with the object of the contest.

"I can readily see the great advantage of the plan to fix the attention of the millions of golfers on the campaign to stamp out tuberculosis now being waged throughout the country by the various local and the national tuberculosis associations. I believe that this great army of golfers will swing into line by helping to make this year's sale of Christmas seals larger than ever before. I believe that all Washington golfers will take a keen interest in the coming event and I hope that our city may be represented in the tournament."

Jewish Stag Night Lists Fisticuffers

A joint stag smoker for members only and featuring boxing will be held by the Jewish Community center and the Young Men's Hebrew association in the Cafritz auditorium at the Jewish Community center, Wednesday night, starting at 8 o'clock.

Eight bouts under amateur rules of three two-minute rounds each will be staged by the young fisticuffers of the Pals club and the J. C. C. The boxers will represent the following classes: 95, 110, 115, 118, 122, 125, 132, 135 and 140.

A collegiate jazz band will furnish musical entertainment between bouts, and a battle royal will follow the amateur program. Jim McNamara will be in charge.

LOCAL TEAM BEATEN AT DELAWARE

Gallaudet Goes Down, 10-7, in Great Battle.

Special to The Washington Post.

NEWARK, Del., Nov. 13.—Delaware and Gallaudet had a great battle here today, Delaware winning out, 10 to 7. Delaware showed wonderful improvement compared with last week and had Gallaudet on the defensive much of the game.

Delaware's first score came in the second quarter when Creamer drop-kicked a goal from the 25-yard line. In the third quarter Leveland caught a forward pass thrown by Creamer and raced 65 yards for a touchdown. Gallaudet's score came in the final quarter when Creamer's interference with a long forward pass gave Gallaudet the ball on Delaware's 3-yard line and Byunk carried it over.

Harvard Fan Scores Jibes at Princeton

New York, Nov. 13 (By A. P.). The Harvard Lampoon's recent jibes at Princeton were "not so smart," in the opinion of the father of the president of the Lampoon's board of editors. And the editor's 11-year-old brother remarked today: "John will be home for Christmas—if he isn't in jail."

John O. Weedon, a Harvard senior, is the president of the board of editors. His father, Burt D. Wheedon, a Brooklyn lawyer, was asked if he believed the "Princeton stuff" was brilliant and clever? "You may think so," he replied, "but I know everybody else doesn't believe the things so smart."

Two Sunday School Games Close Affairs

Two out of the three games in the Sunday School Basketball league at the Y. M. C. A. last night were nip-and-tuck affairs. The closest game was between Covenant and the Clarendon Baptist five, which resulted in a win for the former team at 18 to 17. King led his teammates in this setto with four field goals. Another good battle was the Columbia Heights Christian-Mount Vernon match, which resulted in a 19-to-16 triumph for Columbia Heights. The final game of the night found North Carolina Methodist showing the way to Calvary Baptist at 23 to 16.

Old Line Harriers Win Over Virginia, 23 to 32

University of Maryland's varsity cross-country team scored its third win in as many starts this season when it vanquished University of Virginia harriers, 23 to 32 points yesterday at College Park. A Cavalier harrier, however, was first, Hutcheson showing the way to the field. His time for the route, just under 6 miles, was 33 minutes 48 2-5 seconds. Hill and Newnam, Old Liners, were second and third, respectively.

GREENBRIER CADETS WIN.

Lewisburg, W. Va., Nov. 13.—Greenbrier Military School defeated Bluefield, in Bluefield, 12 to 7, on straight football when Griswold came to line for two touchdowns. The Greenbrier Midgets defeated Rainelle in Lewisburg 7 to 0. Jarrott scored a pass from Bonyoglom.

The Sportswoman

By DOROTHY E. GREENE

English Women Lead. Polo Contest Today. Hockeyists Pick Team. Riders Seeking Prizes.

IN archery as in hockey and lacrosse English women still lead the field as a comparison of the wining scores made at our national championship tournament at Bryn Mawr this fall and the winning scores made at the grand national championship meet in England in July prove.

At Bryn Mawr there were 32 women and 67 men shooting while in the English tournament there were 71 women and 33 men. Past records show that there are always more men than women taking part in our national tournament and more women than men in the English tournament. However, the records also show that while our women make poorer scores than their English cousins the men make better scores in the United States.

The following comparison is confined to the national round for women and the York round for men as the Columbia round and American round are not shot in England.

CHAMPIONSHIP SCORES.

WOMEN.

MEN.

England — H. A. Cox, 177—783; R. Brooks-King, 184—762; Maj. J. J. B. Farley, 178—709; W. Andrew, 174—734.

Miss Smith, United States national champion, according to her score would have won third place among the English women whether reckoned by our system of addin hits and scores, or by the English point system. According to the point system Miss Wallace would have won 2 points for gross score, ½ point for hits at 60 yards, 1 point for hits at 50 yards, 1 point for score at 50 yards, 6½ points in all. Mrs. Sanford would have won 1 point for score at 60 yards, Miss Smith would have ½ point for hits at 60 yards as she and Miss Wallace made the same number of hits at this distance.

Among the men the scores made in England were much below those made in the United States and the scores made by Mr. Cox, Mr. Brooks-King, Maj. Farley and Mr. Andrew would have given them only seventh, eighth, ninth and tenth places, respectively, in the United States tournament.

It is also interesting to note that while according to our system of adding hits and scores Mr. Cox won over Mr. Brooks-King, yet, according to the English system Mr. Brooks-King was awarded the championship, having won 6 points and Mr. Cox having won only 4 points.

The Capital Athletic club announced the enrollment of fourteen new members who will take part in the varied activities the organization has planned for its winter program.

Members of the Red and White teams of the Washington Polo club will play this afternoon at 3 o'clock on the Potomac Park field unless the turf is found to be frozen when inspected this morning.

Players who will figure in the two teams captained by Misses Elizabeth Jackson and Maud Preece are Misses Lydia Archbold, Frances Saul, Margaret Jones, Madelain Aleshire, Anna Hedrick and Mrs. Theodore Wilkinson.

In the event that the Weather Bureau's promise of an Indian summer materialize, the local team will act as hostess to the Chestertown four on Wednesday afternoon, and Sunday, November 21, will entertain the Baltimore Polo club.

The All-Baltimore field hockey team was not named as had been planned following the tryouts held at the Baltimore Country club yesterday, but the players will be picked and announced at the tea which will follow the Philadelphia Esmeralda-Baltimore match this afternoon.

Today's match will be played at the Baltimore polo grounds and the four local players who tried for position yesterday will figure in the match. Misses Alice Nicholl, Miriam Faries, Katherine Whitfield and Virginia Hopkins all made a good impression on the selection committee and it is thought that Miss Hopkins has more than an even chance of displacing Miss Iglehart, who has played goal on the All-Baltimore since the team was organized.

The two teams will be entertained at luncheon preceding the game and all members of the Washington club have been invited to attend the tea at the country club after the match.

Rewards of lessons in riding for the ten girls who have made the best record in athletics each week at Mitchell park playground, S and Twenty-second streets northwest, are causing a seething activity among the girls who frequent the playground.

Arrangements which the director, Miss Jane Kincheloe, has made with the Riding and Hunt club which donates the ten horses and instruction each Thursday afternoon at 3:30, is greatly appreciated by the girls and their athletic ability is said to show marked improvement since the plan was started.

Miss Kincheloe states that the riders who prove their ability at horsemanship will be permitted by the club to ride in the indoor horse show which will be held this winter. Among the girls who rode last week were Edith Fishburn, Alicia Stewart, Betty Angus and Priscilla Evans.

Once again the eighteen teams which play in the annual Interplayground Basketball league schedule will make their initial appearance. The matches will start on Tuesday, and Georgetown, winner of the 1925 city championship, will have a strong team in the field to defend its much coveted title.

The matches will be played on Tuesdays at 4 p. m. and on Saturdays at 10:30 a. m. in four sectional leagues. The winner of section 1 meeting the winner of section 2, and the winner of section 3 meeting the winner of section 4. The victors in these semifinals clashes will end the season by playing for the best two out of three matches for the title.

Last year Georgetown defeated Garfield, 13-8 and 18-4, in the finals. Rosedale was eliminated in the semifinals by Garfield, and Columbia Road was eliminated by Georgetown in the other semifinals match.

The teams which will compete this season include:

Section 3—Rosedale, Burroughs, Bloomingdale and Columbia.

Two hikes appear on today's program of the Red Triangle Outing Club and visitors are invited to attend them both. The first will be a nearly morning affair and the second will include supper campfire party.

The morning walk will be through Rock Creek Park to Wardman Park Inn, where the group will breakfast. The group will meet at the end of the Mount Pleasant car line at 7:30 a. m., and the breakfast will be concluded in time for those who desire to attend church.

Afternoon hikers will meet at Fourteenth and Kennedy streets at 2:30 o'clock. The route includes the Sixteenth street reservoir, the woods skirting Rock Creek to Forest Glen, where the supper campfire will be built. Members who desire to remain out for the evening should bring a flashlight, cup, spoon, and lunch. Coffee will be furnished by the club.

Georgia U. Conquers Georgia Tech, 14-13

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 13 (By A. P.). Coming from behind after being outplayed in the first half and held scoreless, the University of Georgia Bulldogs vanquished their ancient rivals, the Golden Tornado of Georgia Tech, here today, 14 to 13, before an estimated 35,000 wildly cheering audience.

Both sides used air attacks to advantage, but in the final periods Georgia demonstrated an ability to tear through the line for long gains.

PLAYGROUNDS CAGE SERIES TO OPEN

20 Teams Matched in 10 Games; Opener on Saturday.

MUNICIPAL playground basketballers will open the annual interplayground series Saturday, when 20 teams will be matched in 10 games. This is the largest number of teams ever to be represented in the series, and playground officials say that next to soccer it is the most rapidly growing sport among the boys on playgrounds.

Twin Oaks was victorious last year and Plaza the home grounds of the classy Stanton club, was the runner up. All of the Stanton crowd learned the rudiments of the game on the courts at Plaza and the ability they have shown in the past two seasons in local gyms disproves an old theory that an outdoor trained team is at a disadvantage on an indoor court.

One of the greatest advantages of the playground leagues, from a physical training point of view, is that all games are played in the fresh air and then, as was pointed out by a playground official yesterday, the youngsters are not in danger of injuring their pedal extremeties as they are on hardwood.

The 20 playground teams will be divided into four five-team leagues and the champions of each will be pitted in a city title series. The winner will be rewarded by the playground department.

Kanawha Seniors List Court Practice Today

The Kanawha Senior basketball team is scheduled to practice this morning in the Jewish Community Center at 11 o'clock. The following players are expected to report: Chatlen, Ogus, Sktar, Frenchy, Cohan, Laefsky, Abramson, C. Newman, H. Newman, P. Sykes, and Stein. The Kanawhas are seeking practice games with unlimited and senior teams having gymnasiums. Telephone Manager Ersham, at Lincoln 5159, before 6 o'clock.

Penn State's Eleven Downs Bucknell, 9-0

State College, Pa., Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—In a slow game Penn State defeated Bucknell university today, 9 to 0. The Bisons never were able to get within 30 yards of State's goal. Penn State ran up twelve first downs, while the Bisons were garnering only two. The Lions scored a touchdown in the second period when Pritchard recovered Diehl's fumble on Bucknell's 35-yard line. On the first play, Roepke tore through tackle to the 7-yard line and then Pritchard smashed through for the touchdown. Pritch and Roepke attempted five placement kicks. Only one was successful, when Roepke booted from the 20-yard line in the third period.

MOST OF NATS ARE ON MARKET, SAYS GRIFFITH

Judge 'Trades' Denied by Old Fox

Big League Meetings Soon to Bring Many Deals.

Peck Seems Slated for Boston in Role of Manager.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

STOVE league fans probably will have to worry along on the fuel already on hand until after the big league meetings next month, and indications are that it will be a case of "freezing" until then and then having more "oil" than the old stove can safely and comfortably use.

At these annual gatherings of the diamond moguls, something of moment always happens, but the dope is that those of this season will be exceptional. President Clark Griffith states that there is nothing new with respect to the personnel of the Washington club, but admits that big doings are expected when the magnates answer the call of their league heads. So important is the coming meeting to the Nats that pilot Bucky Harris, now honeymooning across the big pond, has timed his return so that he may be on hand.

"While indications are that we will stand pat except, possibly, in one or two cases, every member of the Washington club is subject to trade, provided I get what I consider the better of any offer made," said the Old Fox yesterday. Griff, however, would not get down to discussion of any specific deal which might be pulled off.

Rumor is still strong that First Baseman Joe Judge will go to the Browns in a shift which will bring George Sisler, deposed St. Louuis pilot, here. Griffith has denied this more than once and still sticks to his story.

Another breezy yarn, this time wafted from the Cape Cod sector, is to the effect that Phil Todt will come here, along with some other Red Sox players, in exchange for Judge and Roger Peckinpaugh, with the latter getting the managerial job. This, too, is all "hot air," says Griffith.

Just why the fans are picking on the Nats' popular and nobby doorway guardian as Washington's only trading material is not known, for the records show that he is just about the best in the league right now and that the Nats have little chance of improving themselves in this position, for the simple reason that there are few better men in the game than Judge.

It is very easy to see why the veteran shortstop is listed as among those to go. The fact that Buddy Myer got the call in the season just closed does not make brains necessary in figuring that the Rajah is too high-priced a player to be carried along merely in a utility role. He frequently has been mentioned as of managerial timber, and as the only vacant pilot berth in the majors is that vacated by Lee Fohl, this undoubtedly started the whole yarn.

Indications are that most of the other big league teams are in the same position as the Nats. All are out to try to better themselves, and several have players on their pay rolls who undoubtedly are far from through, but who did not give satisfaction last season and would perhaps do better under another boss and with a change in baseball atmosphere.

It is this class of players—and there appear to be many—who will be put on the auction block next month. And, like the mule, who always seems to think that the grass in the other pasture is the greenest, club owners are likely to do considerable bidding and exchanging of men.

Peabody Soccerities Down Edmunds, 1-0

The Peabody school soccer team is nearing the title in the Plaza division and needs but two more victories. Yesterday, by beating the Edmunds booters, 1 to 0, it brought its record to four triumphs and one tie out of five games.

The Carberry team will be met by the Peabody on the Plaza Wednesday.

Pros to Make Better Tennis, Says Suzanne

Chicago, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Suzanne Lenglen believes in assured success for professional tennis because "it is so much better sport."

"In amateur tournaments," the French star explained, "one plays a great many poor—what you call them?—bum—players, and your game gets ragged."

Professional matches provide sterner opposition, and Suzanne finds that "you can't help but play better."

Poles' Claim to Garkawienko Causes International Strife.

ALEXANDER GARKAWIENKO, big grappler who recently appeared to good advantage here is given a place on the heavyweight wrestling card of three bouts to be staged at the Arcadia auditorium next Tuesday night.

International strife was almost caused when he was claimed by the Poles as their very own. Garkawienko was born in the Ukraine, raised in Warsaw when that city was under Russian rule, and now calls his home in the same city, but under Polish rule. Try to figure it out.

Diplomatically, he is billed as a combination of the three countries and that seems to satisfy all concerned. As a matter of fact, Alex did clean up for all opposition in the recent Warsaw tournament that carried with it the wrestling championships of Soviet Russia, Poland and the Ukraine.

Nick Brakos, who will oppose Garkawienko next Tuesday, is a product of Lithuania, so the match will have a distinctive Slavic atmosphere. Brakos is a powerful chap, who knows enough of the game to give any opponent a deal of trouble, it seems, according to his record.

There should be plenty of action in the two other bouts. Charles Hanson and Charles Leppenan, who will clash, are able grapplers, and so are Ivan Linow, the gigantic Russian and William Demetral, battling Greek, who will open the show.

Bank of Washington Bowlers Make Bid for Second Title

Last Season's Champions Have Won 22 Games in 24 Starts—Lead by Two and One-Half Games—V. Ott Stars.

By W. CHARLES QUANT.

THE Bank of Washington club is making a determined effort to win its second consecutive pennant in the Bankers league, as is evidenced by its record of 22 wins in 24 games rolled this season. The champs have won their last six sets. The only two reverses that they suffered were in the second week of the season and resulted from the use of an 80 dummy score.

The American Security & Trust Co., in second place, have won but one game less than the leaders, but the three extra games that they rolled have been charged to the loss column.

An interesting battle is being staged for individual averages, with Sheehy's 115-5 being best, while several others with 112 are ready to pass him at the least slip.

V. Ott, of the Federal Reserve five, seems quite prominent in the official records with a 391 set, which is high; second home game of 146, leader in spares with 66; tied with Gheen and Harrington for 15 strikes, and well up in average with 112-10.

Last week's performances saw Washington Loan & Trust also on a spurt which has resulted in 11 victories in their last 12 starts, and they are now sixth in the 18-club organization.

AGRICULTURE LEAGUE.

Entomology surprised the Aggie followers when they won three of their six games rolled against the Economics five. DeGlantz turned in a total of 453 pins for the four games he rolled for the Entomology club.

Accounts is still on top of the heap after taking two games from Plant Bureau, largely through the efforts of Capt. Stork. So-Kems took three from Property in another upset, while Solicitors won but one game from Interurbans.

CENTENNIAL FIVE LEADS.

The Centennial five beat Ingram three times and dropped them from the top to fourth position, the victors taking the lead themselves in the East Washington Church circuit. Jeffries, of the new leaders, set a league record with his 151 game, while his team rolled a 1,672 set, including a 589 game, both of which were new season's marks.

MASONIC LEAGUE.

By losing but one game while Gompers was dropping a pair to New Jerusalem, Columbia retained leadership of the Masonic league. Washington Centennial was handed a forfeit by Mount Pleasant and passed Gompers for second place. Lafayette's triple beating by Brightwood and Gompers rolling a 428 game were the upsets of the week.

Cross, with 371; Doleman, 363; Cost and Rosenberg, 356; Supplee and Iseman, 357, featured the individual performances.

GIRL SCOUT NOTES

Troop No. 1 has changed its meeting time from 7 p. m. to 5:30 p. m. The scouts learned the song "Onward," which was sung at the court of awards. Those who did not know how to knit, learned, preparatory to making a blanket for a hospital as the troop's community service. Several new games were played and songs sung, followed by taps and court of honor. Martha Osborn is acting scribe.

Troop No. 2, of Maryland, of which Jeanne Molyneaux is scribe, had its meeting at 7 p. m., Friday. The meeting opened with setting-up exercises. Patrol corners followed. The patrol names are Chrysanthemum, Arbutus and Bob-o-link. After patrol corners they learned first aid. The meeting closed with taps. Court of honor followed.

Troop No. 7 met at 4 p. m., Monday. After patrol corners the scribe and treasurer were elected, as well as patrol leaders and corporals.

Troop No. 11 held its meeting in the Sherwood church. Opening exercises were held with the troop in arrow formation. Prior to inspection, the "lighthouse" point system was explained to the girls. Althea Hull and Hortense Cusack made a lighthouse of cardboard, the bricks of which are to be filled in by the patrols, according to the number of points gained by each patrol weekly. A spirit of friendly competition already pervades the troop. At patrol corners the girls composed verses, which they put to some popular tune for patrol songs. Instruction followed. Mrs. Perry took charge of the tenderfeet, while Mrs. Dowling, Althea Hull and Hortense Cusack took over the duties of instructing the aspirants for second class. Just before good-night circle, the laws were discussed and the songs, written by the girls in patrol corners, were sung. The troop's paper, "The Chatterbox," was distributed, and the song, "Onward," learned.

Troop No. 3 gave its operetta, "The Rivals," on the night of November 6, at the Madison school. The amount cleared was nearly $50, and will be given to the local council for the 1926-27 budget. Miss Bonnell, captain of the troop, teaches music at the Columbia Junior High school, and brought her boys' quartet, who sang two numbers. Although the troop has been concentrating on the operetta and has not given time to study of merit badges and consequently did not receive any at the court of awards Friday, they attended en masse.

Troop No. 15's captain, Mrs. Howard Paine, has not been able to attend the troop meetings because of illness. At the last meeting Miss MacIntosh visited the troop and may take over the captaincy. The majority of the girls are now working on second class tests. The troop has four new members, who are all second class scouts and received merit badges at the court of awards. The scouts are selling Christmas cards to their families and friends in order to earn money for troop equipment. Hilda Zwillinger is scribe.

Troop No. 18 hiked to Rock Creek park recently. The girls met at the Hamline church, hiked from there up Sixteenth street and down Morrow drive to "Miller's Cabin." When they arrived, two patrols were told to gather leaves and sticks, while the other two played a compass game. After enough fuel was gathered the two patrols that had got the firewood played the compass game, while the other two built a fire in the rock fireplace. They made a stew, which they ate on toasted bread. They roasted marshmallows and then cleaned up. Just before lunch, the scouts were told to follow directions given them for a treasure hunt, which led through rocky paths and finally to the treasure, which was their lunch. Capt. Lyons taught a song and explained about the court of awards, which the troop decided to attend. On the way home the girls swung along to the tune of "Strap Your Pack to Your Back."

draw the American flag, the second class candidates learned more of the Morse code, the lieutenant read Dickens' "Why the Chimes Rang," and the troop made a promise to be at the court of awards on time and properly uniformed. The fourth patrol was awarded the white and green ribbons for perfect inspection. The scribe notes this week were written by the Hawk patrol.

Troop 24 met at the regular place and had a Halloween party instead of the scout meeting. Parents and friends were invited and Miss Eveline Gleaves, local director, was among the guests. The Juene-Amis, or Young Friends patrol, gave a play, "Little Women," by Louise Alcott. The Peter Pan patrol gave a skit, "Miss Dobson." There were solos, duets and dances.

Daisy Troop 26 held its meeting with the captain, Miss Margaret Tuckey, in charge. The troop learned the song "Onward." By a vote it was decided the troop would not hold its regular meeting last Friday, but would meet at 6:30 p. m. to attend Court of Awards. At closing circle Miss Tuckey asked Lois Hall to explain what the fourth Girl Scout law meant to her. Then she asked Second Lieut. Dorothy Stubbs and Elizabeth Franzoni in what particular ways Girl Scouts must try especially hard to live up to this law. Ruth Hunt blew taps, and the meeting was followed by court of honor. Saturday morning Estelle Henderson assisted at the Near East Relief office, Lois Hall is scribe.

At Troop 28's last meeting the troop planned a hike. They went to Cabin John on the street car and when they got there, found a spot in the woods by the stream, which place the hikers made headquarters for the day. Three patrol fires were built and while lunch was being cooked four of the scouts went up the road to meet Miss Gleaves, their former captain. After clearing, Miss Gleaves and Miss Stevens, captain of the troop, joined in games before the troop started on the homeward trail.

Star of Bethlehem Troop No. 30 met at the Macfarland Junior High school. After opening exercises plans were made for attending the court of awards. The captain, Mrs. Albert Reid, told a story based on the third scout law. The troop held a bazaar October 29 and 30, and also on November 6, which proved very successful. All last winter the troop did community service work every Saturday. They took part in the children's performances held at the Tivoli theater. This winter they are continuing the work, alternating one week at the Tivoli and one week at the Chevy Chase theaters. The troop also will resume its Saturday afternoon visits to the soldiers at Walter Reed hospital. The troop scribe is Mary Reid.

Troop No. 37, of Woodside, Md., opened its meeting with a ceremony and games. Plans were made for a hike yesterday. The troop has changed its meeting place to the Woodside school, where it will have more room.

Troop No. 43 met at St. Albans for a Halloween party. Each patrol presented a stunt, then filed through the "chamber of horrors." There were refreshments and bobbing for apples, concluded by a ghost story.

Troop No. 47 met out of doors at the Chevy Chase school. There were games outside, then the tenderfoots went inside to prepare for their tests, while the second class scouts planted iris around the school grounds. The girls intend to plant some other flowers as soon as they can get them ready. A hike was planned for the following day. Mrs. William Peters is captain and Margaret James, scribe.

In the absence of the captain, Miss Margaret Clarke, and the lieutenant, Miss Esther Schwartz, Mrs. E. T. Kirkpatrick attended the meeting last week. The meeting was conducted by Frances Bailey, patrol leader of the Bob Whites. The flag presented the girls in June by their mothers and the Civic association was used for the first time this season. After regular ceremonies, patrol corners, signaling, games, etc., Mrs. Kirkpatrick conducted general games and the scouts learned a good night round.

Troop No. 59 has two patrols—Trail Blazers, of which Mary Stuart is patrol leader, and Eagles, of which Harriet Brooke is patrol leader. Harriet is also troop scribe. Last Sunday some of the scouts went with the captain, Miss Mary Phelan, to the New National museum.

Troop No. 61 was given a party at the home of Mrs. C. B. Smith. The members learned a new song.

Jonquil Troop No. 62 met at the Cleveland Park Congregational church Friday. The scouts had a horseshoe formation for the opening ceremony. There were patrol corners and games and a story, "The Dreadful Griffin."

The training courses for advanced leaders are being conducted at the Little house, 1750 New York avenue, Tuesday evening, beginning November 9, from 6 to 8 o'clock and on Friday mornings, beginning last Friday, from 10 to 12 o'clock. The courses cover new methods of teaching tenderfoot, second class and first class, and changes in the handbook. This course is invaluable to those scouters who have not taken any training in the last year.

Miss Julia Williamson, local director of Philadelphia, is conducting a brown owl powwow at the Little house over this week-end. Yesterday's session was from 5 to 8 o'clock and today's from 10:30 to 2:30 o'clock and from 1:30 to 3:30 o'clock.

GIRLS FRIENDLY

An advisory board meeting was held at the rectory of St. Paul's church, Rock Creek, November 3, to discuss plans for the organization of a candidates' class in the parrish.

Those present were Mrs. E. B. Meigs, diocesan president of the society; Mrs. A. S. Stuart, diocesan head of the candidates' department; Mrs. F. J. Bohanan, wife of the rector; Mrs. Arthur Anderson, Mrs. A. A. Turner, Mrs. C. C. Boswell, Miss Mary Boyden and Miss Sadie Carlisle. The class will meet each Friday at 3:30 p. m.

Dr. W. Sinclair Bowen addressed the branch at St. Paul's church, Rock Creek, last Monday evening, speaking on "Religion as the Relationship to God." Besides the branch, there were many visitors present. It was voted to send $5 to the holiday house Sunday school, and to send a Thanksgiving box to St. Andrews' school, St. Andrews, Tenn.

Ninety-four candidates were present at the meeting of the class at Epiphany chapel last Monday. The senior candidates, who are 12 years old or more, collected class lists, dues and assisted Miss Keyser in various duties. These girls wear the blue ribbon badges of the society and are Frances Morgan, Emily Powell, Frances Stevens, Mildred Ramesey, Isabelle Riggles, Rosie Ritze, Margaret Hardest, Martha Feary, Marjorie Haga, Mildred Bain, Ruth Bickerton, Mary Ragan, Margaret Smith, Arminta Naylor, Violet Davies and Mary Cline.

The night class of Epiphany chapel held a meeting Thursday evening.

The branch at the Church of the Advent met at the home of Miss Marion Zeigler Tuesday evening, and the girls worked on articles for the annual G. F. S. bazaar to be held November 23, for the benefit of the Holiday House. They also are selling Christmas cards for the branch treasury. At the recent parish bazaar the girls had charge of the candy table. Miss Helen Taylor is president of this branch and Miss Martha Brown is secretary.

About 50 girls attended the weekly branch supper at Epiphany church last Monday evening. Miss Emily Perry organized a Current Events class and Phillip Davis addressed the branch.

The branch at Christ Church, Washington parish, met Tuesday evening. The branch is helping to support a student who is studying for the ministry and also is working for the improvements in the chancel of the church.

The branch at St. Mark's church wrapped packages for the "Orange Tree" which they will have charge of at the parish bazaar, November 16 to 18.

The candidates of St. Luke's church, in charge of Miss Olive Amos, gave a Halloween party last week to the children at the H street home.

The candidates at St. John's church, Bradley Lane, have formed a vested choir, which leads the Sunday school each Sunday. Mrs. Parker, wife of the rector is working with Mrs. George Parisean and Miss Virginia Offutt.

The candidates of Emmanuel church, Anacostia, are sewing for Sibley hospital and making scrapbooks under the direction of Mrs. Frederick Traband.

STYLES UNWITTINGLY ARE SET BY PRINCE

High Rank and Popularity Leads Haberdashers to Exploit Likings.

London, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—The Prince of Wales can start a fashion in any article of men's wear and often does but he does it unwittingly and is certainly not a willing arbiter of fashion.

Rather he is most anxious to avoid publicity or advertisement of any sort and often goes out of his way to escape attention. He dresses well and tastefully, but not any more so than the average man about town.

His high rank and popularity, however, are seized on by haberdashers and tailors to do some quiet advertising on their own. When it becomes known through whisperings that the Prince of Wales favors this or that article of attire, it becomes the fashion immediately.

Loyalty council, No. 19, met Friday evening with Councilor May Gibbs presiding. One application for membership was received.

Mizpah council, No. 3, held a masked ball Tuesday evening. The affair was largely attended and prizes were awarded for the most beautiful and the most comical costumes.

SHEPHERDS OF BETHLEHEM

Loyalty lodge, No. 4, met Monday evening with Mrs. Nannie Morris presiding. Twenty applications for membership were received and fifteen applicants elected. A class initiation will be held at Northeast Masonic temple on November 22, when a degree team composed of members from New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Delaware, will confer the degrees on a class of 50 candidates. The chairman of the good of the order and welfare committee, William J. Nally, submitted a report on recent activities of the lodge. Following the business meeting a musical program was presented by boys from the Mayflower. Miss Edith Tuponas, of Capital lodge, No. 3, was a visitor. All members of the order are invited to attend the class initiation.

SITE OF METHODIST GATHERINGS MARKED

Johnson City, Tenn., Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Site of the first Methodist conferences held west of the Appalachian mountains in eastern Tennessee and Kentucky, under Francis Asbury, first Methodist bishop in America, has been marked by a large granite bowlder.

The marker was taken from the bed of the Watauga river near an ancient ford which Bishop Asbury crossed as he made his trips from East to West. On the front side of the marker are chiseled these words: "William Nelson's ancient home for Methodists and Methodist Preaching by Bishop Asbury." On the reverse side are the words: "Site of annual conferences, 1793, 1796 and 1797."

WALL STREET GOSSIP

New York, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—A better tone marked the equipment industry at the present time than in many months, said H. H. Westinghouse, chairman of Westinghouse Air Brake Co., leaving for Europe. "We feel sure the railroads must have equipment and it is only a question of a short time until orders must be placed. The outlook for the next few months is very favorable to the equipment industry as a whole, which has been more or less dormant for some time."

One of the largest public utility financing programs to be brought before the California railroad commission is an application by the San Joaquin Light & Power Corporation and Great Western Power Co. of California for permission to sell an additional $35,000,000 of securities. The financing is being directed by Pierce, Fair & Co., Blyth, Witter & Co., and E. H. Rollins & Sons. Western Power Corporations, owner of the two companies, also will shortly issue $10,000,000 bonds. Western Power is asking permission to buy $6,00,000 common stock of the two companies and $2,000,000 of 6 per cent preferred stock of San Joaquin Co.

Bank clearings throughout the country for the week are compiled at $9,021,390,732 by the Commercial and Financial Chronicle, a decrease of 14.1 per cent from the $10,503,698,834 a year ago. New York city showed a drop of 16.6 per cent.

Advancing prices in the industrial group marked the week's transactions in "over the counter" trading. Best prices in months were attained by several issues, including United State Finishing, Industrial Finance, Poole Engineering, Scoville Manufacturing, Elliott Fisher, National Fuel Gas and Singer Manufacturing. A record high was marked up by Cellulose Products units.

The price of gasoline at service stations in the United States on November 12 averaged 22.27 cents a gallon, against 19.97 cents a year ago, says the Oil, Paint and Drug Reporter. Crude oil production in domestic fields this year to November 13 amounted to 647,245,000 barrels, compared with 659,910,000 in the same period of 1925.

Rumors that Lloyd's Bank, Ltd., London, would amalgamate with the Standard Bank of Canada were denied in a cable message from London received today by the New York representative of Lloyd's.

Demand for pig iron in the Chicago district has shown marked improvement since the first of the month. Large producers report November business so far being double, and in some instances triple that of the same period in October. Steel operations continued at 80 to 85 per cent.

This year's flaxseed crop, now estimated at 18,779,000 bushels, about 3,250,000 bushels smaller than the 1925 harvest, has aroused interest in the paint trade and a feeling that it would have an upward tendency in the price of paint. Unfavorable conditions throughout the season in the more important producing States resulted in yields per acre below the usual average. The average quality of the flax crop is said to be the lowest in fifteen years. The Canadian report bears out the same tendencies and is half a million bushels lower.

FINANCIAL DISTRICT CHATTERBOX

Frank P. Morse, southern manager for J. & W. Seligman & Co., investment bankers, is passing a few days in Asheville, N. C.

W. W. Spaid, of W. B. Hibbs & Co., chairman of the executive council of out-of-town stock exchange firms, who attended a meeting of that body in Pittsburgh on Friday, returned to the city yesterday.

Francis G. Addison, jr., vice president, Security Savings & Commercial Bank, is enjoying a few days hunting in Prince Georges county, Md.

Edward J. McQuade, vice president of the Liberty National Bank, will depart for New York tonight, where he goes on business connected with the Mergenthaler Linotype Co., of which he is a director.

John B. Cochran, president of the Franklin National Bank, returned to the bank on Friday following a few days passed in hunting in Virginia.

Eugene E. Thompson, of Crane, Paris & Co., members of the board of governors of the Associated Stock Exchanges, attended the convention of the association in St. Louis, Mo., November 8 and 9. Mr. Thompson was the principal speaker at the afternoon session the first day, addressing the convention on the subject "The Responsibility of Stock Exchanges to the Public."

The Riggs Bank club held its annual oyster roast yesterday at Great Neck on the Potomac. In addition to the athletic events in the afternoon, there was a program of entertainment at night which included a lively skit by club members. The committee having the affair in charge consisted of R. E. Haycock, chairman; Miss Mildred Archer, W. R. Rankin, H. S. King, W. H. Taylor, P. M. Garnett and Miss Mildred Hoeke.

The Federal-American company is offering $500,000 preferred stock. The company has no bonded debt and earnings from the beginning have exceeded dividend requirements on the preferred. The demand for this offering by local investors throughout the week has been heavy.

The financial district was well represented yesterday at both the Virginia-Maryland and the Navy-Georgetown football games, all four schools having many graduates in the banks and investment houses of the city.

William M. Deviny, instructor in the accounting class, Washington chapter, American Institute of Banking, will lecture tomorrow night on "Accounting Records and Systems," while Raymond B. Dickey will address the class in commercial law on the subject "Agency."

The regular weekly forum luncheon of the District Bankers association will be held on Wednesday at the usual place of meeting.

I. J. Roberts, chairman of the educational committee of local chapter, American Institute of Baking, reports that enrollments in the various study classes still continue to come in. At the beginning of the first semester it was expected that approximately 500 students would enroll, but it is now certain that this mark will be exceeded with the beginning of the second semester in January.

The following out-of-town bankers were visitors to the Federal-American National Bank last week: Justin Edwards Varney, Bay State National Bank, Lawrence, Mass.; J. P. Hoskins, First National Bank, Chattanooga, Tenn.; George Williamson, First National Bank, Vicksburg, Miss.

M. Gidlin, of the Standard Co., dealers in investment securities, is passing a few days in New York city on business connected with the firm.

WHEAT IS WEAKENED BY HIGHER ESTIMATE OF CANADIAN OUTPUT

OATS MARKET SITUATION VIRTUALLY UNCHANGED

Rye Is Down, but Gains Strength in Prospect of Good Export Outlet.

Increased estimates of the Canadian wheat crop, together with more favorable weather in the southern hemisphere and a falling off in the export demand, weakened the wheat market last week, according to the weekly grain market review of the United States Department of Agriculture. Continued light demand for the accumulating stocks of corn forced corn prices to the lowest point of the crop. Prices of barley, oats and rye also were lowered slightly, but the flax market turned firmer and prices made slight advances.

An official estimate placed the Canadian wheat crop at approximately 406,000,000 bushels, and this, together with increased stocks of wheat at Winnipeg and other Canadian markets, caused a sharp decline in wheat prices in that country and also tended to weaken the United States markets. Reports of a probable settlement of the English coal strike caused export buyers to hold off pending a possible readjustment of freight rates.

This limited the export demand tempoarrily, but if more shipping space becomes available and freight rates are lowered, foreign demand is likely to again become active because of the smaller European crop of bread grains and the small stocks in European markets. Weather continued favorable for the development of the crops in the southern hemisphere, and this also contributed to the unsettled condition of the market.

Small Mill Demand.

Mill demand for wheat in the United States markets continued of small volume and this, together with lack of an export demand, lowered premiums of both winter and spring wheat. Stocks of wheat in the principal markets have become fairly large and totaled around 80,000,000 bushels. In the spring wheat markets cash demand continued dull.

The flour trade was exceedingly slow. While choice cars sold at fairly steady prices damp, smutty or damaged wheat was difficult to sell. Twelve per cent protein No. 1 dark Northern sold at the close of the week in Minneapolis at the December price to 4 cents over; 12½ per cent at 1 to 4 cents over and 13 per cent at 2 to 5 cents over the December. The demand for durum wheat was less active and premiums for choice amber durum were reduced about 4 cents in Duluth. No. 1 and No. 2 amber was quoted at 36 cents over the Duluth December, which closed November 12 at $1.30.

Premiums for hard winter wheat also were 2 to 3 cents lower, reflecting the lower prices in other markets. Mills and elevators were not active buyers as their stocks already are fairly heavy. Export business at the gulf was of small volume and bids ranged around $1.45-$1.46 a bushel, delivered gulf ports.

The soft winter wheat markets reflected the dullness in the spring and hard winter wheat markets. Prices declined 3 to 4 cents a bushel. Mills have bought soft winter wheat sparingly because of the limited demand for flour. While mills continue to report a dull flour market, reports to the census from the principal merchant mills indicate that flour production for July, August and September was the largest since these records began to be compiled in 1923.

Millers Are Out.

Lower prices restricted marketing in the Pacific northwest and little wheat was being offered. Bids at the close of the week at Portland were $1.35 a bushel for soft and Western white wheat. Millers virtually were out of the market and exporters were only moderate buyers. Approximately 45 per cent of last year's crop still is being held in the country, according to trade reports for the Pacific northwest.

Unusually large stocks of corn, together with a fairly heavy movement caused further declines in corn prices. Stocks of corn on farms and in the principal trading channels November 1 were approximately 145,000,000 bushels larger than last year. The crop, however, according to the November 1 estimate, is about 211,000,000 bushels smaller than last year, making the total supply about 65,000,000 bushels below that of last year, with the quality considerably below average.

It is estimated that about 72.6 per cent of the crop is of merchantable quality compared with a 10-year average of 81.8 per cent. The demand for corn was only moderate, even for the better grades. Receipts of new corn were not large but a large percentage contains excessive moisture and can be sold only at wide discounts under the better grades.

Corn Causes Drop.

The general situation in the oats market was not changed materially, but the weakness in the corn market caused a slight decline in oats prices.

The rye market declined with wheat, but had some independent strength as a result of the prospect of some increase in the export demand. The supply of rye of good milling quality was limited, and mills were active buyers of the higher grades. Cash rye at Minneapolis was quoted at 4 cents over the December price, which closed November 12 at 91½ cents.

The barley market also was weakened by the lower prices of other feed grains but continued fairly steady. Good to choice malting grades in the central West were in good demand at firm prices, but the feeding grades were slightly lower. No. 2 barley at Milwaukee sold at 72 to 77 cents a bushel. Best malting types at Duluth sold at 61 to 65 cents, and best types at Chicago were quoted at 70 to 74 cents a bushel. The barley market on the Pacific coast was slightly firmer. In Oregon interior points were buying barley to supplement the short crop of other feed grains. Feed barley at Portland was quoted at $30 to $30.50 a ton. California superior barley was quoted in London at the close of the week at $1.90 per 100 pounds and feed barley at $1.67 to $1.68.

BONDS' GAINS CHECKED BY MILD PROFIT TAKING

DOMESTICS MOVE LITTLE

New York, Nov. 13 (By the Associated Press).—After another week of rising prices, the bond market today was subjected to a mild outburst of profit-taking, which held upward tendencies in check. Trading sentiment, however, remained predominantly cheerful, resulting in the establishment of new top prices in several sections of the list.

The investment demand for securities of the highest grade persisted long enough today to carry United States Treasury 4¼s to a new peak price near 109, but the gain was cancelled in the subsequent selling movement. Most of the other government obligations closed slightly lower.

Trading in foreign bonds was devoid of features, although Japanese 6½s continued to sell above par as large buying orders were executed for foreign account in anticipation of Japan's early return to a gold currency basis.

Few changes of importance took place among domestic liens. Granby Mining 7s slumped more than a point, but fluctuations in the general runs of rails, public utilities and industrials were confined to fractions.

Investment circles were interested in the announcement of a $45,000,000 financial operatoin of the Western Power Corporation and its subsidiaries—the San Joaquin Light & Power Corporation and the Great Western Power Co. Early offerings of bonds are expected for all three companies.

CURB MARKET REVIEW.

New York, Nov. 13 (By the Associated Press).—Today's market in the curb exchange followed along the aggressive lines that prevailed during the greater portion of the preceding session. Trading at the opening was exceedingly active for a half holiday session due to considerable speculative operations.

A few issues were able to advance the previous high marks for the year, among which were Continental Tobacco, Philip Morris and Cities Service issues. In the higher price group Travelers Insurance scored an early gain of 4 points and Johns Manville made a further gain of 2½ points.

Public utilities and financing securities were in demand at advances. American Light gained 1½ points and lesser imorovement was noted in American Gas, Electric Bond and American Superpower.

Oil shares exhibited impressive buying at moderate advances. Chesebrough Manufacturing rose 2 points to equal its new and record of 97.

Indiana reached a new high mark for the late recovery acting to see.

Pronounced strength prevailed in many curb groups all through the week, and the price movements in that period included the establishment of a large number of stocks at new high records. In the first few days there were intervals of quietness and at times some recessions were recorded. Toward the end of the week, however, offerings of nearly all the active issues were quickly absorbed and the majority of leading stocks sold at the highest levels just as the week ended.

Among these were National Sugar Refining, American Seating issues, Chicago Nipple, American Light & Traction A, Anglo-American Oil and National Fuel Gas, in contrast with these high records Tubize Artificial Silk dropped 5 points to a new low record, and Ford Motor of Canada, which had been under pressure for a long period, sided nearly 50 points.

Oil stocks as a group were looked on with most interest chiefly because of the stubborn tone shown by those issues when crude oil prices were reduced and prediction of crude oil increased. These trade factors, however, did not disturb the market situation, buying orders appearing in large volume and causing a general upward movement.

Aetna Insurance was one of the weak features, falling 80 points. Singer Manufacturing continued in steady demand and rose over 13 points. United States Gypsum, after the declaration of the stock dividend, rose 18 points.

There also were wide movement in many of the utilities.

The bond market held strong. Obligations of companies whose stocks moved up followed those advances. These included American Seating 6s and Cities Service 6s and 7s, both issues making new high records.

Foreign bonds were fairly active, but showed a steadier tone, a few making new high records. Berlin Electric Elevated & Underground 6½s, when issued, sold at 95 and 94⅞.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

Chicago, Nov. 13 (By the Associated Press).—Oncoming crops from the southern hemisphere and a big surplus in Canada did a good deal today to bring about lower prices for wheat. Chicago quotations on wheat closed heavy, at 1⅜c to 1⅞c net decline, with corn unchanged to ¼c up, oats ⅛c to ¾c down, and provisions unchanged to a setback of 2c to 5c.

Downward swings of the wheat market took prices to around 7c a bushel below last Monday's top level. Meanwhile, notwithstanding that reports of cheaper offerings of Argentine wheat had a notable bearish effect, the current crop advices for Argentina were by no means one-sided. One Chicago expert cabled that on a 600-mile tour he found the crop in northern Argentina ranging from failure to good, but averaging above normal, although black chaff is very bad and rust damage moderate.

Weakness of wheat values today was more or less intensified by evidence of at least a temporary pause in export demand. Some little scattering business with transatlantic countries was noted, but for the most part European buyers were apparently holding off to obtain better vessel rates expected to result from a settlement of the British coal strike. On the other hand, leading Chicago authorities continued to assert that although termination of the coal strike is undoubtedly bearish on European prices it should stimulate demand for wheat from North America.

Corn rallied after touching today another new low-price record for the season. Weather conditions were less favorable. A fresh increase of the corn visible supply, however, is expected to be shown on Monday.

Oats lacked support.

THE MORRIS PLAN

The terms of Morris Plan Loans are simple and practical and fair—it is not necessary to have had an account at this Bank to borrow.

For each $50 or fractionborrowed you agree to deposit $1 per week in an Account, the proceeds of which may be used to cancel the note when due. Deposits may be made on a weekly, semi-monthly or monthly basis as you prefer.

Easy to Pay

Loan	Weekly Deposit For 50 Weeks
$100	$2.00
$200	$4.00
$300	$6.00
$400	$8.00
$500	$10.00
$5,000	$100.00
$10,000	$200.00

Loans are passed within a day or two after filing application—with few exceptions.

MORRIS PLAN notes are usually made for 1 year, though they may be given for any period of from 3 to 12 months.

PRESBYTERY CAMPAIGN IS EXTENDED ONE WEEK

Change in Pension Fund Drive Due to Delay in Several Churches.

WILL BE STARTED TODAY

Laymen of the Presbyterian churches of Washington and nearby Virginia and Maryland, who are conducting a campaign for $135,000 to make operative the new service pension plan for all paid workers of the church, have decided to continue the drive a week longer than expected, closing November 22 instead of tomoorrow, it was announced today.

The extension of the period of the campaign, it was announced last night by John B. Larner, chairman of the local laymen's organization, is to give a large number of the 39 Presbyterian churches of this presbytery an opportunity to get their solicitation under way. Reports at the banquet of workers Friday night showed that more than a dozen of the churches had not started work among members of their congregations.

Most of these churches, however, now have organized campaign teams and will launch a concerted effort today in a determination to bring the total fund to $135,000 by the end of the week.

The campaign is to be launched today in the Church of the Covenant, the Arlington Presbyterian church and others in outlying sections of the presbytery.

The final report meeting has been postponed from tomorrow night to the following Monday evening, at 6:30 o'clock in the Franklin Square hotel, in accordance with the delayed closing of the drive.

The total reported Friday night was approximately $20,000, which was double the near $10,000 reported last Monday.

U. S. EMPLOYE TO END 42 YEARS OF SERVICE

Stitt Commends C. T. Earle, Principal Clerk of Navy Medicine Bureau.

Charles T. Earle, 1316 New Hampshire avenue northwest, principal clerk, bureau of medicine and surgery, Navy Department, retires next Sunday after 42 years of service, with a letter of commendation from Rear Admiral E. R. Stitt, chief of the bureau.

Rear Admiral Stitt's commendation states: "The bureau takes this opportunity to bring to the department's attention the long and valuable service Mr. Earle has rendered. As chief clerk, and later as chief of the files section, he was largely responsible for the initiation and adoption of the card index system of correspondence recording, and for the building up of adequate methods for the uniform procurement and issue of and accountability for the supplies and equipment of the medical department.

"In his 42 years of service Mr. Earle has witnessed and had an intimate connection with the development of the medical department from a service meagerly equipped and inadequately personneled to one not surpassed in any country."

Mann Will Lecture At Carnegie Tuesday

The second lecture in the series offered by the Carnegie Institution of Washington will be given Tuesday at 8:30 p. m. in the assembly room of the institution, Sixteenth and P streets northwest. Dr. Albert Mann, research associate in biology of the institution, will talk on "Diatoms—What They Are and What They Do."

The third lecture of the series will follow on Tuesday evening, November 23. Dr. Fred E. Wright, petrologist, geophysical laboratory, Carnegie institution, will give an illustrated talk on "Gravity on the Earth and on the Moon."

The lectures are free to the public, but tickets will be required. They may be obtained at the office of the Carnegie institution.

Bishop Daist Opens Crusade in Capital

The Right Rev. Thomas C. Daist, Bishop of East Carolina, inaugurated the bishops' crusade at the parish of the Emanuel Episcopal church of Anacostia Thursday night. Dr. C. H. Bomberger, of Epiphany church, and Dr. J. C. Blake, of the National Cathedral staff, were in the procession.

The Rev. L. B. Franck, rector of the Emanuel Episcopal church of Anacostia, and his wife gave a dinner in honor of the Rev. and Mrs. Daist at their home at 1348 Maple View place southeast. Among the guests were: The Rev. and Mrs. Pinckley Wroth, of Georgetown; the Rev. and Mrs. Robert Lee Lewis, National Cathedral; and Miss Florence Cuirie, Richmond, Va.

ROX ROMMELL, who will lead Rialto orchestra.

PASSENGER VESSELS WILL CARRY AUTOS

Eastern Lines, Incorporated, to Feature New York-Nova Scotia Service,

A steamship line with special accommodations for automobiles will be started early in the summer between New York and Yarmouth, Nova Scotia, it was announced at the launching of the Yarmouth, a new vessel of the Eastern Steamship Lines, Inc., at the Cramp shipyards in Philadelphia.

A sister ship, the Evangeline, is under construction. The two ships will have specially constructed freight decks where tourists' automobiles can be carried without the necessity of crating. It is expected one of the ships will achieve a through schedule from New York to Halifax of 33 hours, with the assistance of train connections at Yarmouth.

One of the ships will ply between Boston and Yarmouth and the other from New York. The Boston steamer will sail every other day, while the New York steamer will make the run to Yarmouth twice a week. They will be of 5,880 tons displacement and will be propelled by twin screws, turbine driven. Oil will serve as fuel. There will be six decks, with two social halls, a library, writing room, lounge and music room dancing salon, smoking room, veranda cafe and glassed-in promenade deck.

THE CONSPIRACY AGAINST NICARAGUA.

The action of the Nicaraguan congress in electing Adolfo Diaz acting president, to fill out the unexpired term of former President Solorzano, paves the way for immediate recognition of the new government by the United States and by the neighboring governments of Central America.

This outcome is made possible by the patriotic act of Gen. Chamorro in stepping aside from the presidency in favor of Sebastian Uriza, second "designado," who was thus empowered to call the congress in extra session for the purpose of electing an acting president. The congress met last week. It consists of 65 members, of whom 53 were present, and Diaz received 42 votes. Thus it is evident that he is the free choice of more than two-thirds of the Nicaraguan congress, and no sound objection can be advanced against his recognition by the United States.

Gen. Chamorro will probably remain in command of the Nicaraguan army, which is confronted with a powerful attempt to subvert free government in Nicaragua under the guise of a revolution. This conspiracy has its head in Mexico, and is operating with the consent if not with the aid of the Calles government. Expeditions from both coasts of Mexico have landed arms and munitions in Nicaragua for the purpose of fastening a bolshevist government upon that country. The State Department is in possession of all the facts concerning these expeditions. The most formidable attempt yet made against Nicaragua is now on foot.

On account of its refusal to recognize the Chamorro government the United States has been forced to stand at one side while a deadly thrust was being made at the principle of free government. Chamorro has defended the rights of his country under the great handicap of non-recognition by the United States. His cause is the cause of all men in this hemisphere who believe in the right of the people to rule themselves. He deserves the strong support of the United States. The State Department has taken pains to make clear the fact that it was not refusing recognition on account of Gen. Chamorro personally but solely because it was persuaded that he had violated the terms of the treaty made by the five Central American republics frowning upon revolutions and coups d'etat. Nevertheless, its policy has thrown a terrible burden upon Chamorro in his struggle against the Mexican communists.

The vote of the Nicaraguan congress now demonstrates that the conservative party of that country truly represents the people, and that Nicaragua will continue its struggle to remain a republic. The recognition of the United States will greatly aid Nicaragua, and it should be extended without delay.

In the circumstances the State Department should lay bare to the public the facts showing the nature and extent of the conspiracy operating from Mexico against a feeble neighboring country which is striving to maintain its independence.

IN ARLINGTON.

To judge from the appearance of thousands of graves in Arlington cemetery last Thursday, the Unknown Soldier fared much better than his comrades who were so unfortunate as to have been recognized after giving their lives for the country.

Seven years ago, on November 11, 1919, the visitor to the hills on the other side of the Potomac gazed upon the wooden markers which had been placed at the heads of so many of those graves. The mounds themselves were covered with blossoms. Scarcely one was without a floral tribute from a friend, comrade, or relative.

Last Thursday, with appropriate ceremonies, the grave of the Unknown Soldier was literally smothered with wreaths and designs of many sorts. But in the section devoted to those of the A. E. F. who fell among the poppies of France and Flanders there was a noticeable absence of floral remembrances. Relatives remembered their dead on that "autumn decoration day," but aside from the flowers carried by loved ones scarcely a blossom found its way to the resting places of the hundreds who left no relatives in the National Capital.

Perhaps, after all, in honoring the Unknown the nation meant to honor also the thousands of the comrades of that soldier who lie so near him in the sleep that knows no waking.

"MISUNDERSTOOD" ABROAD.

Comment in London and Paris on President Coolidge's Armistice day address superficially indicates that it is a hopeless task on the part of the President to make the position of the United States understood. The attitude taken by leading newspapers of France and England almost justifies the suspicion that debtor nations do not wish to understand. They have a fixed idea that somehow they will be enabled to evade payment of their debts to the United States. When an authoritative statement such as that of President Coolidge jars this fixed idea, the spokesmen of overseas public opinion do not accept the statement, but take refuge in bitter criticism of the "materialistic" spirit of the United States. Instead of recognizing facts as they are, European spokesmen persist in presenting their own notions as a set of facts. They are deceiving the people of France and Britain by arousing false hopes of the cancellation of the war debts.

On the question of the world court, foreign press opinion is equally mistaken as to the attitude of the United States, but it is doubtful that the statesmen who direct league of nations policy misunderstand American policy. They know exactly why the Senate imposed a bar against the use of the court by the league in questions affecting the United States. They have attempted to deceive the United States by suggesting a specious and misleading formula whereby the United States would be placed "on an equality with any other nation belonging to the council." The attempt has failed, and President Coolidge has given notice that unless the Senate's condition is accepted the United States will not commit itself to the court.

Equality with any other nation in the council is equivalent to making the United States subject to the jurisdiction of the council. The nations belonging to the league have accepted the covenant and the authority of the league council. The United States does not intend to place itself upon such a plane of equality. It has stipulated that it shall have no relation with the league or any obligation under the covenant; hence it must also stipulate that the league shall not have any authority over the court in matters affecting the United States.

The nations directing the league can not accept the American condition without surrendering political powers of unknown magnitude, which in the future might be exercised to great advantage to themselves in questions affecting the United States. Perhaps they speculate upon the possibility of using those powers in compelling the United States to "revise" the war debts and ultimately to cancel them.

A great change has come over American public opinion since last winter in regard to the world court. It is now well understood that the nations controlling the league do not purpose to surrender their power over the court for the sake of inducing the United States to "join the court." The fact that the league of nations reserves the right to use the court for political purposes against the United States, if occasion should require, is now clearly perceived. Hence opposition to American adherence to the court, on any terms whatever, has developed in all parties. Several senators are ready to offer resolutions repealing the world court resolution. Probably it will not be necessary for the Senate to rescind the resolution, as the failure of foreign nations to accept the resolution will answer the same purpose.

The President's Kansas City address is an admirable statement of the foreign policy of the United States. This policy is one of friendship with all nations, coupled with the determination to preserve intact all of America's rights, including the right to decide for itself where its duty lies. It pays its debts and expects its debtors to pay. It will cooperate in works of peace and good will, but it will not agree to permit other nations to make up its mind for it, or compel it to pursue a course that runs counter to the American system of government. America, in short, intends to remain free and independent and to maintain the supremacy of its rights. There should be no difficulty abroad in understanding this plain and simple fact. When foreign commentators profess to misunderstand it they cause Americans to doubt their good faith.

BUSES AND STREET CARS.

An additional chapter in the story of the rivalry between street car and bus interests has been written by the St. Louis board of aldermen. For the last four or five years buses and street cars have been allowed to compete on the streets of that city with practically no regulation, largely because some city officials thought such competition would improve service and keep down fares. The results were quite the opposite, for fares increased and service suffered until the transportation situation became chaotic. Upon insistence by the public that relief of some sort be provided, the board set out upon an exhaustive survey of urban transportation in most of the large cities of this country and South America, as well as in Paris, Berlin and London. The survey consumed two years in preparation, and has just been made public.

In brief the board has found that motorbuses will not supersede but will supplement street cars; that motorbus competition with street railways causes wasteful duplication of service; that motorbuses can not handle mass transportation as satisfactorily as the trolley car.

Municipal authorities and traffic experts are realizing more and more the truth of the statement that in handling the movement of large masses of people the street car has to be the main dependence. In Chicago, for instance, whereas street cars constitute but 10 per cent of the traffic, they carry 74 per cent of the traveling public. The 1926 traffic census of Baltimore showed that trolleys made up 9 per cent of the traffic but moved 68 per cent of the people. Similar figures obtain practically everywhere.

Apparently the best method of meeting city transportation needs is by a street car system which operates buses as feeders. No doubt these points will be kept in mind throughout the negotiations looking toward a merger in the Washington field.

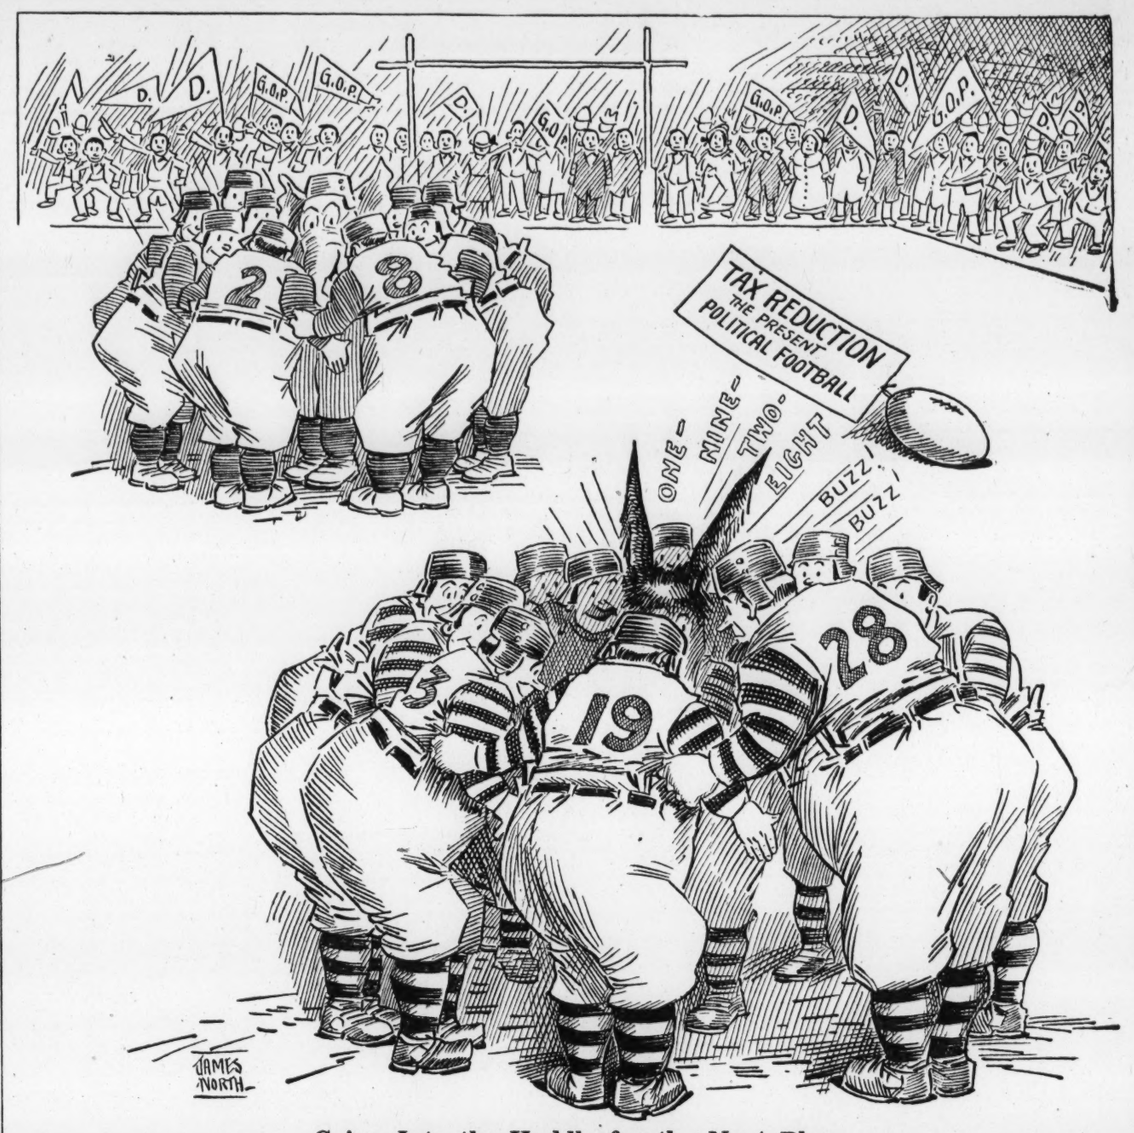
SHAW AND THE NOBEL PRIZE.

To many people, doubtless, the decision of the Swedish academy to award the 1925 Nobel prize for literature to George Bernard Shaw will seem an amazing one. To the dramatist himself, if he is correctly reported, it is "a great mystery." In his further remark, "I suppose the prize has been given me because I wrote nothing at all that year," there may be more than at first sight meets the eye. Who knows but that the members of the academy, appalled by the mass of literature, or so-called literature, that pours continually from the press in practically all parts of the world, wish, through the medium of this award, to express their appreciation of restraint and even silence on the part of writers? The question, so put, raises an interesting subject for speculation. If it should later appear that Shaw has correctly sensed the motive behind the action of the academy, one may reasonably expect in the future a self-denying ordinance on the part of authors as one of the surest ways of getting into line for a Nobel prize. The reduction in the volume of publication—or in the publication of volumes, if you will—which would in consequence ensue, would, of a certainty, be a blessed relief, especially for those who, whether writers themselves or merely readers, try to keep reasonably abreast of the books of the day.

It may, of course, be the case, as Shaw's secretary suggests, that the Swedish academy made a mistake in the date of the play, "Saint Joan," which was published, not in 1925, but in 1924. Even the most learned bodies do occasionally fall into such errors of detail, but one hopes that no laxity of this kind is properly chargeable to the adjudicators whose function it is to confer the Nobel prize. Most people would much prefer to cling to the hypothesis submitted by Shaw himself.

Those skeptics who have expressed a doubt as to Shaw's acceptance of the prize have not a leg to stand on. They simply don't know their man. For all his brusqueness, he is by no means insensible to honors, and the Nobel prize is considered the highest honor in the literary world. Besides, it carries with it a substantial monetary value, which is probably underestimated when it is set down as being equivalent to $32,500, and despite his quondam and perhaps present socialist leanings, Shaw has always shown an acute appreciation of the importance of money. He has now reached the age at which men are usually more grasping than they are in youth, for if, as some philosophers aver, curiosity is the last passion to leave human beings, avarice runs it a close second. Any one conversant with the old morality plays, of which Shaw is so much enamored, will have had the absorbing love of money developed by old age forcibly impressed upon his consciousness.

The Irishmen have done well in the matter of the Nobel literary prize. First came Yeats; now comes Shaw. Few will cavil at the worthiness of either and none at the worthiness of the country which produced them. Might one, however, suggest to the adjudicators that they lift their eyes a little, in order to see what likely material they can find among the litterateurs who live and move and have their being on this side of the Atlantic foam? The quest would, no doubt, be full of adventure but, conceivably, it might not go unrewarded.



Going Into the Huddle for the Next Play.

BONDS FOR PARKS.

The day is not far distant when the territory composing the District of Columbia will be occupied entirely by the city of Washington. With the growth of population and the increase in dwelling places the small neighborhood park becomes an absolute necessity for human health and happiness. The speculative developer of the few remaining natural areas of the District has found it economically wise to overlook the matter of including suitable park areas. Even the large parks of the city have been encroached upon, and there has been no development whatsoever of a proper system of large "outer parks." These matters were discussed in an able article by Harlean James, executive secretary of the American Civic association, published on this page a few days ago.

The article went on to point out that although the potential danger of these oversights is a matter of common knowledge, lack of funds has made it impossible for those interested in preserving the beauty of the National Capital to take any remedial steps. Congress has been making inadequate appropriations for so many years now that the work is far behind schedule. In discussing another matter yesterday, tax authorities pointed out that should the sum desired in this instance, $1,500,000, be expended it would add at least 15 cents to the tax rate should it be paid for in one year. Since the parks need many times this amount of money, it is obvious that taxation can not pay the way.

The only other possible solution is to issue bonds to the amount desired, against which plan there seems to be a decided public prejudice. Issuing bonds, however, is as proper and thrifty as the private transaction of buying a home on the monthly payment plan. In issuing bonds, the municipality borrows against its assets and its credit a sum sufficient to enable it to put in permanent improvements which will be used over a period of years.

Since the parks when developed will become a permanent part of the city, to be used as much by future generations as by the present, there is no logic whatsoever in the plan to saddle their entire cost on the tax return or congressional appropriations of any one year. The proper way to raise the large sum necessary is through a bond issue, for which congressional approval is needed. Apparently this plan will be taken to the Capitol this winter, and it is to be hoped that approval will be forthcoming.

COST OF STRIKES.

It is reported that the New York and Passaic garment workers' strike is practically settled, and that soon 30,000 idle workers in New York city and between 8,000 to 10,000 idle workers in Passaic, N. J., will return to work. These strikes have lasted many months and have ruined the bulk of the fall and winter trade.

Both strikes have cost many millions. Both have been attended by violence and wholesale arrests. It is reported that the loss of wages is more than $20,000,000 and the cost of benefits to the strikers more than $2,500,000. The loss to manufacturers is estimated at more than $100,000,000. No matter what the terms of settlement are, both sides will win by stopping the strike.

The Homestead strike in 1892 was perhaps the bitterest in American history, involving a sanguinary battle. The Chicago railroad strike of 1894, when President Cleveland sent troops to protect the mails and property; the coal strikes of 1900, 1902 and 1906, and the sanguinary strikes of 1913 and 1914 in Colorado caused enormous losses.

The relations between employers and employes have improved much during the last few years, and this has been brought about largely by encouraging cooperation and capital investment by employes in the establishments wherein they are employed.

The recent visit of British trade-unionists to investigate industrial and labor conditions here brought forth a report praising the widespread harmony between employers and employes as the key to American production and efficiency.

No matter who wins, strikes are always losses, and the time is not far distant when they will be abolished. Making investors and shareholders out of wage earners is the road to the complete abandonment of strikes.

WORLD TRADE AND WAR.

The National Trade Council has calculated the amount of havoc the late war played with world trade. Complete figures for 1925 from the 70 nations that do more than 90 per cent of the world's export trade show that in 1925, for the first time since the war, international exports were at par again.

In 1913 these 70 nations had an export trade amounting to about $19,426,000,000. In 1925 the same nations had an international trade amounting to about $19,950,000,000, after reducing the gross $29,970,000,000 to the 1913 dollar value. Since 1913, it has taken 12 years to increase international trade 2½ per cent.

From 1900 to 1913 the average annual increase in international trade was about 6½ per cent. Had the period between 1913 and 1925 experienced this normal increase, the world in 1925 would have been doing a foreign trade totaling more than $41,500,000,000, based on the dollar value of 1913.

Foreign trade since 1913, based on dollar values of that year, has been injured by the war to the extent of at least $21,550,000,000. At 1925 dollar values the injury amounts to more than $210,000,000,000, or ten times the national debt of the United States.

In actual figures, the world foreign trade during the last three years has increased at the rate of 10 per cent each year instead of 6½ per cent. To make up the world loss due to the war, world foreign trade must increase at the rate of 10 per cent annually for 30 years. The United States alone is at least $2,000,000,000 behind the export trade it would have enjoyed had it not been for the world war.

VIEWS OF READERS ON TOPICS OF TODAY

Private Autos, Not Buses, Real Competitors of Rail Lines, A. A. A. Secretary Holds in Connection With Move for Bus Regulation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have just seen your editorial of yesterday entitled "Bus vs. Rail Transportation," in which you comment upon the recent Interstate Commerce Commission investigation into motor bus and motor truck operation, and the probability of the commission recommending regulation of the motor bus.

The inference to be drawn from the tone of your editorial resolves itself into two features: First, that the existence of the railroads is being threatened by the competition of unregulated bus lines and, second, that the competition of the bus with the railroads is unfair because the bus pays no portion of the highway maintenance costs while the railroads are compelled to maintain their own rights of way at great expense.

As national representatives of the motor bus industry may we not differ with you and explain why the situation could not be as you have pictured it?

Taking the first point, that of bus competition with railroads, we might refer you to the evidence presented to the Interstate Commerce Commission in its above-mentioned recent investigation. If you read the record of testimony you will find conclusive proof that the real competitor of all commercial transportation agencies today is the privately owned passenger car and that the enormous losses in passenger traffic and revenues suffered by the railroads in the last ten years occurred, for the most part, during a period when the registration of privately owned passenger cars was increasing by leaps and bounds and before the bus came into general use

For instance, testimony introduced at the St. Paul hearing showed that the number of passengers carried by all railroads in Minnesota ran around 18,000,000 and 19,000,000 each year in the period from 1913 to 1916. Beginning with the year 1916 the effect of the private car began to be felt in the rail patronage and each year showed a decline with the exception of the years 1919 and 1920. In the five-year period from 1916 to 1921 passenger traffic dropped from 18,324,553 to 13,372,072 passengers. This loss could not be attributed to the bus, for in the year 1921 there were only 72 buses in use. In 1922 the railroads lost about 2,000,000 passengers in addition to the 5,000,000 lost in the period just mentioned, while there was an increase of only 21 in the number of buses operated in the State. In the period 1917 to 1925 the railroads in the State of Minnesota lost 9,000,000 passengers in the number carried annually. All of the bus companies in the State doing an intercity business will not carry in excess of 5,000,000 passengers this year.

Two witnesses at the Portland hearing and one at the Los Angeles hearing, all bus operators serving territory in which no other transportation utility operates, testified that their business had suffered a very considerable loss in the past five years due to private passenger car operation.

In a statement made while he was economist of the United States bureau of public roads, Henry R. Trumbower, a noted authority, in commenting on the loss of passenger traffic to the railroads, stated that the 17,597,702 passenger motor vehicles registered in the United States during 1925, based upon an average capacity of four persons per car, represented a total passenger-carrying capacity of 70,380,808 persons. If, he said, it was assumed that each of these passenger cars are operated an average of 5,000 miles a year and that two and one-half passengers are the average number carried per car, a total passenger automobile mileage of 219,971,272,000 miles is arrived at. A conservative estimate of the percentage of this number of miles traveled on rural highways would be 109,985,636,000 passenger miles. miles.

He stated that in 1925 the Interstate Commerce Commission reported that the total passenger mileage of class 1 railroads amounted to 35,963,862,000 passenger miles. It is therefore safe to estimate, he said, that automobiles of the country carry approximately three times as many passengers 1 mile over the rural highways as the steam railroads carry. The passenger-carrying capacity of the railroads is limited to 41,399 passenger cars and coaches, with a total capacity of 2,612,056 passengers. The passenger-carrying capacity of the automobiles being 70,390,808, is about 30 times as great as that of the steam railroads.

To quote further from Mr. Trumbower: "It may be said that a small number of those riding on the highways for pleasure or recreational purposes would travel by railroad if automobile transportation were denied them. Those traveling by buses are mostly all engaged in business and almost all of these would go by railroad. But these are the smallest number of persons traveling over the highways by automobile. In a Louisiana traffic count it was shown that 93 per cent of the highway passengers traveled in privately owned and operated automobiles and 7 per cent used motor buses.

With respect to the other matter commented on in your editorial, that of the advantage the bus enjoys in not paying for its right of way, we will take for the purpose of conservative estimation a 20-passenger bus, pneumatic tires, 9,000 pounds weight, 30-horsepower, price, $8,000, with 50,000 miles travel annually, $12,000 gross annual receipts, 7,142 gallons annual gasoline consumption, and figure out what such a vehicle pays in special taxes for the use of the road.

In Maryland a vehicle of the above description would pay $1,571.41 a year, including $142.84 gasoline tax, but excluding personal property tax, which is also levied. On a mileage basis this would mean a cost of 3.14 cents for each bus-mile operated. Is it contended that any railroad, in its allocation of maintenance of road expense, charges 3.14 cents to each passenger car-mile operated? Including the gasoline tax, but excluding personal property tax, the same bus, if operated in Connecticut, would pay $474.42; in New Hampshire, $418.24; in West Virginia, $916.64; in Kentucky, $484.26; in Oregon, $391.26; in Washington, $392.84, and in North Carolina, $1,005.68.

There are at the present time 41 States exercising regulation over intrastate passenger common carriers and in nearly every one of these States special fees or taxes in addition to or in excess of regular license fees are levied upon motor buses for the use they make of the highways. In a study of eight out of the nine States above quoted, the U. S. bureau of public roads found the average tax to be $671.05 per bus, or 4.75 per cent of the assumed gross annual receipts of $12,000.

In closing it is desired to impress the fact that the bus operators are unanimously in favor of regulation. As before indicated, they are in their intrastate business now operating under regulation in 41 States and it is believed that most of the other 7 States will provide for bus regulation at their next legislative sessions.

As to interstate regulation, the bus operators for the last eighteen months, since the U. S. Supreme Court declared the State without authority to regulate interstate motor vehicle operation, have consistently sought legislation to remedy the situation created by the decisions. They believe, however, that the motor bus as a new and distinct utility should be regulated because public interest demands it and not because it is considered a competitor of the railroads.

Proof That Alcohol Is Food, and Essential Will End Dry Law, Correspondent Says in Criticizing Amendment.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is idle to speculate or theorize as to how long the eighteenth amendment will endure.

If we have to go through the same process to eliminate it that it took to mount it in the Constitution many years must pass. It will not be necessary to go through that process. Neither are revolutionary tactics necessary.

To the present time, in its first flush, no apparently valid arguments have been advanced which would prove that, with regard to life and civilization, both individual and national, of our country, prohibition would be detrimental.

Our supreme court from evidence and arguments advanced to the present could not declare the amendment unconstitutional. We can assume an extreme case wherein, in a moment of temporary insanity, we would have passed a law prohibiting food. The Supreme Court would kill it at once.

It is slowly becoming clearer through six years of trial that the eighteenth amendment was an error. As has been ably remarked, "Has advanced civilization reached its heights because of liquor or in spite of it?" When we look over the world today we see some dry nations. We might also state that these are extremely dead ones as far as their value is to mankind and civilization.

Some day in the very near future a small minority will bring forth some vital facts showing that a reasonable quantity of liquor is absolutely essential to life, both as a food and as a medicine; that more damage is resulting from its lack, to life and civilization combined, than would result if its access was normal and easy. No law should ever have been passed which would dictate to any individual what he or she should consider a food or medicine. The opposition (prohibitionists) have not proven that alcohol is not acting as a food or a source of vital energy to the body.

The fact that some do not or can not use it, is beside the question. With all of us there are many well known articles that are good food which we never use or crave, but there is no reason why a negative class should wish to have them debarred. The Supreme Court can kill the eighteenth amendment in record time when certain proper facts are presented, and it will not have to apologize for so doing.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The fact that Capt. Isaac E. Emerson, of Baltimore, has decided to give his racing stable and a stock farm in the Worthington valley to his daughter, Mrs. Margaret Emerson Baker, formerly Mrs. Alfred G. Vanderbilt, which stock farm has a covered, or indoor, track, of three-eighths of a mile, is considered of sufficient general interest to warrant notice in the dispatches of the Associated Press from the Oriole City. A covered track less than half a mile in length is by no means a novelty.

Nearly 50 years ago great rivalry existed between the late Cicero J. Hamlin and Henry C. Jewett, both owners of stock farms in East Aurora, N. Y. The former entertained the belief that the Hambletonian strain was the very best trotting horse blood in the world. Mr. Jewett was equally positive that the Clay blood was the better. Hamlin's Village farm became the home of such celebrated harness horses as Almont, jr., Mambrino King, Prince Regent, Belle Hamlin and Globe. Jewett corraled every pure bred Clay that he could locate. His prize stock embraced Black Henry, Rushmore and half a dozen others of the strain.

In order that he might have the advantage of winter exercising of his "string," Mr. Jewett had a track constructed, which was exactly a mile in circumference, and the entire distance was roofed over and boarded up on each side.

But Hamlin won out in the race for preeminence as a breeder of trotters and it was he, even more than the late Elbert Hubbard, who put East Aurora "on the map," notwithstanding which fact the Village stock farm is virtually forgotten today, while the Roycroft shops of Elbert Hubbard still attract thousands of visitors.

The covered track was dismantled several years ago, and out there in Erie county it is said that the lumber which covered that track was sold a few years ago for more money than the entire cost of constructing the work 50 years ago. All of which indicates that lumber was cheaper in 1880 than it is in 1926. OLD OBSERVER.

Party Arrives Today For Exposition Tour

An official commission representing the Ibero-American exposition of Seville, Spain, will arrive in Washington today to remain three or four days, preliminary to a tour of the principal cities of the United States establishing contacts wtih American business and other interests which will have exhibitions at the exposition.

The commission is composed of Don Pedro Caravaca, vice president of the exposition; Edgardo Carvajal, Vincent Traver and Romualdo Alva y Gonzales. The party was met when it landed in Philadelphia by George J. Eder, chief of the Latin American division of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, and R. Granados, director of the Spanish School of Washington, representative of the exposition here. The American government will take part in the exposition, which will be held in the fall of 1928.

No Cold In 5 Yrs.

The writer has not had a cold in five years. He catches colds from contacts, just as others do. But at the first sneeze he takes HILL'S. I have proved that colds do not develop when one does that.

But there are other things that millions know. HILL'S checks a cold in 24 hours after it has developed. It ends the fever, opens the bowels, tones the entire system. It leaves one feeling better than when the cold began.

HILL'S combines four of the greatest helps modern science has discovered. It was perfected by one of the world's largest laboratories. It is so efficient, so well-proved that the present owners paid $1,000,000 for it.

Nobody who knows what HILL'S can do will ever use a lesser help. Nor will they delay.

Society

By BERTHA R. MARTIN.

WASHINGTON society, in common with the rest of America, joined on Thursday in the tribute paid to the heroes of the world war and observed Armistice day. The President and Mrs. Coolidge made a long journey into the middle West to Kansas City, Mo., to do their part in recalling to the minds of the people the sacrifices made by the 77,000 American lads who laid down their lives that democracy might live.

The Secretary of War, Mr. Dwight F. Davis, accompanied the President and Mrs. Coolidge on their trip into his native State. In order to do this, the Secretary was obliged to forego meeting Mrs. Davis upon her return from Europe in New York. She will come immediately to Washington, however, and the War Secretary's family will have a happy Thanksgiving together.

The President and Mrs. Coolidge accomplished their task and then made an immediate return to the Capital city, just missing by a few hours the arrival in Kansas City of Queen Marie of Roumania and her entourage.

THERE are no present plans for any more presidential trips of this length until after the Christmas holidays, at least, and the Coolidges plan a quiet Thanksgiving at the White House, kept after the traditional New England fashion, with church in the morning and turkey and cranberry sauce, pumpkin pie and other delectables of the feast day for dinner. It is not expected that their son, Mr. John Coolidge, will be with them for Thanksgiving, as the holiday is of such a brief duration that the journey has not been found practicable for the collegian since his parents entered the White House.

* * * *

WHILE her children are on this little journey the queen plans to rest in Washington. Of course, before her departure from this city she will pay a formal visit of farewell at the White House. Until then it is probable that her desire to be regarded as in this country in an unofficial capacity will be granted by the authorities.

After leaving Washington the queen will tourn southward and visit Asheville and other points in North Carolina and then go to Florida, where she will enjoy the opening of the season at Palm Beach and other pleasure spots of winter. The start home will be made about December 15 and she probably will be in her own land of Roumania in time for Christmas.

JUST what official ceremonies will follow the rearrival of Queen Marie in Washington on November 24 have not been announced as yet. It is known that she has accepted several invitations from organizations to be present at receptions in her honor, but what purely social affairs she will attend are not definitely known and will not be until the queen's arrival here.

Queen Marie and her entourage will stay at the Roumanian legation, as during her former brief visit in Washington. She will have a new host there in the newly arrived Minister of Roumania, who has made elaborate plans for the entertainment of her majesty in this house, which is Roumanian territory under the diplomatic laws prevailing in all civilized countries.

Youth will be served even on the footsteps of thrones, and there is a smile of sympathy for the prince and princess of the Roumanian royal house who have planned a little outing of their own—namely to go to Chicago and witness the annual titanic struggle between the Army and Navy at the classic game to be staged there on November 25. Prince Nicolas and Princess Ileana of Roumania are both devotees of sports and naturally their English blood makes them take very kindly to football. The future generals and admirals of the united service will play, most certainly, all the better because of the knowledge that a princess of the blood royal is smiling on their efforts from one of the boxes in the stadium.

THE royal children will not be the only pilgrims of sport who will journey from Washington to Chicago for the big game. The annual battle of West Point and Annapolis always draws every available officer of both branches of the service to the scene. The fighting qualities of the gallant elevens are the favorite topics of service clubs just now and after the game is over the heroes of the pigskin developed in it rival in popularity and fame even the greatest generals and admirals. The event is always a holiday to the student body of West Point and Annapolis, who usually are given leave to attend the game en masse and thereby furnish one of the picturesque sidelights and a walking advertisement of the great service institutions of learning.

* * * *

VIRTUALLY all the official families of the Capital will follow the White House and make Thanksgiving a family festival. Most of the cabinet will be here for Thanksgiving and the young people of the official households will join their parents for the great harvest home feast of the American people.

* * * *

WASHINGTON is becoming quite a center for literary celebrities, not only of American prestige but from other lands as well. One of the latest comers is Sinclair Lewis, who, with his charming wife, is passing the winter here. Of course, Mrs. Mary Roberts Rinehart has quite won her title to Washington residence by making it her permanent winter home and now Mrs. Ernest Seton Thompson or Thompson Seton, whichever you may prefer, has become president of the League of American Pen Women, thus brings another delightful literary couple to the Capital city quite frequently.

The National Capital is not unaccustomed to literary visitors. In the old days Charles Dickens came and Thackeray and a little later Owen Meredith, who wrote his memorable "Lucille" in the house next to old St. John's church, Lafayette square. In our times the genial Thomas Nelson Page and Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett, and, of course, John Hay, no less a literary man than scholar and statesman.

THE crowded social calendar of ... is a good indication that the season is in full swing. On all sides we hear of receptions and little dinners not to mention luncheons, which show that this is a busy and joyous season, starting off as it does with a queen and ending, most probably, with the annual White House garden party for service men in Washington hospitals, which has come to be one of the most unique and enjoyable of all functions here during the year.

Pre-debut events for debutantes also occupy a good portion of the social happenings of the moment. These festivities usually are arranged for the purpose of drawing congenial groups of the buds together and the practice tends to the formation of many lasting friendships.

* * * *

THE first debutante to make her formal bow to society this season was Miss Muriel Bliss, daughter of Mr. Elmer Jared Bliss, of Boston, who is making her debut here under the chaperonage of her uncle and aunt, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. T. Q. Ashburn. Miss Bliss was presented yesterday afternoon by Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Ashburn at a tea dance in the Officers club at the Washington club from 4:30 to 7 o'clock, after which Gen. and Mrs. Ashburn entertained the out-of-town guests at a buffet supper in their home at 2319 Twentieth street.

Mrs. Ashburn and Miss Bliss received alone. The debutante wore an imported gown of silver cloth made simply, with a silver girdle at the waist and the skirt trimmed in silver with lace flounces. She carried a bouquet of American beauty.

Mrs. Ashburn was gowned in green made in period style and trimmed in green taffeta and handmade pink ros... carried a bouquet of orchids.

Assisting Mrs. Ashburn were Mrs. ... Hunt Blair, Mrs. J. P. Newcomb, Mrs. ... kenzie Moss, Mrs. Hanson Ely, Mrs. Edw... Jadwin, Mrs. Edward Broussard, Mrs. James ... Reed, Mrs. John Palmer, Mrs. Compton ... Luthrop, Mrs. Clark Wren, Mrs. Charles Lincoln, Mrs. Frank Lawton, of New York; Mrs. ... John Upham, Mrs. George F. Downey, Mrs. ... Rowan Lemley, Mrs. Thomas Lowe, Mrs. ... Richard Lane, Miss Margaret Neal, of Orlando, Fla.; Miss Mary Martha Wren, Miss Betty Say and Mrs. Charles Say, of Dubuque, Iowa; Mrs. Walter Clarke, Mrs. Allen Wurtele and Mrs. Clark Lynn.

Gen. and Mrs. Ashburn are entertaining over the week-end Miss Bliss' father and her brother, Mr. George Bliss, of Harvard university; Miss Neal, of Orlando, and Lieut. Thomas Q. Ashburn, jr., who is stationed at Fort Howard, Md.

The Chief Justice and Mrs. William Howard Taft will give a reception Thursday, following the marriage of their niece, Miss Patricia Herron, to Mr. Joseph Lancaster Brent, of Baltimore, which will take place at the Bethlehem chapel of the Washington Cathedral.

Another bride of Thursday will be Miss Beatrice McLean, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Ridley McLean. She will be married to Lieut. Charles Godwin Moore, jr., U. S. N. Both brides-to-be are having a round of entertainments given in their honor.

Prince to Marry.

News have been received in Washington of the engagement of Prince Gaston de Bearn, son of Prince de Bearn et de Chalais and the late princess de Bearn, who was the daughter of the late Mrs. Ross Winans, of Baltimore, to Miss Monica Avery, daughter of the late Lord Avery of England, and Lady Avery, who since has married Mr. H. Levee.

Prince Gaston de Bearn is the brother of Beatrice de Bearn, whose marriage to Mr. John W. Freeman last April was a brilliant social event. She now lives at the Chateau du Martelvey at Evian, on Lake Geneva. Mr. Freeman's mother formerly was Princess Marie de Bourbon, the granddaughter of Don Pedro, last Emperor of Brazil, and the grandson of Duc de Berny. Prince Gaston de Bearn soon after the wedding will follow in the footsteps of his father and enter the diplomatic service. Prince de Bearn formerly was counselor of the French embassy in Washington.

Senator and Mrs. Lawrence D. Tyson have arrived in Washington and have opened their house at 1601 R street, which they purchased from Countess Gizycka. They entertained at luncheon there last week for a number of out-of-town friends. Mrs. Kenneth Gilpin will come to Washington to pass the Christmas holidays with her parents.

Representative and Mrs. James Parker, of New York, have departed for a trip to the middle West after having passed several days at the Willard. They plan to reutrn to Washington shortly before Congress convenes.

Mrs. F. Trubee Davidson, wife of the Assistant Secretary of War in Charge of Aviation, will be at home tomorrow at 1720 Massachusetts avenue, from 4:30 to 6:30 o'clock, and will have assisting her Mrs. Hanford MacNider, Mrs. Fox Conner, Mrs. Mason Patrick and Mrs. Walter G. Kilmer.

At Home Wednesday.

Mrs. Joseph Strauss will be at home informally at 2208 Massachusetts avenue on Wednesday after 4 o'clock, and again on the following Wednesday, November 24.

Mrs. Lyman B. Kendall will not be at home this afternoon.

Mrs. William Wheatley will be at home informally on Saturday from 4 to 6 o'clock, and will have with her Mr. and Mrs. Herbert W. Faulkner, of Washington, Conn.

The number of Admiral and Mrs. Edward Eberle's residence has been changed by the District commissioners from 2905 Thirty-second to 3009 Thirty-second street northwest.

Mrs. Tracy Dows will entertain at dinner Saturday evening in compliment to Princess Achille Murat, who will arrive in Washington later in the week to be the guest of Mrs. Borden Harriman, and will give an address on Saturday afternoon. Next Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Pomeroy will entertain in honor of the princess at luncheon at the Chevy Chase club, and that evening Mrs. Harriman will entertain in compliment to her at dinner.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Williamson entertained at dinner last evening at the Wardman Park hotel in compliment to Miss Adelaide Douglass, debutante daughter of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue and Mrs. David Hunt Blair. The other guests were Miss Alice Cutts, Miss Dorothea Lane, Miss Jane Kendall, Miss Frances Gore, Mss Barbara Hight, Miss Idanthea Moffat, Miss Frances Hopkins, Miss Cornelia Hatch, Miss Marguerite Orme, Miss Dorothea Morgan, Mr. Harry Lehrbas, Mr. Victor Alfaro, Mr. Louis Alfaro, Lieut. Rrank Graling, Mr. Fulton Lewis, jr., Mr. Herron Flack, Mr. Nelson Waller, Mr. Kenneth Abrams, Mr. Walter Abrams, Mr. George Abell, Mr. Larry Moore, Mr. James Cox and Mr. Carl Leighty.

Duchess to Return.

The Duchess of Hamilton and Brandon and Miss Lind-af-Hageby will return to Washington tomorrow for a three days' stay, and will stop at the Carlton hotel.

The former Consul General of Amsterdam and Mrs. Frank W. Mahin will be the guests in whose honor Dr. and Mrs. Davenport White will entertain a party of eight at the opening of the Mayflower afternoon tea dances on Tuesday, November 16, in the Palm court. Their other guests will be Mr. and Mrs. J. A. J. Van den Bosch and Mr. and Mrs. William L. Crounse.

Mrs. Henry D. Flood entertained at dinner last evening for a group of young persons in compliment to Miss Rita Langhorn, of Greenwood, Va., who has been visiting Miss Elizabeth Howry and is now staying with Mrs. Flood until the end of the week, and also in honor of Miss Evelyn Byrd Shipley, of Baltimore. Miss Shipley is one of the prominent debutantes of this winter to be presented in Baltimore, and is today leaving for Richmond to be the guest of Gov. and Mrs. Byrd.

Mr. and Mrs. William G. Wheeler had as their guests at the informal evening dancing club at the Wardman Park hotel last evening Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Puller, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Huffman and Mr. Zell G. Rowe. Other members present were Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Newcomb, Mr. and Mrs. David H. Blair, Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Williamson, who had with them Countess de Benque, Mr. and Mrs. John R. Leighty and Col. and Mrs. A. C. Voris.

The former Ambassador to Russia and Mrs. George T. Marye, Mrs. William Thomas, who was Miss Helen Marye, and Miss Flora Doyle, who all passed part of the summer at Newport, R. I., and later at their country place at Burlingame, Calif., will arrive in Washington Wednesday from San Francisco to open their residence for the winter.

Lieut. Thomas, United States navy, who is on his ship at Cuba, will join his wife in Washington for the holidays and be the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Marye.

Mrs. DePutson Glidden entertained at luncheon at the Carlton hotel yesterday in compliment to Mrs. Charles Lyons, of England, and Mrs. J. K. Mitchell, of San Francisco, who are visiting in Washington. Her other guests were Mrs. Howard F. Nyman, Mrs. Thomas A. Poole, Mrs. Ray Hall and Miss Mona Gill.

Mr. and Mrs. Armistead Peter have returned to Washington and were the guests in whose honor Mrs. James C. Crawford entertained a party of six at luncheon today in the Mayflower.

Mrs. Thornton Boland has issued invitations for a luncheon December 10, in compliment to Miss Adelaide Douglass and Miss Eleanor Hodges. Miss Hodges, who is a cousin of Mrs. Boland, will be presented to society in Baltimore this winter.

News Return to City.

Assistant Postmaster General and Mrs. W. Irving Glover will return to their apartment at the Wardman Park hotel today after attending the Yale-Princeton game at Princeton yesterday. They were accompanied by their sons.

Mr. Rudolf E. Schoenfeld, of the foreign service of the United States, recently in charge of the legation at La Paz, Bolivia, was a guest at dinner last evening at the Mayflower, accompanied by Consul General Leland B. Morris, of Cologne, also on leave of absence in Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Saul have returned to their home on Wyoming avenue after passing the summer and fall at Tempo farm, Md.

Mr. Harry Wardman has issued invitations to the debutantes of the season to attend a dinner dance at the Carlton hotel on Monday, December 13. In the absence of Mrs. Wardman, Mrs. David H. Blair will act as hostess.

The Rev. Meade Bolton MacBryde entertained at bridge in her apartment at the Cavendish last evening in honor of Mrs. Robert E. Lee and is entertaining at tea this afternoon in honor of Mrs. Herbert Sparrow.

"Just As Big a Value As Nisley's Shoes"

STYLE NOTE

Every inch that has been taken from the length of women's skirts has made it more and more imperative that the stockings be matched with the shoes or under-apparel rather than with the costume. Fashion decrees it.

NISLEYS being shoe manufacturers as well as shoe retailers know in advance the exact shades and tones of leather and fabric that will go into the making of all shoes for the coming season.

HAVING this knowledge in advance we are able to procure from the hosiery mills the correct shades in hosiery to harmonize with the colors of the shoes.

WE have, through direct mill connections, put into operation the same economical factors on hosiery as have made possible the unmatchable value in our shoes and as a result we are selling lovely, first quality, silk hosiery in our stores much under the price that the same quality can be regularly obtained for in other stores.

All One Price $1.50

Filmy Chiffon

Miss Kirsch Wed.

On Sunday, October 31, at 3 p. m., at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Kirsch, in Portsmouth, Va., their daughter, Miss Jean P. Kirsch, was married to Mr. Moses Bernard Bobys, of Washington. The Rev. D. Davis officiated. The wedding was performed before an improvised altar of palms, ferns, cathedral candles and cut flowers. Just before the ceremony Mr. Henry Roberts sang. The wedding music was furnished by Mr. Roberts' orchestra.

UNDERWOOD & UNDERWOOD

debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Huntress snapped in front of her home, 2025 Hillyer Place.

The bride, who entered with her father and mother, wore an afternoon gown of Valencia blue crepe romaine, trimmed with cut steel beads, with hat and accessories to match, and carried a corsage of Mme. Butterfly roses and lilies of the valley.

Her maid of honor and only attendant was her sister, Miss Esther U. Kirsch. She wore an afternoon gown of pale pink taffeta, trimmed with silver threads, with hat and accessories to match, and carried a corsage of blush Mme. Butterfly roses.

The bridegroom had as his best man Mr. Joseph Kushner, of Washington.

A reception followed the ceremony, after which the bride and bridegroom departed for a Northern wedding trip, the bride being attired in a beige romaine crepe frock, trimmed in brown velvet, with hat and accessories to match. On their return they will reside at 520 Four-and-One-Half street southwest, Washington. Among the out-of-town guests at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bobys, of Washington; Mrs. J. Sussman, of Baltimore; Mr. Joseph Kushner and Mrs. Al A. Garner, both of Washington; Mr. and Mrs. A. Lavine and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Morris and their daughter, of Suffolk, Va.

Miss Stephenson Wed.

The wedding of Miss Annie Virginia Stephenson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wilbur Stephenson, of Clinton, Md., to Mr. Paul Etzler Campbell, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Frank Campbell, of 140 Twelfth street southeast, took place Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock at Christ Episcopal church, Clinton, Md. The Rev. William C. Shears performed the ceremony. The church was decorated with autumn foliage, ferns and chrysanthemums. Miss Clarissa Mullikin played the nuptial music.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white georgette, trimmed in silver, made with a tight bodice and full skirt. She wore a court train and a tulle veil, with a coronet of rose point lace, held at the sides with orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Ada Stephenson, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Her costume was of pale green georgette, made with a tight bodice and bouffant skirt, and trimmed with pastel shades of ribbon. With this she wore silver slippers and carried a staff of yellow chrysanthemums.

Miss Norma Murphy was a flower girl. She wore a frock of pink crepe de chine trimmed with streamers of gold ribbon, and carried a basket of pink rosebuds.

Mr. Sanford Johnson was best man and the ushers were Mr. Dennis Stephenson, brother of the bride, and Mr. Edwin Campbell, brother of the bridegroom.

A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents. Mrs. Stephenson, mother of the bride, wore a dress of gray canton crepe trimmed in silver and made on straight lines, and Mrs. Campbell, mother of the bridegroom, wore gray georgette trimmed in silver.

Miss Aril Stephenson, sister of the bride, assisted at the reception, wearing a gown similar to that of the maid of honor, in yellow georgette, and she carried yellow tea roses.

The house decorations were the same as those in the church.

After the reception Mr. and Mrs. Campbell departed for a motor trip through the New England States, Mrs. Campbell traveling in a tan sports costume. They will live in Clinton.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mrs. Octavia Swedner, of Pittsburgh; Mrs. Mary Campbell, of Newark, Dela.; Mrs. Gilbert Campbell, of Ironsville, Md.; Dr. and Mrs. Ira Bell, of Frederick City, Md.; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Sharrah, Pittsburgh; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Etzler, Washington, and Mrs. Jennie Campbell, of Newark, Dela.

Anderson—Getz Wedding.

The wedding of Miss Mary Margaret Anderson, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. William Anderson, to Mr. Clarence Herman Getz took place at the Church of the Transfiguration Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. The church was decorated with yellow chrysanthemums and autumn leaves. Mrs. Marie Little played the organ and Mr. E. C. Palen sang.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, and the ceremony was performed by the Rev. John J. Queally.

The bride wore a gown of white satin, and her veil was trimmed with rose point lace. She carried a shower boquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Irene Stinemetz was maid of honor. She wore a dress of flesh-colored chiffon and carried a butterfly bouquet of pink roses.

The bridesmaids were Miss Catherine Stevens, Miss Frances Work, Miss Hilda Fletcher, Miss Augusta Merriam, Miss Lois Pope and Miss Billie Wellborn. Their gowns were of georgette crepe trimmed with silver, two of green, two of yellow, and two of orchid. They carried yellow chrysanthemums and autumn leaves tied with tulle to match their dresses.

Mr. Edwin William Stillwell was best man, and the ushers were Mr. David M. Stephens, Mr. Wilton W. Conner, Mr. James Boyd Getz, brother of the bridegroom; Mr. Charles Block, Mr. Ralph Little and Mr. Otho G. Wrenn.

Miss Hanlon Married.

Miss Bernardine Harriet Hanlon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Hilery Hanlon, of Baltimore, was married to Mr. Henry Peyton Howard 3d, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Peyton Howard, jr., of Hyattsville, Md., November 6, at 11 a. m., in St. Ignatius' church, Baltimore, with a nuptial mass. Father Dustin officiated, assisted by the brother of the bride, Bernard Hilery Hanlon, jr. The altar and sanctuary were decorated with palms, ferns and white chrysanthemums.

A cousin of the bride sang.

The bride, who walked to the altar with her father, was gowned in white satin embroidered in seed pearls. Her train had a deep border of pearls embroidered on it. Her tulle veil was held in place by a cap of real lace and orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

The bride's attendants were Miss Mary Hanlon, sister, maid of honor; Mrs. Paul Bell, Washington, matron of honor; and these bridesmaids: Miss Doris Broadbent, of New York; Miss Bertha Sullivan, Miss Irene Fengles and Miss Helen Henson, of Baltimore; Miss Catherine Berry, cousin of the bridegroom, Washington; and Miss Roberta Howard, sister of the bridegroom, Hyattsville. All the attendants' gowns were of taffeta, with tight bodice and full skirt. Large, black velvet hats were worn, trimmed with a flower made of the material like that of the gowns. Slippers and hose matched the gowns. The maid of honor wore lavender, and carried lavender chrysanthemums. The matron of honor wore green and carried yellow chrysanthemums, as did the bridesmaids, who wore pearl color.

Mr. John Wilbur Brady, of New York, was best man. The ushers were Mr. Lacy Bradley, Mr. Neal Sheehan, Baltimore; Mr. Hill Dunn and Mr. Tarbell Howard, brother of the bridegroom; Mr. Francis Murray, Washington, and Mr. William Hill, of Florida; Mr. Brady, Mr. Dunn and Mr. Murray were classmates of the bridegroom at the United States Naval Academy, from which they were graduated in 1924.

The bride's mother wore a brown satin gown trimmed with amber beads, with slippers and hat to match. The bridegroom's mother was gowned in black satin trimmed in rhinestones. Her slippers and hat matched her dress. Both wore corsages of pink roses.

After the ceremony, a reception was held at the Hotel Belvedere, at which the mother of the bride, assisted by the mother of the groom, received.

The bride's traveling gown was of brown crepe. Her coat was of cloth, also brown, trimmed with mink. Her small hat was several shades lighter than the coat. The slippers and hose matched her gown.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard will live in Charleston, W. Va.

Graceful Walking in a Graceful Shoe

ONE sometimes forgets that shoes influence the grace, as well as the ease, of walking.

There's springiness and restful support in the

Cantilever Shoe
(For Women, Children and Men)

which makes it just the thing for walking, shopping, business or about the house.

This is especially true of the popular oxford and tie patterns, because the lacing draws the flexible Cantilever arch snugly up under the arch of the foot.

Being so much more natural and comfortable, there are no artificial restrictions to mar the graceful walk which Mother Nature evidently intended for her daughters.

Come in and see for yourself what a difference the Cantilever makes and what a well-shod effect it gives.

Pretty walking and dress pumps and a nice line of good-looking oxfords.

$1.79 and $1.95 Chiffon Silk Stockings

Well Known Makes, Famous for Quality and Value! All Full Fashioned.

Truly marvelous Challenge Hosiery values—you will use good judgment in buying half a dozen pairs! They're silk all the way up, including garter hem and every pair is full fashioned. Exceptionally fine qualities secured to sell way below their regular prices, because the makers term them slight irregulars, although the faults are trivial and will not affect the wearing quality or mar the appearance. Practically every shade that's wanted will be found in the assortment.

Challenge Sale of Women's $1 Rayon and Silk Mixed Stockings 59c

Hose of serviceable quality and lustrous beauty, in a good assortment of desirable shades for street wear. Made with three-seam back and mercerized lisle garter hem. Because of slight imperfections, which do not affect the wear or mar the appearance, these are termed irregulars.

What your Acquaintances are Doing

Tells Secret of "Fascinating Youth"

Gifted with beauty—"a joy forever" and with talent, radiant Iris Gray, of Wichita, Kansas, proves herself an artist lovely as her art in her debut picture, "Fascinating Youth," with the other Paramount Junior Stars. Asked the secret of her fresh, exquisite complexion, she always replies "It's no secret at all—just using the delightful Black and White Cream!" Miss Gray adds: "Heavy make-up and exposure to all weathers were ruining my skin, until this soft, velvety cream saved the day—cleansing and softening my skin wonderfully, preventing chapping and roughening, and keeping smile crinkles from ever having a chance to become lines."

You can keep your beauty, too, "a joy forever" by using Black and White Cold Cream, which keeps your skin beautifully firm, soft and supple, and youthfully lovely. You can get this lovely cream from 80,000 dealers everywhere.

If your dealer doesn't have the Black and White Beauty Creations you want, send his name to Plough, Dept. D-62, Memphis, Tenn., and you will receive FREE, a copy of the Birthday and Dream Book, containing many interesting facts on beauty, dreams and fortune telling.

Try Mine
My powders, used by movie stars
By Edna Wallace Hopper
I am a stage star and a movie star. All my friends are stars. I know these public beauties as few do.
We are extravagant. Supreme beauty means so much to us that nothing else can matter. I long paid for powders $5 per box, to secure the very best.
Now, by grace of the makers, I supply those powders at very modest price. The very super-powders for which I paid their price. All toilet counters now supply them at 50c and $1, under the name of Edna Wallace Hopper.
There are two types, but of this superlative grade. One a cold cream powder which clings and stays. I always use that. But many prefer a light fluffy powder. So I supply both styles. Both come in three shades—white, flesh and brunette.
Let me bring you a new conception of fine powder. Send the coupon for a sample with my Beauty Book. You will be delighted. Learn what we fastidious people use. Clip coupon now.

Teeth Like Pearls
By Edna Wallace Hopper
My teeth, as countless women know, glisten like a row of pearls.
This tells you why. I use a new-type tooth paste which combines all helps in one. The ablest authorities I consult told me to employ it.
The name is Quindent, meaning five in one. It is made by Quindent Laboratories. It contains an olive oil cleanser of the highest order. Two harmless polishers which beautify the teeth. Four antiseptics and iodine, to combat germ attacks on the gums. Magnesia and other antacids, to neutralize the acids which cause tooth decay. And breath deodorants.
I have used all these helps—always. But I had to use several tooth pastes, then a mouth wash, then magnesia, then deodorants. I spent a half-hour daily on my teeth.
Now Quindent tooth paste combines all in one. Four great organizations collaborated on it. It typifies the utmost in a modern dentifrice. The 16 ingredients do everything required. Now I use it exclusively, and use nothing else, by the ablest advice I can get.
The makers supply me samples—enough for 20 uses. They are for women who wish to use what I use—who follow my advice. Let me send you one. It will bring you new conceptions of a tooth paste. It will show you what modern authorities advise. This is the dentifrice of today.

FELLOW CITIZENS:

Next Wednesday, November 17th, will mark the 69th anniversary of the association of our name with the civic and musical development of Washington.

Nearly three score and ten years ago, our parent, the late EDWARD F. DROOP, layed his foundations for this business, hoping eventually to build it to local pre-eminence in respect of SERVICE and REPUTATION. His dream was realized long before his demise in 1908 and through steadfastly following his principles and policies, we have been able, with assistance of loyal co-workers, further to upbuild and develop his ideals.

May we not on this occasion renew our expressions of heartfelt thanks to our many friends and the public for THEIR generous support of our efforts.

Cordially and Sincerely,
Carl A. Droop,
Edward H. Droop.

SECOND LOVE

By MALCOLM DUART.

(Copyright, 1926, Eugene MacLean.)

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

Marcie Allen, young, lovely, an advanced believer in woman's rights to do as she pleases, has been vamping John Parrish and Parrish's handsome father-in-law, Harry Morton. Parrish has separated from his rich young wife, Audrey, because of her tactless references to her own wealth and his poverty. Morton is trying to save their home. Marcie entices Parrish to Philadelphia. Morton follows the same day. She promptly drops Parrish to renew her enticement of Morton. They see Parrish, despondent, wandering at night in a waste space, and bring him back to his hotel. As the last chapter ends, Marcie, breakfasting with Morton, learns that Nona, celebrated stage dancer, who also is interested in Morton, is arriving in Washington next day from London.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

Names and situations in this story are fictitious.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

"NONA! Nona in Washington!" Marcie pushed her chair back from the table.

"Tomorrow," he repeated.

The girls lips were compressed, and her eyes blazed.

"Then you'll go there to see her!" She clenched her fingers, hard. "Do you know what I'll do? I'll take that son-in-law of yours, and keep him!"

Morton peacefully took a forkful of egg and consumed it.

"So," he said, "you've decided that you can't beat Nona in the race for my young affections?" He smiled at her as he munched a bit of toast. "You're a quitter," he added.

Marcie thought, frowningly, still looking at the self-possessed man across the table.

"If you stir out of this town while Nina's in Washington, your daughter'll never get that John of hers back again!" she announced.

"Are you," he said, "very fond of Audrey's husband?"

"I don't give a hang for him, and you know it," she snapped. "I'll take him to get even with you."

"I beat him to it," Marcie announced.

Morton poured a second cup of coffee from the silver pot beside him, added sugar, and drank with evident satisfaction.

"The coffee at your hotel is very good," he said. "Much better than at mine."

"You can't high-hat me!" she exclaimed. "Are you going to see that jazz-baby of yours—and leave me here to take John?"

"I've just been thinking," he said. "I think I'd better go back today—I have a car and a driver here, you know."

Marcie hurled her napkin to the floor, started up and rushed from the room. Morton laughed silently, to himself, and went on with his breakfast. As she reached the lobby, she cast a glance behind her, and saw him genially signal the waiter.

Two minutes later, in her bedroom, Marcie hurled her hat to the floor, and stamped her foot, in fruitless rage. One of Audrey's handbags was outside the closet, and Marcie kicked it across the room. Immediately after she went and picked it up, opened it, and hastily began cramming underclothing into it, from one of the dresser drawers.

She worked with feverish haste, yanking open one after another the cases that she had brought from Audrey's home, and stuffing them full, regardless of wrinkles in the silk and linen garments.

"Send a porter for my bags," she ordered, over the telephone.

She paced the floor until the man arrived. Then she saw her hat, where she had thrown it, and adjusted it before the mirror.

Downstairs she looked first into the dining room, for Morton. He had gone. Then she paid her bill, and directing the porter to pile her baggage at the curb, she hurried to the garage where she had left her roadster.

A traffic policeman hailed her as she sped away from the hotel, soon after, but she blew him a kiss and went on, threading her way through the streets at high speed.

Later, on the open road, she stepped on the accelerator and the car leaped to a speed of 60 miles an hour. At this pace she drove, mile after mile, stopping only for gasoline and a hasty bite of lunch, until at last she reached Washington.

"Why, Marcie, child!" Audrey came running. As Marcie wearily alighted, her friend kissed her with affectionate warmth. "I'm so glad you've come back. Did you see daddy?"

"I saw him," Marcie said, walking with Audrey through the gate.

"But I thought he was going to bring you home," her hostess continued.

Marcie smiled demurely. "I beat him to it."

She stood on the porch while the chauffeur was summoned to carry in her bags.

"There's the dandiest news," Audrey went on. "Nona's coming—I haven't seen her for ages. She'll be here in the morning."

"And that's why I'm here," Marcie told her. "Your father told me at breakfast—and I made a yellow streak right across country! She's not going to have him all to herself!"

The two girls went up to Marcie's room. "You'll sleep in your own bed, and Nona'll—have John."

rooms," Audrey chattered. "With you and Nona and daddy and me, we'll have more fun!" She stopped, and then went on, a line of trouble on her brow. "If only John hadn't gone away!" She looked out the window, while Marcie bathed her face and hands in the green-tiled bathroom.

"I haven't heard one word from John," Audrey said, when Marcie came out.

The other girl hesitated. Then, reaching a decision, she asked: "Is he in town?"

"I suppose so," Audrey said. "I wish he'd come back. Marcie, dear, you don't know what it means to have your heart all torn, this way!"

Biting her lip, she turned back to the window.

"Don't fuss about any fool man," Marcie advised. "I wouldn't."

"But," said Audrey, "You're fussing about daddy!"

"That's only because I haven't caught him yet!" Marcie explained, as she changed her dress. "But I will—watch me!"

They went down to the lawn, and sat talking, until dinner was ready. "Wonder why daddy doesn't come," Audrey worried. "He must have started about the time you did."

Marcie lifted her feet to the arm of her friend's chair, and settled herself comfortably. "If he tried to chase me, I'll bet he's in jail by this time. I drove like hell."

They dined together, and Audrey interviewed Marcie as to her reason for running away. The summer sunlight still came through the windows, bringing out a flame of red in Marcie's dark hair, and a glint of gold in Audrey's.

Marcie glanced in the buffet mirror. "We're both pretty," she said, "but I'm prettier than you are—I have more color," she said.

"Audrey nodded in agreement. "But why did you leave so mysteriously?"

"Couldn't get your father interested any other way," the girl answered truthfully. "And did you see him come after me." She clapped her hands in triumph. "Though," she supplemented, "I didn't expect him to find me so soon."

After dinner they returned to the lawn. It was 12 o'clock before they rose to go to bed, but Morton had not come. At Audrey's door, upstairs, the girls paused to discuss the situation.

"Do you suppose he's been hurt, 'maybe?" Marcie asked.

"I doubt it," Audrey said. "Things like that never seem to happen to him. Perhaps he has decided to stay over."

"Would he, with Nona coming?" her friend asked, doubtfully.

"Can't tell what he'll do, if it's about women—I think he does a lot of things, just to watch what they'll do." She kissed Marcie goodnight, and went into her own apartments.

Marcie was up early the next day, carefully attired. Her thin robe had been discarded in favor of her prettiest morning dress, and her hair and garments, even her shoes spoke of girlish simplicity.

Audrey did not appear until 9 o'clock. Marcie already had breakfasted, but she joined her hostess at the table.

"See my clothes?" she said. "I decided I couldn't compete with Nona in vamp costumes, so I'm just a sweet little innocent girl this morning, for contrast. Will I do?" She arose and turned slowly around, for Audrey's inspection.

"Nice," was Audrey's verdict. "But suppose daddy isn't here to view the effect?"

"Well, I'll put these on when he does come, then."

After breakfast, Audrey went to her study for her household account books, and with these, a pencil in her lips, she settled herself on the front lawn.

"I'll work at this until Nona comes—I won't have much time afterward," she explained. There was a total silence, while she added a column of figures, her lips moving as she slowly arrived at a total. "I wish John were here to help with this," she said. There was another long pause, while she entered various sums from a heap of delivery slips that had been folded in a book.

"I'm almost out of money," she told Marcie, looking up.

"Borrow from your old man," Marcie advised.

Audrey shook her head. "He gave me half of everything he had, just before I was married. I mustn't use any of his money."

She considered her figures, doubtfully. "I believe," she said, I believe I'll—"

She vanished into the house. Marcie could hear her calling a telephone number—Parrish's number.

A murmur of words came through the door, and then a cry.

"Marcie! Marcie!" Audrey, her face white, appeared on the porch. "John has gone away—he hasn't been at the office for two days, and he said he'd never be back!" she cried.

(To be continued tomorrow.)

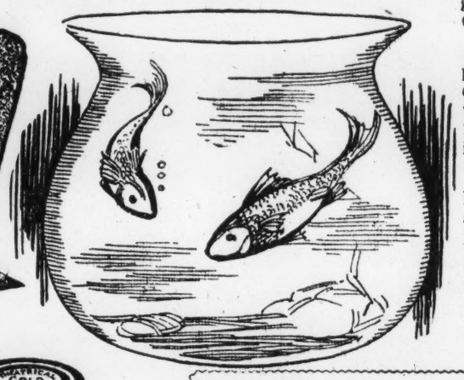
We wish to extend to each customer our sincerest appreciation and thanks for the wonderful patronage accorded us for the past year. As a mutual celebration of our twenty-first birthday, we have carefully prepared an Anniversary Sale that means a greater savings for you on choice grades of drug store merchandise. Articles that you use every day are priced remarkably low, such as stationery, pencils, atomizers, beauty needs, fresh candies, smokers' needs and family remedies. Get a pencil and pad now and compile a list of your needs. Quantity limited on some articles—buy early and avoid the rush and chances of exhausted stock.

2 Gold Fish and Aquarium Free!



Monday Only

Tomorrow, to celebrate our 21st Anniversary, we are going to give away Beautiful Gold Fish and Aquariums.

Every customer making a purchase amounting to $1.00 or more in any of our stores will receive absolutely FREE 2 Goldfish and Glass Aquarium.

We purchased an unusually large quantity of Gold Fish and Aquariums, but we can not guarantee that they will last throughout the day. We suggest early-in-the-day shopping to avoid disappointment.

Real Estate Literature

One of the indications of the importance of a profession or business is the preparation and publication of literature relating thereto. A comparatively few years ago there was little literature worthy of note which related to real estate or to the conduct of the real estate business. We find now that many books have been written concerning the different phases of this important branch of the business world and men who have made a study of it or who by experience have gained a large fund of knowledge relating to this business have prepared and published valuable works containing general and detailed information and which are extremely valuable to the real estate broker or builder or to the student.

The careful reading of the literature relating to a man's business or profession is certain to be helpful to him in the conduct of his daily affairs and also broadens his vision as to the future possibilities of his business.

The librarians in our large libraries have devoted much time and attention to the establishment of industrial divisions in their organizations, and we now find upon the book shelves of these institutions many valuable works which merit the diligent study of men who have the best interest of their business at heart. In our own public libraries we find an excellent and comprehensive collection of books relating to trade and business, and our library authorities are anxious to be of service to the business men of the community. It is a pleasure to publish elsewhere in this issue a list of books relating to our particular business which is available to those of our profession.

WHY I BELIEVE IN WASHINGTON

By HOWARD MORAN,
President District of Columbia Bankers Association.

There are so many reasons for one's belief in the future of Washington that it would be impossible to recite all in this article.

Washington, as the Capital of our nation, has a future far surpassing any capital of any country in the world, due primarily to the very rapid growth of the United States and the present position it now occupies as being a creditor nation, our gold standard having taken the leading place in the finances of the world.

It is natural to see that since the activities of our United States government—executive, judicial and legislative—are centered in the City of Washington we can not help but develop as a business center, but also as a residential and social center unsurpassed by any other city in the world.

Since the world war many people in this country, through their representatives in Congress and by personal visits to our city, have become impressed with the importance of beautifying Washington in every way possible, so that those coming to this country from other shores and from our own States will find in visiting our nation's Capital one of the most beautiful cities in the world.

Congress is making liberal provision for developing this city, as shown by the amount set aside, which ran into many millions, for the erection of large public buildings to better take care of government business.

Those people who have never visited Washington, and knowing further that our government is behind its beautification, will naturally want to visit it, and any new visitors coming to our city can not but be impressed as to its value as a residential city and thus cause new people to establish residence here.

The increase in population of Washington was greatly augmented during the war from all sections of the country, and even after the government cut its forces and many people returned to their homes, Washington as a residential center

Buyer and Seller Aided By Real Estate Broker

Dealer Occupies Position of Trust and Can Perform Many Varied Services for His Client in Negotiating Purchase or Sale.

By JOHN A. PETTY,
Vice President, Shannon & Luchs, Inc., Realtors.

The purchase and sale of real estate involves many technical and oftentimes intricate problems that require skill, experience and training to properly understand and adequately meet. Terefore one desiring to purchase r sell property sould seek the advice and assistance of a competent broker. The broker occupies a position of trust in the negotiation and consummation of real estate transactions and a serious responsibility rests on him to protect the interests of those who seek his services, and both buyers and sellers should use the same care and discretion in the selection of a broker to represent them as one would use in selecting an attorney to handle legal matters or a physician to combat disease.

Dealings in real estate present problems of law, contracts, financing, and salesmanship, and much of the procedure is governed by established custom. Most of these phases are difficult for the average layman to comprehend sufficiently to protect his interests, and for this reason it is unwise for those unfamiliar with real estate transactions to attempt to negotiate them on their own responsibility. Sometimes property owners undertake to handle the sale of their property and through ignorance of the important elements entering therein are confronted with delays, litigation and even loss. This can be overcome and prevented if the services and advice of a competent and reliable broker are secured by the property owner contemplating the sale of his properties.

Contract Is Important.

One of the most important and necessary steps in the negotiations of a sale of real estate is the preparation and execution of the contract of sale. This is the written expression of the intentions and understanding of the buyer and seller in respect to the transaction. It should be sufficiently broad to cover all of the various points that are involved in a real estate sale and accurately and completely specify all the terms and conditions. Competent brokers through years of experience have become familiar with the various factors that must be considered and they know the correct way to prepare such a contract so as to provide against contingencies. The form of contract used should not only clearly and specifically describe the price and terms of the sale, but must contain provisions that definitely set out the rights and obligations of both the purchaser and the seller in respect to possession, the various features of adjustment and the incidental charges connected with the sale. None of these items should be left to chance settlement as this will invariably lead to misunderstandings and disagreements and frequently upset the sale entirely. Under such circumstances the deal is not only lost but the parties in interest are frequently confronted with litigation that is costly and extremely troublesome.

A competent broker knows exactly how to protect his clients against such difficulties and uses a contract that is designed to cover every important point and sees that the parties understand their respective rights and obligations.

Has Sales Facilities.

Aside from the protection furnished property owners by brokers in the careful handling of contracts and the final closing of sales, it is a great advantage to the property owner to have the facilities that the broker has available for effecting a sale. A broker maintaining an office and a sales force is constantly in touch with market conditions and through the activities of his organization is in a position to locate probable buyers to whom he can submit properties for sale, in addition to those who seek listings on their own initiative. The ordinary layman does not have the facilities for locating buyers, and if he does locate a prospective buyer, generally speaking, he is unfamiliar with the proper methods of presenting the property so as to interest and influence the prospect to buy. On the other hand, the experienced broker has the skill of salesmanship at his command and knows just how and when to demonstrate it, in order to accomplish desired results.

The question of financing real estate sales is frequently intricate and is a vital element in almost every real estate sale. The ability to successfully finance real estate sales is perhaps the most important asset in real estate salesmanship. More deals fail of consummation from lack of this ability than from any other cause. The requirement of property owners in respect to cash payments is often difficult for the average purchaser to meet, and it is only through the ability of the broner to adjust and arrange mortgages that this condition is overcome. A broker is familiar with the money market, has access to sources from which funds can be secured and knows from experience the extent to which mortgages can be arranged.

It is extremely important both to the buyer and to the seller to see that the formal papers required are prepared in correct form, properly executed and recorded. Title passes from the seller to the buyer by means of a deed, and the slightest omission may, at some later date, cause considerable trouble and expense to correct. The seller must be secured in cases where the sale price is represented by payments deferred over a term of years. This arrangement is accomplished with notes secured by formal mortgages. In order to be complete and effective these papers must be prepared with utmost care and executed in strict accordance with legal requirements. All of this is directly in line with the service rendered by a broker and is of invaluable benefit to both the purchaser and the seller.

Direct Negotiations Fail.

Sometimes purchasers laboring under the impression that they can save money attempt to buy a property direct from the owner who desires to sell. This is often a mistake for the reason that the purchaser of real estate needs the same degree of protection, advice and guidance that a seller requires, and this can best be furnished by the services of a qualified broker. While the seller is parting with his property, the purchaser is parting with his cash, and probably executing notes for a considerable sum, and therefore the two principals are in positions of equal importance. Purchasers generally are unfamiliar with the ordinary procedure of buying property and have only a limited knowledge of market conditions. It is therefore a wise course for the purchaser to seek the aid of a broker.

A broker has a wide acquaintance with properties and knows where available properties are located. He knows where to find properties that offer the most advantages and has a practical appreciation of comparative values. This is advantageous to the purchaser who can benefit by the broker's knowledge and experience and frequently the purchaser finds properties more suitable to his requirements than he would be likely to find were he depending solely on his own efforts. The broker is familiar with the obligations one assumes in purchasing real estate and knows also the advantages and rights that accrue to the purchaser. He can forestall and overcome difficult situations that sometimes arise over questions of possession, financing, title and other matters. In the negotiation that so often is necessary in order to bring buyer and seller to an agreement the broker acts as a go-between and is the instrumentality that results in the ultimate consummation of a deal. Two principals attempting negotiations direct are frequently unable to agree and fail to consummate a deal which might very probably be made if the third party were used as an intermediary.

REALTOR EXPLAINS OFFICE TECHNIQUE TO Y. M. C. A. CLASS

General Real Estate Business Has Seven Departments, A. E. Landvoigt Says.

DECLARES SPECIALISTS SHOULD HEAD BRANCHES

Executives Ought to Have Time to Take Part in Public Affairs, He Says.

The complex business of conducting a well-run real estate office was explained by Albert E. Landvoigt, who addressed the Y. M. C. A. real estate class on "Real Estate Office Organization" at the second lecture of this course Monday.

With the registration jumping from 66 to approximately 80 students, considerable interest was manifested by those taking the course in this particular subject.

The lecture was followed by a quiz which resulted in the class staying considerably over time because of questions asked. Prior to entering into the technicalities of office management the lecturer drew the attention of the students to the many problems which confronted those entering the real estate business and pointed out the necessity of a proper understanding of these problems in order to successfully give service. He pointed out that a knowledge of many things was required by those entering this business, which included the ability to occupy an executive position, to have a proper knowledge of real estate law, for the benefit of not only themselbes but their clients, and an adequate understanding of titles.

Insurance a Requirement.

Insurance, both fire and casualty, zoning laws and valuations of all types were part of the general requirements, he explained. Not only is it necessary to study these very definite problems but the question of construction values in regard to various types ranging from frame cottages to large modern fire-proof buildings, rental problems and systems and proper knowledge of construction and building practices are highly important.

Normally a general real estate office is divided into seven distinct departments: The rent department, loan department, settlement department, sales department, insurance department, accounting department and building department.

In this connection Mr. Landvoigt pointed out that in the law and medical professions there is a general tendency to specialize, but in the real estate profession an executive has under his immediate control these seven highly specialized departments with which he must be thoroughly familiar.

The lecturer insisted that a specialist should be placed in charge of each department and the head of the organization should not be required to carry out details, but should be given an opportunity to engage in civic work and become as much as possible interested in civic activities and other organizations which will not only be of benefit to him in his office, but will give him an opportunity to study the needs and desires of his community.

Details for Policy Only.

A head of the organization, however, should carry as much as possible details of his business at his finger tips, and familiarize himself with the workings of his organization, so that he may create the policy and study the future course of his business. This contact between the head of an organization and his various departments should be brought about through reports and accountings of the activities of each department. These reports should be such as to give the head an adequate idea of the work of the department, so as to enable him to see whether or not it is profitable and what remedies are needed to handle certain situations that might arise.

One of the most important necessities of a highly developed and departmentalized real estate office said Mr. Landvoight, is coordination between the various departments and the executives so that the office as an entity may work together and be in a position to supply such service and information to its customers as it is called upon to give.

Functions of Sales Manager.

The rent department, said the lecturer, has to serve as an information department to the incoming customers and therefore should be so organized as to direct clients and customers to the department or the proper person who can take care of his needs. He stressed the functions of the sales managers position and the fact that the sales department is the big income producing department of most real estate offices and that the building department is the merchandise production section.

Most of the last of Mr. Landvoigt's lecture was in relation to the technical problems of the various seven departments in a large real estate organization and during this part of the lecture the speaker again stressed the great necessity for a thorough study of the various businesses which are coordinating in a real estate office in order that a firm may be successful and maintain the confidence of the general public.

The next lecture will be given tomorrow night at the Y. M. C. A. by J. F. M. Bowie on "Renting Leasing and Property Management."

Realty License Tax Is Due This Month

The Washington Real Estate Board desires to call the attention of all its members and all other brokers to the fact that the real estate license tax necessary to the conduct of a real estate business in the District of Columbia is due and payable this month.

Prompt payment of these taxes, which have to be paid, facilitates the work of the District building and prevents unnecessary delays and congestion in the tax office, which has a large problem on its hands at this time of the year.

MORTGAGE EXPERTS TO SEEK MEASURES FOR AID OF INVESTOR

Cautionary Moves Would Insure Against Overfinancing Developments.

MEETING TO DISCUSS INFLATED APPRAISALS

Recommendations on Topic Expected on Stand Taken by National Association.

Cautionary measures to insure the mortgage investor against possible overfinancing of real estate developments on which his money is loaned will be a central topic before mortgage specialists of the United States and Canada who will meet in Miami, January 12, 13 and 14 in connection with the annual business meeting there of the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

Guarding against the possibility of inflated appraisals which would endanger the security of mortgage loans on the overvalued property also will be discussed. Measures which investment institutions of standing take to safeguard mortgage bond issues, will be an important topic.

The mortgage and finance division of the association will conduct the discussion. An entire day will be given to study of the subject.

Recommendations are expected to be made developing further the stand taken by the national association in resolutions passed at its annual meeting in January, 1925. The text of this resolution is as follows:

Apparent to All.

"Whereas, the vital importance of sound, conservative real estate appraisals is apparent to all persons interested in the welfare of real estate securities.

"Be it resolved, That the National Association of Real Estate Boards strongly urges all banks, companies, firms and individuals handling real estate securities to require appraisals from real estate experts of experience, integrity and ability, and

"Be it further resolved, That the attention of all surety companies be called to the importance of obtaining such appraisals as a condition precedent to their guarantee."

Second mortgage financing, held by the association to be the largest present problem of real estate financing, will be another of the central topics for the round table discussion to be held by the mortgage specialists at the Miami meeting.

The watchfulness of a financing company in the interests of its investors is not over when it has approved a construction loan on a projected building. The oversight which the company exercises in analyzing such a loan and then in following the whole construction process as it affects or might affect the security of the loan will be discussed by the division as its third convention topic.

Warning to Owners Of Vacant Dwellings

Follow this advice before it is too late:

Now that the cold winter is approaching rapidly, owners and agents of vacant houses would do well to take precautionary measures against freezing. All pipes in the water system and heating system should be drained thoroughly to prevent the danger of frozen plumbing and its disastrous results. Only recently the Real Estate Board's attention was called to an incident last winter where the owner of a large house in the Northwest section of the city neglected to follow this advice, with the result that this spring more than $3,000 in repairs were necessary to the heating and water systems.

"A WANT AD."

LILA FROST SPRAGUE, in Boston Transcript.

I want to buy a house—
An old house,
Standing back among the trees,
With larkspur by the path
And clover for the bees.
I want an orchard at the side,
With crumbling cobble wall,
And bittersweet all trailing down
Where autumn blackbirds call.
I want a house with quaint, low rooms,
And leaded window panes,
With Windsor chairs and ancient rugs
Before a pine-log blaze.
I want a house where gentle ghosts
Flit in and out,
Or sit before my door
And whisper softly happy things
That happened here before.

Skyscrapers to Last 100 Years or More, Declares J. R. Kilpatrick.

PREDICTS HARNESSING OF SUN TO GIVE HEAT

Cites Construction That Withstood Japanese Quake to Show Supremacy.

That the age of permanency in building construction is dawning and that 100 years from now our children's great-grandchildren will be working and living in the same steel, brick and concrete office and apartment buildings that today are towering 20, 40, 57 stories above us, was the prediction made by Col. John Reed Kilpatrick, of New York, vice president of the George A. Fuller Company, speaking before the fifth annual convention of the American Construction Council at Cleveland, last Monday.

Arrangements on the roofs of our buildings for heating and lighting by harnessing the sun's rays, and the bottling up of winter's blasts for cooling our buildings during the warm months may not be far distant, according to Col. Kilpatrick. As vice president of the George A. Fuller Company, which is carrying out at present in 22 cities of the United States and Canada a building program of more than $100,000,000 construction, he said he voiced the general opinions of leading engineers and financiers in this field.

In Age of Permanency.

"America now is in the age of permanency in construction, which just is dawning," Col. Kilpatrick said, "and is far ahead of any other country. It was American-built buildings that withstood the Japanese earthquake in Tokyo in 1924. The modern fireproof steel and masonry buildings, intelligently planned, competently designed and honestly built in Florida, for example, were not damaged by the terrific hurricane two months ago. Structurally slighted or 'jerry-built' buildings suffered severely or went down before the storm."

Col. Kilpatrick took violent exception to the recent statement made by Frank W. Skinner at the recent convention of the American Institute of Steel Construction, that the average skyscraper outlives its usefulness in 27 years.

"With this I disagree most emphatically," he said. "Were this statement to be taken out of its context and accepted as a truth, an owner might well stop to consider very carefully before embarking on a building venture.

"Should he consider the improvement of his property practically a permanent one or should he endeavor to scale down his initial investment by skimping the construction and finish of his building so that it would just last out the 27 years of useful life allotted to it? This would be ridiculous, even granting the correctness of the 27-year obsolescence theory, which I most assuredly do not.

"Fortunately we need not accept this theory. While in this day and age it is dangerous to attempt to forecast what changes the grouping of population and modes of living will bring about, I will make the prediction that our modern buildings will be faithfully serving our great-great-grandchildren 100 years hence."

That the present trend of city and town planning is wholly toward permanency in construction, Col. Kilpatrick pointed out. He likened our big stabilized cities today to the capitals of Europe—Paris, London, Rome—150 years ago, at the time of the revolution.

"Compared with the Old World cities the life of important American cities is measured by decades rather than by centuries. Since 1875, over a period of 50 years, the growth in population of our cities has been such that we have far surpassed our foreign rivals, the capitals of Europe. Now we must begin to build for the indefinite period—for permanency, for stability.

"No longer is it fair for us to assume that because so few of our revolutionary-day buildings are still standing, or for that matter, buildings built 50 years ago, that 50 or 150 years hence a correspondingly small per centage of our present-day buildings will be serving useful purposes. I believe they will be. The history of well-built old buildings in Europe's capitals only will repeat itself in our stabilized cities."

Referring to the possible changes in design of buildings which may come with the development of air transportation, Col. Kilpatrick drew some comparisons.

"Perhaps several blocks of modern buildings will be razed to provide for a towering airplane or dirigible landing stage high above the housetops," he said. But he does not believe new buildings of the future or our present-day buildings generally will be altered for private airplane landings. As has been the case with railroad, trolley and now bus terminals being located in selected accessible centers in our cities, Col. Kilpatrick contended that airplane landing terminals—fields or elevated stages—of the future likewise will be fixed locations.

"All of this makes for permanence," he said. "It justifies an owner in building for his grandchildren. Ours is an age of permanency in construction. The architect, engineer, builder, subcontractor, materials manufacturer and craftsmen must stand together to uphold the best traditions of the industry for better buildings built to endure. Just as the builders of ancient Greece left behind them monuments to their skill and craftsmanship throughout the ages, so the towering results of our labor will be the marvel of generations to come."

WOULD MEET CRITICISM OF APPRAISAL SYSTEM

Declares Day Is Coming When All Issues Will Be Government Supervissd.

While the fundamentals of the American building situation are sound, there are certain extraneous conditions now in existence which, unless corrected promptly, might conceivably cause serious impairment in the construction field, and, in turn, slow down the whole national business machine.

These, in brief, are the views of S. W. Straus, president of S. W. Straus & Co., who urges not only State or Federal supervision of the sale of first mortgage real estate bonds, but recommends that similar control be extended to all forms of investment securities not so regulated.

Since 1921, he points out, general business in this country has been sustained at a high level and business depression has been prevented largely through our gigantic construction activities. But whether these conditions are now to continue depends on the trend of certain events in the immediate future.

"There is a strong national demand for more building," Mr. Straus told the American construction council in Cleveland, a few days ago. "Costs are well stabilized, rental conditions generally are satisfactory and the entire industry stands on a firm and solid foundation."

Referring then to the unpropitious conditions, Mr. Straus said:

"There are certain evils now existing that must be corrected, and unless they are corrected promptly and properly I fear that we soon shall see a most serious impairment to the great American building industry. These dangers arise both from within and from without.

Danger Lies in Criticism.

"The dangers from within rest on certain unsound banking practices. Those from without lie in the undue agitation and destructive criticism which lately has been set at large. One condition is as great a national menace as the other. But before going more deeply into a discussion of these unfortunte conditions, let me give you a very brief outline of the position of the first mortgage real estate bond industry in its relation to general building construction, and what its record of successful accomplishment has been.

"Coming into existence something over a quarter of a century ago, immediately following the introduction of the skeleton steel type of skyscraper, the first mortgage real estate bond has proved to be the financial device absolutely necessary to the development of the large types of construction so much needed in our modern American life. This year the total volume of first mortgage real estate bond issues underwritten in this country will aggregate nearly $1,000,000,000.

"With the exception only of the obligations of the Federal government," Mr. Straus said, "the record of safety of the first mortgage real estate bond defies comparison with that of any other type of investment. Let me cite one or two statistics. In December, 1923, the National Association of Real Estate Boards sent a questionnaire to its constituent members asking for a report on their total sales of real estate mortgages and bonds since 1900. The 266 members replying reported total sales since that year of $1,406,998,000, on which the total losses of principal had been but $38,925, or less than three-one hundred thousandths of 1 per cent.

Whispers Threaten Industry.

"Unfortunately, there has been criticism of all type of investment, including first mortgage real estate bonds. We are all aware that these attacks upon first mortgage real estate bonds, both direct and by innuendo, have been going on for some time, particularly during the last few weeks. While these whisperings have been aimed only at the real estate bond business, they will, if continued, not only affect the great building industry of the country, but also will bring suspicion and loss of public confidence upon all forms of investment and through this destruction of public confidence in investments, steadily undermine the entire business structure of the country.

"In a department of business of such magnitude as the real estate bond industry it is only natural that here and there loans may have been made that did not conform to the principles of sound banking. There has been a tendency, however, in this connection, to place too much emphasis on these shortcomings and thus subject the entire real estate bond business to censure because of the failure and shortcomings of a very few.

"One of the points that has received considerable attention in connection with the issuance of first mortgage bonds has been the handling of construction funds. While I do not believe that in the case of responsible first mortgage bond houses, with ample financial resources and capable management, the adoption of the practice followed by the ordinary commercial banks in connection with depositors' funds involves any danger to the public, I am convinced that some form of State supervision is desirable, in order to insure at all times the solvency and liquidity of such houses. In fact, if you will pardon me a personal reference,

WARDMAN IS PRAISED AS WASHINGTON BUILDER

ARRIVED AS AN IMMIGRANT

An estimate of the remarkable career of Harry Wardman, Washington realtor and builder, written by Henry Bradford, appears in the current number of the Success magazine. In a comprehensive survey of one of the National Capital's most interesting figures, the author, in the space of a few pages, explains how ambition played an important part in the construction of several of the city's modern landmarks.

Mr. Bradford is less Mr. Wardman's biographer than a chronicler of his building activities. This, indeed, is suggested by the title of his article: "He Said He'd Build a Thousand Houses and He Did!" The story tells what many citizens of the Capital already know—how Harry Wardman, an English lad who arrived in New York with seven shillings in his pocket, became in the course of a few busy years Washington's pioneer builder of apartment houses and is a millionaire.

The colossal Wardman Park hotel, dominating the city from the Chevy Chase side of the Connecticut Avenue bridge, is the "culmination of one of Wardman's notions," Mr. Bradford points out. Acquiring a sixteen-acre tract, Mr. Wardman started this huge enterprise which was to cost from $3,000,000 to $4,000,000 in the face of disheartening criticisms. He accomplished it, however, despite every thing, and today the gigantic edifice stands a monument to the courage of the man's convictions. It now houses 2,000 people the year round.

Thus, a son of the Wardman family, which has been "in woolens" in Bradford, Yorkshire for many generations—old Britons racially, who had lived there long before the Angles and the Saxons ever heard of the country, saw his dreams "come true." As the author puts it, "the Capital is a better place to cut one's initials, it would seem, than in the bark of a sycamore tree by the swimming hole."

NO INDICATION SEEN OF LOWER WAGES IN BUILDING CRAFTS

READJUSTMENTS MADE IN SEVERAL KEY TRADES

Construction Trade Employers Plan Organized Fight on Shorter-Week Movement.

Wage scales of building craftsmen throughout the country are holding firm generally and there is no indication of any immediate widespread downward revision of rates, according to a national survey of labor conditions in the building industry just completed by the building economic research bureau of the American Bond & Mortgage Co.

Building labor conditions are summarized as follows:

1. Rising tendency in labor costs seems to be stopped for the present, at least.

2. Building crafts plan to maintain wages and working conditions attained during building prosperity period.

3. Common labor plentiful and supply of skilled craftsmen adequate to take care of present construction, except in a few localities.

4. Bonus payments and practice of contractors bidding against each other for men virtually have disappeared.

5. Labor fairly tranquil and little interference to building operations from strikes expected this winter.

6. Building unions with largest membership in history plan renewal of campaign for five-day week.

7. Definite progress being made by labor officials in elminatng jurisdictional strikes.

Little Change Shown.

"The building industry now is being favored by a more pronounced tendency toward stabilized labor costs," said the survey. "Conditions of employment and labor rates generally during the last 60 days have shown but little change.

"Wage readjustments reported have been small, and in a majority of cases affected only a few of the so-called 'key trades,' such as plasterers, bricklayers and carpenters. In a few cities where building operations are large they have asked and received small wage advances. The majority of crafts, however, show a willingness to go along under present schedules. Few wage reductions have been reported, but there is nowhere any indication of any radical downward revision.

"While contractors in virtually all the larger cities have decided against higher wage rates, they are showing a disposition to cooperate with the building trade unions and peacefully adjust wage disputes. As a result, labor conditions generally are quiet and no serious troubles have hindered construction, except in a few localities, where an effort has been made to establish the 'open shop' or the unions are engaged in interunion strife.

"Determination of labor to maintain indefinitely the high wage rates they have obtained during the last two years was expressed at the convention of the building trades department of the American Federation of Labor at Detroit last month.

Out of Question.

"The building unions 'unanimously decided 'to hold their ground, and maintain to the utmost of their ability the wage scales and conditions which have required so many years of effort to obtain.' They also declared that wage reductions were out of question at this time.

"The largest membership in history was reported by the sixteen national and international unions represented at the convention. These unions, which have a paid-up membership of 574,497, gained 30,592 new members during the last year. This was the largest gain reported in any one year since the building trades department was organized, in 1908.

"The United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, the largest building trades union, which is not affiliated with the building trades department, has a membership of 404,917, having gained 39,924 members in the last twelve months. The combined membership of the seventeen building unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor now totals 979,407.

"Union officials pointed out that jurisdictional troubles are being adjusted satisfactorily and greater solidarity than ever before prevailed within the building trades organizations.

"Notice also was served on the construction industry that labor would strive for a shorter work week. The 44-hour week now prevails generally throughout the country, and there are few cities with a 48-hour week. In several cities the efforts of the painters and plasterers to shorten the working week to 40 hours has been successful.

"Building trades employers are taking cognizance of the shorter work week movement and are planning organized opposition. They contend that the shorter work week would add to building costs and would tend 'to further create an artificial shortage of labor.'

"All building labor seems well employed, and there is an ample supply of skilled and unskilled mechanics to meet present construction needs. Bonus payments virtually have disappeared. The demand for apprentices also is reported to have subsided, although high schools, universities and trade schools throughout the country continue to turn out considerable numbers of craftsmen.

"Indications are that the seasonal decline in building employment this winter will be less than in past years unless unusually severe weather is encountered. This is due to the fact that builders are becoming better educated and equipped to cope with adverse weather conditions and are arranging their work in such a way as to provide winter employment.

"Leading labor officials have joined in an effort to eliminate jurisdictional disputes which have been a continual source of annoyance to the building industry for many years. The United Brotherhood of Carpenters and the Sheet Metal Workers union, which have been quarreling for the last five or six years over the installation of metal trim, are reported to have virtually adjusted their grievances.

"The controversy between the bricklayers' and the plasterers' unions also is being settled by arbitration. Disposal of these two interunion disputes would go far toward the reestablishment of united action and harmony in building-trade circles throughout the country.

"Reports on wage changes from cities and towns throughout the country show that small increases ranging from 1½ to 12½ cents an hour have been granted in about 40 trades in 14 cities. These increases were reported from Atlanta, Ga.; Buffalo, Chicago, Cincinnati, Detroit, Duluth, Kansas City, St. Louis, Dayton, Nashville, Tenn.; Norfolk, Va.; Pittsburgh, Philadelphia and Reading, Pa.

"Reductions were reported from Philadelphia, Salt Lake City and Atlanta. These were small and mainly due to a surplus of common labor and some skilled craftsmen.

"Few strikes were reported and labor conditions generally were reported quiet throughout the country, except in San Francisco, where the carpenters' strike against the 'open shop' continues to interfere with building activities. In Cleveland there has been some jurisdictional trouble and the glaziers and painters' strike has had its effect on building. In New York there is plenty of winter work in prospect and labor conditions are quiet.

"In Chicago there has been a shortage of labor and some trouble has developed on building projects due to the effort of the Building Trades Council to carry out its threat to enforce union conditions on projects that are now working under the Landis award. Although the Landis citizens' committee to date has imported approximately 19,000 building craftsmen, a shortage of carpenters, bricklayers and others still remains.

"Wage scales in the building trades, as reported by the National Association of Builders Exchanges, show that labor is getting the highest wages in history. Bricklayers are receiving from $1.00 to $1.75 an hour; carpenters, 60 cents to $1.50; plasterers, 90 cents to $1.87½; building laborers, 25 cents to 87½ cents; structural iron workers, 60 cents to $1.50; plumbers, 80 cents to $1.50; electricians, 65 cents to $1.50; stone masons, 85 cents to $1.75; lathers, 75 cents to $1.62½; sheet metal workers, 80 cents to $1.50; painters, 50 cents to $1.50, and hoisting engineers, 50 cents to $1.75.

"Review of these wage scales shows that New York building mechanics are receiving the highest wages of any city in the country. Bricklayers, plasterers, hoisting engineeers and stone masons are receiving $1.75 an hour, and the majority of other trades $1.50 an hour. St. Louis, Chicago, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia, where the prevailing rate is $1.50 an hour, are about tied for second place.

"Columbia, S. C., reported the lowest wage scale. Here laborers receive from 15 cents to 20 cents an hour; bricklayers 90 cents to $1.00; carpenters, 40 cents to 60c; plasterers, 90 cents to $1.00 and painters, 50 cents.

"Reports from Canada indicate that wages and conditions in the building industry are well stabilized. Both skilled and unskilled labor is well employed, and in the provinces of Quebec and Ontario there is a shortage of common labor. Only one or two labor disturbances have been reported during the last 60 days.

TOURIST FUNDS HELP RESTORE OLD PALACE

Avignon, France, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Funds gleaned from tourists, mostly Americans, are making possible restoration of the historic Palace of the Popes here.

Built in the fourteenth century, the famous structure, which has been the residence of several pontiffs, fell into decay during the nineteenth century, when it was used as a military barracks.

Poverty of the municipal treasury had made it impossible to restore the palace until two years ago, when a sojourn tax daily on tourists was instituted and soon between 40,000 and 50,000 francs was raised.

This money is being used to restore the noble edifice which stands on a lofty hill overlooking the Rhone valley.

$6,000,000,000 BUILDING FORECAST FOR NEW YEAR

Will Be 50 Per Cent Ahead of Normal Need, Says Magazine.

A great year in buildink construction in America is forecast for 1927 by Building Age, the approximate value of construction being set at $6,000,000,000.

The probable division of the $6,000,000,000 construction program for 1927, the magazine says, will be approximately as follows:

Residential buildings	$2,462,060,000
Commercial buildings	1,020,000,000
Educational buildings	360,000,000
Hospitals and institutions	168,000,000
Industrial buildings	540,000,000
Military and naval buildings	10,000,000
Public buildings	45,000,000
Public works and public utilities	1,020,000,000
Religious and memorial buildings	108,000,000
Social and recreational buildings	267,000,000

"The figure for 'normal building need' in America is now set at $4,000,000,000," the periodical states. "This takes into account obsolescence within its ordinary meaning, fire and other losses, and the requirements to meet the need of increased population.

"But no forecast of American building can be made without taking into consideration the temperament of a people who are never satisfied with the established order of things or, indeed, who are ever stisfied that there is an established order of things. They do not wait for obsolescence—they create it to make way for larger and finer buildings.

"Because of this desire to improve and with the means at command for improvement, the facts reveal that building in 1927 will run 50 per cent ahead of normal need.

"As 1926 nears its close figures for contracts let take an upward swing from the same period in 1925; no sign of anything but general business prosperity is evident; 1927 will show the fine average for every day in the year $16,438,353."

Report by McKeever & Goss, Inc., Places $1,158,000 Value on Recent Transactions.

PROSPERITY OVER NATION IS REFLECTED IN MARKET

Excellent Time for Those Desiring to Purchase Homes, Firm Member Says.

A steady demand for all classes of real estate in all sections of the city is indicated by the report made yesterday by the office of McKeever & Goss, Inc., of the recent sale of residential, business, investment and unimproved properties, aggregating value approximately $1,158,000.

In making the report, Robert L. McKeever stated that the real estate market is in a healthy condition, that the prices of labor and materials are holding up and that the value of properties in the District show no decline, making this an excellent time for those desiring a home or business location to purchase. In fact, the unusual prosperity of the country is reflected in the real estate market of the National Capital.

LETTUCE AND DANDELION TOBACCO SUBSTITUTES

English Smokers Also Try Sunflower Leaves and Dried Watercress.

USE IS ON THE INCREASE

London, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Although millions of pounds of American tobacco are smoked in England every year and an increasing quantity grown in British dominions is consumed of late years, there is a steady use of "substitutes" in various parts of England, say botanists.

In Derbyshire the old inhabitants of rural districts use a "local mixture" made from cabbage lettuce which are allowed to grow very large before being gathered, dried and "cured" for smoking.

In Wiltshire substitutes are made from dried watercress which undergoes a simple curing with plenty of rum in the process. This is said to make an excellent pipe or cigarette "tobacco."

Devonshire produces a good local mixture made principally of dried dandelion leaves, which are so dried and cured as to retain all their flavor.

Somerset folk, in remote districts, rely on the sunflower to provide tobacco substitute. The big leaves are carefully dried and cured with rum, and in some cases can be rolled into a cheroot.

All these local productions are said to be cool smoking and leave no "herby" taste in the mouth.

WIRE DEVELOPMENT ATTRACTS BUYERS

The new home development of Charles E. Wire & Sons, located on Blagden avenue northwest, just west of Sixteenth street, is causing much favorable comment from numerous home seekers as well as members of the local building fraternity. The individuality of design, the beautiful interior finish and arrangement and the landscaping of the lots, including the wide space between the houses, have produced a very pleasing effect on the crowds who have inspected these homes during the last week.

Mr. Wire stated that plans are now going forward for the erection of a very beautiful home for one of his clients, to be erected on the northwest corner of Seventeenth street and Blagden avenue, to cost approximately $75,000. The lot is approximately 100 by 200 feet, and the home will be completed next spring.

The planning of these homes was developed by Charles E. Wire & Sons after a careful personal study of the different types of architecture used in the higher-class residential sections of the larger cities of the East.

LOAN ASSOCIATIONS ABANDONING FINES FOR LAX MEMBERS

Practice of Assessments on Nonpayments Fails to Accomplish Object.

CAN NOT FORCE PEOPLE TO CONTINUE SAVINGS

Move Is Followed by Relaxation in More Rigid Rules Regarding Dues.

By C. CLINTON JAMES,
Chairman of the Federal Legislative Committee of the United States League of Local Building and Loan Associations.

In my two previous articles I explained the fundamental difference betwen the building and loan association (representing the mutual class of financial institutions) and the banks and trust companies (representing the capitalized class of financial institutions).

I also traced the evolution in plans of operation of the building and loan association, beginning with the terminating type and ending with the permanent type and gave the advent and failure of the national type with an outline of its plan of operation. A brief account also was given of the birth of the national and State leagues and the reasons that brought them into existence and their plans and purposes.

Passing now to matters that pertain to the internal workings of the association, we find other changes still more important and significant. The practice of charging fines for nonpayment of dues of investing members gradually and steadily is being abandoned. The associations are coming to realize that this practice fails to accomplish the object desired.

Should Be Cultivated.

The habit of regular additions to one's savings account is indeed one to be cultivated, but in practice our experience in America has been that it is useless to undertake to force this habit on people by means of fines. Absolute regularity in the matter of income or of expenditure never has been attained by any individual and we should regard such regularity as an ideal toward which we should strive, rather than as an end that we actually can accomplish.

Along with the abandonment of fines has come a relaxation of the more rigid rules for stated periodical payment of dues. With fines abandoned no way remained to enforce such periodical payments of investing members, and as a matter of course, investing members were left free to pay about as they pleased.

In practice, it has not been found that this irregularity of payment of the investing member has caused much inconvenience to the associations. The steadiness and regularity of the receipts continue to be about as uniform under a system of irregular payments as it did under a system of regular payments; for when one man fails to pay as much as his usual amount, another man will pay more, and thus the aggregate is kept fairly uniform.

Is Passing Away.

In those features of our business that relate more particularly to the borrower there are other important changes taking place. The practice of charging a premium on loans in addition to the regular interest is going the same way as the fines. The ordinary borrower understands interest and is willing to pay it, but why that interest should be increased by a sum known as premium is hard for him to understand.

In the early terminating associations, where virtually every member wanted to borrow and where all the profits were kept in a common fund until the dissolution of the association, the payment of premium on loans was excusable, but that excuse long since has passed away and the leading associations of our country have set their faces against the premium charge.

The United States League of Local Building and Loan associations has gone on record as favoring the abandonment of premiums on loans, and we feel that the day is not far distant when this item will disappear entirely from our business.

Another marked change that has crept into the practice of our American associations is in the application of the borrowers' payments. Thirty-five years ago the universal custom was for the borrower to subscribe for stock equal to the amount of his loan. His payments were credited on this stock until the shares matured, at which time the shares paid the debt and both stock and loan were canceled.

Under this plan the borrower owed the full amount of his debt until the last payment was made, and his payments, instead of being credited on the principal of his indebtedness really were placed to his credit in a sinking fund, and in time that sinking fund paid the debt. In hundreds of thousands of instances the shares of such borrowers ran their due course, were matured properly, the debt was paid and the mortgage canceled.

Nevertheless, it can not be denied that now and then an exceptional case arose in which the affairs of the association were mismanaged, losses occurred and the borrower found his stock accumulations swept away, either wholly or partly, while the full amount of his indebtedness remained against him.

The enemies of our associations were not slow to seize upon these exceptional cases and were tireless in their efforts to make the public believe that such occurrences were common. To meet this objection and save the borrower from all possibility of loss, the custom has grown gradually up to credit the borrower's payments directly on the principal of his loan and charge him interest only on the balance of debt which he actually owes.

Reduced Each Month.

In a few associations the borrower's debt is reduced each month. In others the reduction is made quarterly, and in still others it is made only at the end of the year, but the plan of semiannual reduction of principal is the one which finds greatest favor among our associations.

The frequency with which the principal shall be reduced is not, however, the most important question. The all-important point is that the principal should be reduced at stated intervals and the borrower placed in a position where his stock accumulations can not be swept away. It is the borrower who provides all the revenue for the association, and he should be protected from all possible loss!

(This is the third of a series of articles to be written by C. Clinton James, exclusively for The Washington Post, and to be published each Sunday in the Real Estate Section, outlining the birth, history and evolution of the American Building and Loan Associations.)

Active Buying Announced in Country Club Section Developed by Mrs. Minar.

PRICES TO BE ADVANCED

The sale of homesites worth more than $60,000 in the new Country club section of Lee Heights, Va., is reported by Ruby Lee Minar, Inc., developers of the subdivision. Mrs. Minar stated that land worth $17,000 was sold over the last week-end. The active buying which has been in evidence in recent weeks upsets the ancient real estate tradition that the public buys most of its suburban property in the spring.

Records for a number of years show that the heaviest volume of sales made by Mrs. Minar in Arlington county properties has been in the fall and early winter months. October and November of last year broke all previous records in Lee Heights, property worth more than $175,000 being sold there in the two months. The rate of sales so far in November if maintained will surpass last November's high mark.

The Country club section is the eighth addition to Lee Heights and was given its designation because it immediately adjoins the grounds of the Washington Golf and Country club. It was placed on the market a few weeks ago at predevelopment prices and announcement has been made that the present prices will be advanced 10 per cent after Monday, November 22.

LAS MORAS RANCH'S WORK MOSTLY DONE BY ELECTRIC AID

Shearing of Sheep and of Horses Is Done in Mechanical Way.

CURRENT HEATS IRONS FOR BRANDING ANIMALS

Brooders Hatch Chickens and Fans Keep Cows Free of Flies.

Menard, Tex., Nov. 13 (By A. P.). Otto Carlin lighted a new oil lamp, drew water with a pump, examined one of the new iron nails which were rapidly displacing the old wooden pegs, and thought it was progress. But he kept a few of the old candles on hand and preserved the old oaken bucket for safety. That was 1877, and the place was the famous 100,000-acre Las Moras ranch.

Otto's assignees and descendants now press a button. Magic lamps glow, meals cook, chickens hatch, pumps draw water, saws cut wood, sheep are clipped, refrigerators refrigerate, grindstones grind, and waffle irons waffle. They just push a button.

Electricity also is transforming the cattle ranches.

New Ranch House Built.

Life moves with a swifter tempo on the land which Otto Carlin blocked out 50 years ago. Otto would not know the place.

Toiling up the valley of the Colorado river from Austin, Tex., in the summer of 1877, an ox train forded the clear stream of the Llano, and drawing up at a spot on the San Saba river in Menard county, deposited a cargo of lumber and squire pointed nails. Out of these Carlin built his ranch house in the desolate waste that was then West Texas.

Recently the old house was razed, and on its site, made out of some of its own timbers, stands a ranch house of a new type—a spreading bungalow with wide porches and spacious rooms, hardwood floors and oak fittings. And beside each polished door is an electric light switch.

A strange thing mounted on a truck, having long timber arms, comes along on Las Moras ranch these days. It is a moving "barber shop" equipped to "bob" sheep electrically. Otto Carlin used to truss a sheep up with buckskin thong and harvest the wool with a clumsy pair of shears, one clip at a time. Now the twinkling blades of the sheep barbers can turn out 150 hair cuts a day each. An expert hand clipper, working at top speed, can not do more than 50.

Descendants of Otto Carlin's dairy cows munch food cut by electric ensilage cutters, give their milk to an electric milking machine, and are comforted by an electric fan which drives away the flies. Mother hens can play barnyard bridge while an electric incubator hatches their chickens, and an electric brooder raises them. Horses are branded by electric irons and clipped by electric clippers, while electric irons of a different type curl the maid's hair and iron the men's shirts.

Las Moras ranch does not stretch so far away into the sunset as it formerly did, because the 100,000 acres has dwindled to 19,000. But this curtailed acreage produces more wealth than the original 100,000 did.

Charles L. Martin owns the place, and his four sons, college trained, operate it. They have installed almost every modern mechanical device known in farm operations.

we have for several years made public declaration of our advocacy of banking supervision of first mortgage real estate bond houses, and when our New York corporation was organized some ten years ago, we at that time voluntarily placed its affairs under the supervision of the State banking department. Since that time we have been subject to periodical examination and audit by the State banking examiners.

Volume of Bonds Increases.

"I am convinced that, had other real estate bond houses been under such banking supervision, the difficulties which one firm has recently experienced and the criticism which has followed, would not have occurred. Periodical audit would probably have been sufficient to insure adequate liquidity and continued solvency.

"But today further advances are probably required to keep pace with changing times. Because of the rapid growth of the industry, conditions in the real estate bond business have been undergoing changes of great importance. The volume of bonds offered to the public has been increasing at a very rapid rate. This volume, in fact, is over twice as great as it was three years ago. With this growth in offerings has come an enormous increase in the number of firms underwriting real estate bond issues.

"These firms are of varying degrees of experience, competence, financial strength and moral responsibility. It is well within the bounds of good judgment and sound social policy, therefore, that certain additional restrictions and regulations should be made commensurate with this progress and expansion.

"I am heartily in favor of the policy of segregating the proceeds of construction loans and believe that the leading bond houses, by reason of the position of leadership which they enjoy in their field and in view of the magnitude to which the business has now attained, should be willing to adopt this policy for the benefit of the entire real estate bond business, the building industry and the investing public. I would, however, amplify this recommendation by insisting that this segregation of funds must be under State or Federal supervision.

Appraisals Under Fire.

"Aside from the segregation of funds there has been some criticism of the first mortgage real estate bond business with regard to so-called excessive appraisals. I believe there have been some cases in which such criticism has been justified, although I would remind you of the fact that an appraisal of value is merely an expression of opinion and it might well be that the opinion of the self-appointed critics may not turn out to be as soundly based as that of the real estate broker or the issuing house which made the appraisal in the first instance. Long experience with the dynamic character of our American cities has taught me to be exceedingly reluctant to criticize the appraisals of competent persons familiar with the locality concerned, even though my own opinion of values might not agree with theirs. On the other hand, I know that the demand for independent appraisals on the part of investors has led to the use of incompetent, irresponsible appraisers by irresponsible underwriting houses anxious to make use of the independent appraisal as a selling device.

"On the subject of appraisals, however, there is one important recommendation which I wish to make. I need not emphasize that it is net income which gives value to any productive enterprise. It is from this net income that the interest and amortization requirements of the loan must come and any system of valuation which fails to take this fundamental consideration into account is faulty and dangerous.

"On the other hand, in the case of construction loans, the difficulty of estimating the probable income of the new project and, in particular, the difficulty which the security commissioners of the various States experience in checking such estimates of probable income, as well as the rate at which they should be capitalized, are, no doubt, sufficient warrant for insisting that construction projects should in the first instance be appraised on the basis of sound investment cost or value. For the reason already mentioned, however, such appraisals should always be confirmed by the capitalization at a reasonable rate of the net income, which should be, of course, conservatively calculated.

"It is the lack of any uniformity—of any standardized procedure—which is in part responsible for some of the abuses that exist in the matter of appraisals. Obviously, these conditions increase enormously the costs and difficulties which a real estate bond house, operating on a national scale, is forced to meet in qualifying its issues in many States.

Recommends Conference.

"It would be my recommendation that at the earliest possible moment a committee be appointed by the securities commissioners of the various States to meet with representatives of the first-mortgage real estate bond houses the building interests and real estate brokers prominent in the appraisal field to consider the whole subject of appraisals and endeavor to reach an agreement upon a standardized procedure for appraising new construction projects.

"Closely related to this subject of appraisals is the criticism of so-called excessive loans. It is undoubtedly true that in some cases excessive loans have been made—loans that will prove not to be justified by the earning power of the properties upon which they are based. I would condemn without qualification such lending practices, but I wish to caution you against the conclusion which is reached by too many, that the soundness of a loan can be determined merely by the percentage which it bears to the cost or value of the property. I do not believe that the science of sound lending upon real estate can be reduced to any hard and fast rules or to any simple set of formulae. Our experience has shown that a 40 per cent loan is unsound in some cases and that an 80 per cent loan is perfectly sound in other cases. I know that loans in excess of 66 2-3 per cent may safely be made upon income producing property in our large cities if the location is wisely selected, if the improvement represents an efficient utilization of the site, if the building be efficiently designed and soundly constructed and if the principal of the loan be gradually amortized by periodical deposits of income.

Deems Amortization Essential.

"This amortization I regard as essential to the safety of real estate bond financing—a better assurance against loss than a bundle of appraisals. Depreciation and absolescence in buildings and changing neighborhoods render this safeguard imperative.

"In connection with the suggestions which I have made with regard to the improvement of building financing—I wish to offer my hearty approval of the issuance of securities of all types under the so-called blue sky laws of the various States. As I have said, the value and effectiveness of such legislation would, in my opinion, be enhanced by greater uniformity of requirement and of administration among the various States. I am convinced that this theory of government is sound, and I wish to extend my hearty felicitations to all those individuals or groups, either public or private, who have been diligently working along these lines, thus protecting the American people and endeavoring more and more to place the greatest possible safeguards around the sacred savings and investments of the public.

"In my opinion, we are today standing upon the threshold of a new era in the entire investment field and I believe the day is not far off when the methods of creating and selling every type of investment offered to the American public will be in some manner under strict State or Federal government supervision and control. How soon that day will come I know not, but it is as certain as tomorrow's sun."

$200,000 REAL ESTATE SALES ARE TRANSACTED

Real estate sales amounting to more than $200,000 are announced by Maddux, Marshall, Moss & Mallory in a statement issued yesterday.

"Recent sales have greatly encouraged the real estate men of Washington," said J. R. Crutchfield, sales manager for the above firm. "We look for a constantly increasing business during the winter months. Washington values are fixed and the investing public is learning this more and more every day. You will note that the entire list of sales recorded here are homes and that is always an encouraging sign."

Louisa Adams chapter held its November meeting on the second Tuesday with Miss Caroline Adams, 1779 Massachusetts avenue, as hostess. In spite of the inclemency of the weather the usual attendance of two-thirds of the resident membership was sustained. Cash contributions continued to pour in, the members realizing that this is the quickest and easiest means of replenishing a depleted treasury.

Reports were made by chapter representatives to the State committees on Americanization, conservation and thrift and Children of the Republic. Miss Corson again outlined the aim of the Americanization school to broaden the scope of its work. It is hoped that sufficient funds may be collected to defray the cost of a paid helper, and volunteers are needed to help care for children who are too small to be left at home while their parents attend the citizenship classes. A stimulating letter from Mrs. Husband, State chairman of Americanization committee, was read.

Miss Purdy distributed literature on the conservation of our birds and forests and also wild flower pledges, and reported on the work already accomplished in scattering wild flower seeds. In this connection it is well to note that the State of Maryland draws attention to this good work by erecting along the highways signs which are plain enough to attract the attention of passing motorists, reading: "Stop! Help! To keep your highways beautiful."

Mrs. Van Hoosen brought Louisa Adams chapter in closer touch with the Children of the Republic by her enthusiastic report of the work being done at Peck Memorial chapel.

The chapter was proud to receive its first check from the Kelvinator Co. through the efforts of Miss Husted and Mrs. Roome, and the chapter house treasury is enriched to the extent of $10.

Mrs. Roome reported that a brass marker, suitably engraved, had been placed on the ottoman which Louisa Adams chapter had presented to the District of Columbia room in Continental Memorial hall.

Mrs. Harriet Locher held the attention of the members of the chapter for a considerable length of time on the subject for the evening's program, "Better Films." She pointed out the vast usefulness of moving pictures in education, specifically mentioning the demand for the Yale chronicles in use in the public schools of Washington, and also the success achieved by Secretary Davis in showing government films on board ship, before immigrants bound for our shores, to acquaint them with the possibilities and responsibilities of American citizenship, which they seek.

The efforts of Mrs. Locher to raise the standard of films for children have not met with the success that is warranted and she urged the Daughters of the American Revolution to advance the showing of educational films by advertising and attending the selected programs which have been instituted at Saturday morning performances in several theaters.

Appropriations were made to the committees on conservation and thrift and Children of the Republic, and the usual 25 cents per capita donation was made for the support of the immigratints manual. An appeal for donations of materials for sewing and embroidery for a box to be sent to Ellis Island was made by Miss Smith.

It was proposed by Miss Adams that the Louisa Adams chapter consider buying a chair in the new auditorium and pledged the first donation of $25. It was decided to refer this to the budget committee, to be brought before the chapter at the next meeting. One new member was added to the growing list.

American chapter held its November meeting at the home of Mrs. D. Anna Miller, 1351 Otis place northwest. The meeting was opened with prayer and the salute to the flag. A contribution was made for the Americanization work. Instructed by Mrs. Faris, the chapter had its first lesson on the flag. Mrs. Bradford gave an illustrated talk on Titania's doll house of the British exhibit at the Sesquicentennial.

The Descendants of '76 chapter held its November meeting at the home of Mrs. Edward Tarring, assisting hostesses being Mrs. Helen Jenks, Mrs. Gibson and Miss Redway. Two new members, Mrs. Russell and Mrs. Hamblen, were received and initiated into the chapter.

Two dollars was contributed to the children of Sons and Daughters of the Republic and $5 to the student loan fund.

This chapter will be host to the Richard Lord Jones chapter, C. A. R., Mrs. Holzberg, organizer, on Saturday. Mrs. David T. Caldwell, State recording secretary and chairman of Constitution hall finance committee, made an interesting and comprehensive talk on the plan to finance the new $1,800,000 auditorium. She stated that each District of Columbia chapter is asked to take a chair as a memorial at a cost of $150. The meeting was concluded by a talk by Mrs. Constance Goodman, State chaplain and member of the chapter, on her European tour made this past summer.

Sarah Franklin chapter held its October meeting at the home of Mrs. Charles Tavenner in Hyattsville, Md., with Mrs. Zeigler and Mrs. William Hoffheims as assisting hostesses. The regent, Mrs. John Maxwell, presided. Reports of the officers and the chairmen of the various committees were given. The regent appointed Miss Belle Browning as chairman of the ways and means committee.

RUSSIA-ROUMANIA RADIO "WAR" IS IN PROGRESS

Bucharest Accuses Soviets of Broadcasting Hurtful Propaganda.

Bucharest, Nov. 13 (By A. P.). A radio war, to all intents and purposes, is in progress between Russia and Roumania.

The offensive was taken, according to Roumanian officials, by the broadcasting stations of Moscow, Odessa and other cities near the frontier of Bessarabia, the annexation of which by Roumania the soviets have never recognized.

They are accused of attempting to lecture Roumanian listeners on the deficiencies of their government and of trying to broadcast revolutionary propaganda.

To prevent this the Roumanian government has taken such measures as greatly to retard the development of radio in its own country.

The radio is a Roumanian state monopoly and the importation of all foreign apparatus is prohibited. For "the security of the state" no radio receiving sets are allowed near frontiers and to install a set anywhere in the country, one must secure a special permit.

When the Roumanian owner of a permit has succeeded in tuning in the opera at Vienna, Rome or Paris, he is almost certain to receive a barrage of propaganda from Russia. At the first word from Moscow, the Roumanian military stations cut loose with a counter attack, which makes it impossible to hear anything.

NEWS OF THE BOY SCOUTS

Another pilgrimage to the tomb of America's Unknown Soldier at Arlington was made yesterday by the Boy Scouts of Washington and vicinity. This year in addition to keeping the trust which the scouts of the nation rest upon them the Washington scouts also honored one of their own members who gave his life in the late war. A wreath was laid on the grave of Edward Comegys, formerly a member of Troop 39.

Another great event in scouting is scheduled for Saturday at Camp Wilson, when the annual fall rally will be staged. With the exception of the awarding of camp medals, the whole afternoon from 1 to 5 will be devoted to games and fun. Apples will be distributed and at 5 p. m. dinner will be served to scoutmasters.

That all scouts enjoy doing good turns is strongly indicated by the response to headquarters assignments, but where it is up to a troop or the scouts to find the good turn the results are "not so good." The Thanksgiving good turn requires the double effort of finding an opportunity and then using it. Last year Troop 49 furnished a ton of coal to a needy family. Get busy, fellows.

The final list of scouts in the various schools was received at headquarters today and definite plans will soon be completed for a more active participation of scouts in this important work. Troop 58 reports seven of its scouts appointed to patrols. Have you sent your list to headquarters? Troop 57 reports in connection with the school safety work the taking of a traffic count in the Chevy Chase section.

About 70 boys attended the Third division overnight hike to Great Seneca creek last week-end. Of course, it was a cold night, but all the boys want to go again, and they want Mr. Barnes, writer, story teller, Indian fighter and congressional medal of honor man, to be there also to repeat his camp-fire stories.

There are scouts in India. Who would think it? Several flourishing well-trained troops of Boy Scouts have been organized among the Hindus and an exhibition this summer showed that remarkable results had been obtained in camping, pioneering, handicraft, bookbinding and carpentry. And significantly enough, scouting games are preferred to Indian games.

Scouts of the Cache Valley council in Utah have recently added to their service laurels by saving another life. This makes a total of eight lives saved by scouts of that council in the last three years. It should be noted that this is the council to which Mr. S. R. Barber, recently appointed assistant deputy commissioner of the Fifth division, was formerly attached.

Two ways to find Polaris. As winter draws near, the constellation of stars, known as the Great Bear and commonly called the "Big Dipper," is rather low on the horizon and the standard method of finding this North Star by the use of the two end stars of the Dipper sometimes can not be used. Dr. F. E. Matthes, author of the handbook chapter on map making, has offered the timely suggestion that the W-shaped constellation, called Cassiopeia, points in the general direction of the Pole Star, and that these two constellations, the Great Bear and Cassiopeia, always appear on opposite sides of Polaris. Therefore, Cassiopeia may often be substituted for the Great Bear in locating Polaris.

Designs for troop insignia. It is fast becoming general for troops to design their own numerals and patrol insignia and the results have become most gratifying. Medallions and other elaborate designs have been used. Have you an artist in your troop?

"A scout is thrifty. He saves his money so that he may pay his own way." The practice of "hitchhiking" is not according to the highest ethics of scouting, and although apparently indulged in by many scouts, should be discouraged.

Parents, visitors, troop officials and scouts united last Friday night in an annual booster meeting for Troop 43, of the National Baptist Memorial church. Every member of the troop was present. Last week the troop took a hike to the Saunders farm on Conduit road. The scouts found plenty of wild, rugged country and strongly recommend the place for troop hikes. The route to this place is marked on a map at scout headquarters.

Scribe Robert Mullican, of Troop 111, of Bethesda, Md., reports the troops' participation in an affair of the Parent-Teachers association at which baseballs autographed by Walter Johnson were sold. Two new scouts were enlisted in Troop 111 last week.

Troop 126, of Alexandria, Va., announces its annual parents' night for Friday evening, November 12, at the Westminster building. First aid, signalling and knot tying demonstrations, games and refreshments will make up the evening's program.

Troop 108, of Brentwood, Md., will hold its annual banquet Wednesday evening, November 17. The troop has several new members, and has increased activity in all branches of scouting.

The courts of honor and review for November are as follows:

Saturday, at 7:30, Metropolitan Baptist church, Sixth and A streets northeast, court of honor and review.

Saturday, November 27, at 7:30, Wilson Normal school, Eleventh and Harvard streets northwest, court of honor and review.

At the first court of honor since the contest started held Tuesday evening at the Thomson school four scouts received merit badges for the first time. The court was composed of Dr. Paul Bartsch, chairman; Dr. T. F. Murphy, Mr. Adrian Sizer, Executive Linn C. Drake and Assistant Executive J. W. Talley. The following boys received badges: Troop 1, Hamilton Wright, personal health, pioneering, swimming; Troop 2, Enlow Carter, personal health; Robert Weintraub, craftmanship, handicraft, personal health; Troop 10, Herbert Hulse, carpentry, firemanship, first aid to animals; Troop 17, Laurel McLaughlin, life saving, swimming; Troop 25, Bradford Lynch, public health; Richard Thom, firemanship, personal health, swimming; Troop 73, Aaron Caplan, carpentry, music; Troop 100, Arthur Conn, plumbing.

Camp Awards.

At Camp Wilson Saturday afternoon, November 20, awards will be made to scouts who won honors at the camps the past season. Camp Roosevelt advancement medals, gold medal to Oscar Seigel, Troop 47; silver medal to Robert Burke, Troop 42; bronze medal to David McDougal, Troop 8, and Robert Shosteck, Troop 73, tied. Scoutcraft medals—gold medal to Loren Adams, Troop 100; silver medal to Wallace Bloyer, Troop 8; bronze medal to Robert Shostick, Troop 73. Nature medals, gold medal to Leroy Miller, Troop 100; silver medal to Robert Shosteck, Troop 73; bronze medal to Robert Burke, Troop 42. The honor scouts are R. Chambers, Troop 1; F. HOWARD MORAN TELLS OF HIS BELIEF IN CITY left its imprint in the minds of many. Our population has increased each year since 1920, so that it has equaled the number we had here during the war in a shorter space of time than would have occurred in normal times.

The strides that this city has made in the last decade are tremendous, and those who have lived here for at least 25 years can see the many improvements in business and commercial lines. A glance at statistics will show that the improvements made in our city in the last few years have materially added to the growth of it, as numbers of large office buildings, apartment houses, financial institutions, and mercantile houses have either added to their buildings or erected new ones, which have been necessitated through the greatly increased business done in this city.

More and more our city is receiving the attention of other States and foreign countries, and there is a noticeable but gradual movement of the establishment of executive offices of large corporations in this city. The foreign countries are naturally interested in Washington as the center in which Washington as the center in which their highest representatives live, and the number of visitors from foreign shores has increased yearly.

In the middle of 1922 the bank deposits in Washington were approximately $197,000,000, and, comparing it with the similar period of this year, the growth has been close to $50,000,000, to more than $245,000,000, which indicates there is ample capital available to take care of the increased needs for the development of real estate and business.

The banks have shown themselves to be in a healthy condition, as they have gained in deposits and resources; and the surplus of the banks has so increased that in a four-year period, statistics show that this city ranks eleventh in percentage of growth as compared with all the States of the Union. This increased surplus is a factor adding to the financial strength of our local banking institutions.

The writer has just returned from a trip to a number of cities throughout our country, and one can not but feel that Washington stands out as its best city, both as to location, natural beauty and future growth, of any city in our country.

NORDIC BLOOD MAKES CHANGE IN CHILEANS

Greater Infusion Likely if More German Families Are Imported.

Santiago, Chile, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—A further infusion of Nordic blood into the Chilean race will be brought about if plans now under consideration by the German colony here are developed.

Importation of 2,000 additional German families to settle in the rich agricultural regions of the south of Chile has been suggested.

The Chileans already are more or less a race apart as German and English blood has been mixed to a great extent with the Latin during many years. It is not unusual to find persons bearing such family names as Helfmann, Lundstedt, Walker, Martin, Edwards and O'Brien and O'Reilly, who can not speak English.

The German and English colonies are large and their influence has had noticeable effects. The army is German trained and is uniformed in typically German style. The navy, on the other hand, is a miniature reproduction of Great Britain.

HOUSES FOR SALE — HOUSES FOR SALE

BIG BUNGALOWS AND TWO-STORY HOMES.
LOCATED IN ONE OF THE BEST SECTIONS OF THE NORTHEAST.

The BUNGALOWS have large living room, dining room, bedroom, kitchen, pantry and tile bath. The floors are of hardwood; and electric fixtures are of artistic pattern. In the light and dry cellar which extends under the entire House is the laundry and hot-water heating plant of economical type. Wide front porch and convenient back porch.

The TWO-STORY HOMES are quite unusual. On the first floor—large living room, dining room, kitchen and pantry. On the second floor are the bedrooms and tile bath. In the cellar, hot water heating plant and laundry equipment. The floors are of hardwood and each Home has its very attractive front porch and convenient back porch.

VERY LOW PRICE, SMALL CASH PAYMENT AND MONTHLY PAYMENT THAT WILL BE MUCH LESS THAN RENT.

OPEN FOR INSPECTION EVERY DAY AND EVENING, INCLUDING SUNDAY.

Drive out R. I. Ave. N. E. to Newton St. and turn right; or take the car leaving G St. opposite the Treasury and ride to Newton St.—and it is only a half block to these Homes.

TAKOMA PARK HOMES

$5,500—Small cash payments, and $37.50 per month, will buy this house of 5 rooms and bath, all modern improvements. Excellent location; 2 blocks from 14th st. trolley and stores. Why pay rent?

$7,850—This well-built cozy 5-room house MUST BE SOLD. Splendidly located on a beautiful lot 50x185, with a variety of fruit trees and bushes. Good place for chickens. Make an offer. Owner leaving for Florida.

BLADENSBURG BLVD. AT L ST. N.E.

We feel that we have accomplished something with the development of this most attractive community, for it is solving the housing problem for so many families who appreciate the comforts of a Home, but which high rents and poor accommodations have made impossible to enjoy heretofore.

These Hmes are of very substantial brick construction—planned on practical lines, the results of careful study of living conditions. Equipped with the latest fixtures—tile bath—electric fixtures—gas range—laundry facilities and a heating plant that requires very little fuel to give the maximum amount of heat. They have wide front porches and deep terraces prettily planted. There isn't a better location in Washington, very high, overlooking the entire city and constituting an exclusive neighborhood.

$5,375 INSIDE HOMES. $5,675 SEMI-DETACHED HOMES. $5,975 CORNER HOMES.

OPEN FOR INSPECTION EVERY DAY AND EVENING.

Take car at 15th and N. Y. Ave. N.W.—riding to 15th and H Sts. N.E.—transfer to bus or walk north two short squares.

A HOUSE THAT IS DIFFERENT
Not just a seven-room, 2-bath house, with built-in garage
but a HOME

With charm of atmosphere, grace of proportion, comfort of plan and perfection of construction.

From the instant one enters the arched hallway and as they move from the dignified living room through the cheery informal sun room to the gracious dining room a spirit of hospitality and utter comfort prevails.

This comfort is further emphasized by the perfectly equipped kitchen, the wardrobe and mirror lined dressing room and each of the three LARGE bedrooms. A back stairway, a built-in garage and electric refrigerator are details that further add to the superlative attraction of this house.

Located on a corner lot with car line and main arterial highway to insure accessibility and framed in a setting of luxurious planting, this house merits your immediate inspection.

BUY A HOME IN QUINCY TERRACE
AND YOU WILL NEVER REGRET IT.
The realty values in QUINCY TERRACE must steadily increase, for as we go forward with our development of this community it becomes more and more an important residential center. You can always be sure of refinement of neighborhood, for we are exercising the utmost care in the sale of these Homes. Quincy Terrace is located at QUINCY AND 22ND STS. N.E.
You can have your choice of BUNGALOWS or TWO-STORY HOMES—both are wholly detached, designed on entirely new plans and built with Kite care of detail. If you prefer the BUNGALOW type of Homes, you will like these immensely, for they provide the greatest amount of room, compactly arranged. They are equipped throughout for comfort and convenience of living.
If you prefer TWO-STORY HOUSES you will find in these an entirely new arrangement which we are sure will appeal to you—and they, like the BUNGALOWS, are fully equipped in every detail.
Each Home in QUINCY TERRACE is wholly detached and has large porches. The lawns are prettily planted with shrubs and there is a deep back yard.
WAIT UNTIL YOU SEE THE HOMES BEFORE YOU LEARN THE PRICE, OTHERWISE IT MIGHT BE MISLEADING.
AND THE TERMS WILL BE EQUALLY AS ATTRACTIVE.
Inspect at any time—our Mr. Hamilton is on the premises every day and Sunday. Or for special appointment phone him at Cleveland 1490.
Take G St. cars leaving Treasury Dept. to Rhode Island Ave. and 22d St. N.E., turning left; or take the bus, which runs within two squares of Quincy Terrace.

AT THE CHESS TABLE

By WILLARD H. MUTCHLER

The board by board summary of the match between the teams representing the Department of Agriculture and Independent government bureaus, contested last week at the quarters of the Capital City Chess club, is as follows:

Bd.	Agriculture.	W.	Independent	B.	W.
1	C.H. Stephenson	1	A.Y. Hesse	0
2	J. Roberts	0	C.C. Bettinger	1
3	Dr. J.F. Couch	0	J.T. Buford	1
4*	D.S. Burch	1	H.R. Vedder	0
5	A.E. McClure	1	W.P. Borland	0
6	Dr. A.S. Hitch'k.	1	D.P. Thompson	0
7	D.F. McGowan	½	T.J. Patrick	½
8*	F.A. Csonka	1	H.E. Turner	0
9	Dr. W.W. Skin'r.	1	M.C. List	0
10*	Dr. J. Davidson	1	J.C.C. Pat'rson	0
	Total	7½	Total	2½

*Agriculture played white on these boards.

As may readily be seen Agriculture came through with a sweeping victory, although the individual games were more closely contested than the score would indicate. In virtually every case, however, the losers lost by virtue of oversights in critical positions.

A book prize had been offered by the two team captains, C. C. Bettinger and J. Roberts, to be awarded to the player who in the opinion of the judges, Mutchler, Byler and Mundelle, contested the best played game of the evening. The prize, a copy of Capablanca's 'Chess Fundamentals," was finally granted to C. H. Stephenson for his excellent effort against A. Y. Hesse. The latter, to be sure, made one costly slip in a tense moment of combat; but the manner in which his opponent forcibly brought the issue to a close left little doubt as to the choice of prize winner.

Had either of the team captains been eligible to carry off the honors, however, Clark C. Bettinger, the Independnet leader, would have had an excellent chance of capturing the award for his party against Roberts. The latter early got into difficulties in the opening and Bettinger played stellar chess in vanquishing him in 16 moves. The scores of both the above games are appended.

Capital City Tourneys.

C. C. Bettinger defeated J. Roberts in the only game contested during the week in the class A-B tournament at the local club. Carl A. Hesse, the son of A. Y. Hesse, won a pretty and well played game from E. R. Kalmbach in which he offered the sacrifice of the exchange and speedily forced his opponent into a mating net. The score of the game appears elsewhere in the column.

In the general tournament, Gleason won from Herbert Pasch in a game in which the younger player played exceptionally well, losing only by reason of his lack of experience. Gleason also drew with Reardon. In the only remaining game Fouts came out victorious over Reardon. The score of the game is given and it will be seen that the winner played a fine game.

In the latest Kriegspiel tournament the group 1 section was finally brought to a close when Bettinger defeated Byler. Thus both Badger and Bettinger move on to the semifinals and Byler and Bishop are eliminated from further play. In group 2 Mutchler won from McCrady and now has a score of 2-0. Play in this group and in groups 3 and 4 progressed no further.

Solutions to Problem.

The key to No. 181 is Q-KBsq. Among those sending in solutions were J. W. Harris, F. B. Walker, Daniel Breeskin, Dell Floyd, Max Pugatsky, P. C. Leary, Wolf Rosett, E. J. Kassel, John Alden, jr., S. W. Morgan and Jacob Frech. The latter solves the problems by the application of simple principles of logic and his detailed discussion as to the means by which he arrives at his conclusion are highly interesting.

Next week there will appear, in addition to the regular two-mover, a four-move problem by C. C. Bettinger. His last composition gave the solvers no end of pleasure but he promises a touch of the difficult in the one which is to appear. In fact, he is hurling a defi at the solvers when he states that he believes very few will be able to arrive at the solution.

The following Sunday another local composer, A. Y. Hesse, has a three-mover to offer. And we believe that solvers will concord in the opinion that it is a beauty.

Miami
It's June Here Now!
Another "season" has already started in this tropical vacation land. The customary early arrivals are here and are finding Miami the same healthful, enjoyable pleasurable spot of former years. Their comfort and convenience, in housing or in play, show no effect of the September storm.
Miami is ready, as usual, to entertain in the manner that has won this city renown as the "World's Greatest Winter Resort." Within the year a quarter of a billion dollars has been spent in building, enlarging, extending, making Miami a greater city; adding to its attractiveness, increasing its utilities, providing more accommodations, creating new sources of entertainment or making more easily enjoyed those features which have made this city famous.
Every summertime sport is available here throughout the winter—surf bathing, in a sea warmed by the Gulf Stream—golf on eleven sporty courses—polo on four palm-bordered fields—tennis, on fifty fine courts—motoring over 1200 miles of dustless highways—fishing in the Angler's Paradise—boating over multi-hued waters.
In addition there is the fast Spanish game of Jai Alai and greyhound racing, all the season. Horse racing (45-day meet, mid-January to March). Dancing in scores of ball rooms, supper clubs, gay casinos, and pavilions of oriental splendor.

FEATURES

WASHINGTON, SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 14, 1926. F

Attractions in the Amusement World

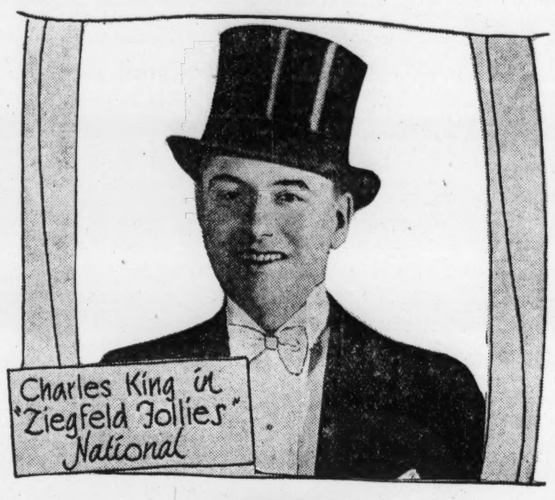
TWENTIETH SERIES OF THE FOLLIES

Beginning tonight, Florenz Ziegfeld will entertain Washington theatergoers at the National theater with his newest Follies, the twentieth of the series, and undoubtedly the best of them all. For never before has Mr. Ziegfeld provided such an elaborate cast, such a host of beautiful girls and such magnificent stage effects. The feather pageant alone represent an outlay of thousands of dollars, and includes the services of some of the most beautiful figurantes in America. The stage is made to resemble a great bower of marvelous plumes; and through these, marvelously attired, parade a retinue of beautiful women, perfect types of Ziegfeld glorified girls.

Another novelty is provided in the exquisite Ben Ali Haggin pictures, specially designed by this great artist and requiring the appearance of such distinguished beauties as Katherine Burke, Dorothy Wagman, Helen Herendeed, Gladys Glad and Flo Kennedy. These tableaux are exotic in color and conception, and reveal the mysteries of pirate ships on the high seas and the fascinations of Elysian gardens.

For his musical numbers, Mr. Ziegfeld has engaged the most expert of all modern composers, Rudolf Friml, who wrote such popular successes as "The Firefly," "Katinka" and "Rose Marie." The lyrics have been written by Gene Buck, well known in Washington, and long associated with the Follies, and Irving Caesar, who wrote the song hits for "No, No, Nanette."

Prominent in the cast are James Barton, greatest American dancing comedian; Ray Dooley, the child terrible of naughtiness and laughter; Louise Brown, artiste ballerina; blonde Edna Leedom, who has her usual repertoire of sophisticated songs; Claire Luce, recently the sensational successor to Mistinguette, in Paris; Charles King, the popular juvenile; Irving Fisher, gifted tenor; winsome Polly Walker, prima donna; Mary Jane, Lew Christy, and Accent and Janesko, sensational French dancers, imported especially for this production. Ned Wayburn is responsible for the staging.



CELEBRATE CENTENARY AT KEITH'S

In the winter of 1826 and 1827 vaudeville was born and ever since that time it has grown in favor with the amusement-loving public. This week B. F. Keith's theater, through its manager, Mr. Roland S. Robbins, offers one of the finest bills ever presented to a variety audience.

It is headed by the singing comedienne, Daphne Pollard. Miss Pollard returns after another long triumph abroad. In fact, she proved to be the reigning favorite of the music halls. She will be seen and heard in "Song, Characterizations and Comedy."

An especially prepared act for the centenary celebration by Meyer Golden will be the big feature for the week. It is called "Memories of the Opera," and features Caesar Rivoli. There is a company of ten distinguished opera artists.

The heavy comedy end of the bill will rest with Ed and Tom Hickey, just "two elegant gentlemen," who never fail to bring on the laughs.

Sophistication to the nth degree, youth and beauty go to make up the offering to be presented by Burns and Allen. Their special contribution to the bill is entitled "Lamb Chops," and was written by Al Boasberg.

Edna and John Torrence, brother and sister, follow with their "Torrent of Dance Steps and Music." Joseph Cebu will make things merry at the ivory keys.

Mary Coward and Larry Bradam bring a thrill with their "Just Crooning a Tune." Miss Coward is a blind vocalist.

Europe once more sends a new offering. This week it is the Mongadors, the French comedy jugglers, a quintet of skilled performers.

Kafka, Stanley and Mae, the international aerial stars, will present daring feats.

The bill will be framed with the usual screen features—Topics of the Day, the Aesop's fables and the Pathe News pictorial.

"GREEN HAT" OPENS WEEK ENGAGEMENT

"The Green Hat," the famous Michael Arlen love story, with Katharine Cornell in the leading role, opens a week's engagement at the Belasco theater, beginning tomorrow night.

The history of "The Green Hat" is a fascinating one. First, in novel form, it made an instantaneous hit with the reading public and established its author in the front rank of contemporaneous writers. Many editions of the book were published in this country and England. Its wide vogue literally forced Arlen to dramatize the story for the stage, and this was done. A. H. Woods immediately purchased the stage rights, but was compelled to withhold the manuscript on his desk for months until he could secure the services of Katharine Cornell for the role of Iris March. The production of the play, its reception in and out of New York, the vast receipts attracted to the box office wherever it was seen, and the immense amount of royalties paid Michael Arlen made, and continues to make "The Green Hat" an attraction of outstanding interest in the annals of the footlights.

The story of the girl who loved where and when she pleased, who chose her lovers for the moment and discarded them when they no longer interested her, is hardly a narrative for the narrow minded. One must be generous of the frailties of human nature and particularly of the frailities of women, to sit before the unfolding of Iris March's life as Arlen has written it and not grow impatient. If you agree that she had the right to take love where she found it you will like Iris March; if you disagree with her purposes and her methods you will hate her. But like or hate you will be fascinated during the course of the story's telling in its four powerful, ironic acts.

The cast, headed by Katharine Cornell, will be identical with that which presented "The Green Hat" on Broadway for a solid year.

"STROGOFF" FILM OPENS AT RIALTO

One of the truly big film productions of the year is being shown at the Rialto and it also marks the American premiere of a massive picturization of Jules Verne's famous masterpiece "Michael Strogoff," long popular as a book and as a play, and now filmed for the first time and presented by Carl Laemmle as a Universal film de France production.

Ivan Moskine, said to be "Europe's idol of the screen," heads a brilliant group of principals, supported by a cast claimed to number 6,000.

The story concerns itself with the adventures of Michael Strogoff on a 5,000-mile journey from Moscow to Irkutsk in Siberia, with a message from the czar to his brother, the grand duke, in command of the Russian troops, who is threatened by an uprising of the semibarbaric Tartars under Foofar, the grand khan.

It is impossible to tell in detail of all the hero's hairbreadth escapes, the dramatic situations that punctuate this amazing picture with thrills, suspense and intense action. Of Michael's subsequent capture by Ogareff, renegade Russian colonel, at the head of the Tartar troops, his torture, escape over the mountains—carrying Nadia, his sweetheart, though he is blinded by the torture—of his arrival at the grand duke's headquarters, his fight with Ogareff and his consequent saving of the life of the grand duke. These brilliant and swiftly moving scenes must be seen to be appreciated. No synopsis of "Michael Strogoff," however, would be complete without mention of the magnificence of the production, its huge scale, and the color photography that adds realism to some of the most stirring scenes, showing the rough-riding Cossacks and Tartars—all in a blaze of Oriental color and richness of setting that serves as a magic carpet to transport the spectator to the realm of Jules Verne's marvelous imagination.

On the stage the presentation will feature the Stafford Pemberton Dancers in an atmospheric prologue to the picture, entitled "Bacchanalle," and Stephan Kovekavich, famous barytone.

"PARADISE" IS FEATURE AT METRO

The program to be inaugurated at Crandall's Metropolitan theater this afternoon at 3 o'clock promises a wealth of distinguished entertainment. The principal screen feature will be First National's production of "Paradise," in which the stellar role is played by Milton Sills with Betty Bronson opposite. On the stage will appear the three Giersdorf sisters, announced as "The Aristocrats of Melody." Among the supplementary attractions for the week will be a revival of one of Harold Lloyd's most amusing two-reel comedies bearing the title of "I Do." A new issue of the Metropolitan World Survey also will be shown and the bill will be further augmented by orchestral contributions by the Metropolitan Symphony, conducted by Daniel Breeskin, and on week days by the Metropolitan Ramblers, under the leadership of Milton Davis.

"Paradise" visualizes a story of adventure in London and the South seas. It abounds in action of the most engrossing sort and has as its central character a young British nobleman who led so frivolous and so extravagant a life that he was disinherited by an irate father who finally relented to the extent of bequeathing his son a small island in the South seas where a new start in life might be made. A strong vein of love interest runs through the fast-moving narrative and supplies the basis of conflict which develops one of the most thrilling climaxes any action drama ever has presented. Milton Sills, Betty Bronson, Lloyd Whitlock and Noah Beery are the chief participants in the most important developments of the story, and a strong comedy note is skillfully struck by Charles Murray and Kate Price.

The three Giersdorf sisters, Irene, Elvira and Rae, are singers and instrumentalists of the first rank, who make a decidedly attractive stage appearance. Rae Giersdorf also is an accomplished dancer. The combination of attributes which this trio possesses places the stamp of brilliant versatility upon their offering.

BIG PARADE RETURNS TO THE AVENUE

At Poli's for one week opening tonight, "The Big Parade" returns for a second visit. There will be daily matinees. It was on this same stage that "The Big Parade" had one of its first presentations. Since that time the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production has created much motion picture history. At the present time, after more than a year, twice a day there are long lines at the box office of the Astor theater in New York, waiting to purchase seats. In London, at the Tivoli, in Melbourne and Sydney in Australia and through Canada, "The Big Parade" has proved its international character by achieving great success.

There is more than the usual interest here in "The Big Parade," because it was written by Laurence Stallings, who had his beginning as a newspaper man in this city. It was here that he enlisted in the marines to go over and get the background which enabled him to write the honest and thrilling stories of the men who were with him which have gripped the country. This first came to the fore in "What Price Glory." Then "The Big Parade" set the entire country talking and Mr. Stallings, almost overnight, was noted as a master historian of the war period. For it is the true history of army experiences that Stallings has put into these stage conceptions.

In making "The Big Parade," Stallings was fortunate in having sympathetic and intelligent cooperation. King Vidor, the director, John Gilbert, the star, Renee Adoree, Karl Dane, Tom O'Brien, and each of the other players contributed to the success of the story. Note should be made of the fact that the stay of "The Big Parade" at Poli's is limited to one week and that this will be the last time the picture will be seen here with the traveling symphony orchestra and the production arranged for its showing in the large cities of the country.

RICHARD DIX IS FEATURED AT COLUMBIA

Richard Dix, whose engaging personality has brought him to a high popularity with screen enthusiasts, brings his latest starring production, "The Quarterback," to Loew's Columbia this afternoon, where it will constitute the featured attraction of the current week's program.

"The Quarterback" is said to constitute not only the greatest Richard Dix starring production to date, but it is said to offer, additionally, the greatest series of gridiron scenes ever projected, all of which were technically supervised by "Hurry Up" Yost, the internationally famous coach and football authority.

Esther Ralston appears opposite the star again in "The Quarterback," which is based on a story by William Slavens McNutt and William O. McGeehan, and directed by Fred Newmeyer.

Dix plays the part of Jack Stone, the son of an enthusiastic football hero on the Colton college team who has vowed to his new bride, 'way back in '99, that he would never quit the college until the State university eleven has been beaten.

In the meantime, his wife had died and his son Jack had grown to manhood and entered Colton as his father's hope of release from his vow of years before. During a hazing stunt, young Jack is blindfolded and told to kiss the first girl he meets, who happens to be Louise Mason, the prettiest co-ed at the State university. Out of this chance meeting buds a romance and a series of happenings which imperil young Jack Stone's amateur standing and which appear traceable to the treachery of the State university girl on the very eve of the State-Colton game, but in the end the girl proves not only her innocence of guile but demonstrates her real affection for the young Colton star, who goes out and wipes up the opposition in grand style and by bringing the victory to Colton releases his college-weary father of his self-imposed obligation 27 years before.

A group of added attractions will supplement first Washington presentations of Richard Dix in "The Quarterback," including the Pathe news reel pictures, Topics of the Day and a splendid symphonic overture and atmospheric score by the Columbia Symphony orchestra, Leon Brusilof conductor.

GILDA GRAY FILM FEATURE AT PALACE

A stage and screen presentation program is announced for showing at Loew's Palace for the week starting this afternoon when Gilda Gray's sensational Paramount starring production, "Aloma of the South Seas," supplemented by two musical stage offerings will be shown.

These two stage features will be an atmospheric prologue entitled "Hawaiian Nights," in which the atmosphere of the principal stage attraction will be marvelously embellished by a group of alluring South Sea island girls with Betty Marvin, while the second stage attraction will be Joe Thomas' Sax-o-tette, a quintet of America's finest saxophone and trumpet artists, with Betty Hale, danseuse.

In the atmospheric prologue, "Hawaiian Nights," Betty Marvin is promised in a series of tropic dances to the music of the South Sea island beauties who will strum Hawaiian melodies while Joe Thomas' Sax-o-tette, one of the greatest attractions now touring the Loew circuit, will blend harmony with comedy effects in the inimitable manner that has made this attraction one of the most sought after in vaudeville.

Gilda Gray, far-famed empress of the dance, who is recognized as the foremost exponent of tropic dance movements, offers a superb photoplay attraction in "Aloma of the South Seas," the Paramount picturization by Maurice Tourneur of the play by John B. Hymer and LeRoy Clemons, which is described as a warm, colorful love drama of the tropics, packed with gay dances, high-powered romance, thrills and South Sea atmosphere.

Miss Gray is supported in this great production by a cast that includes Percy Marmont in the role of Bob Holden, a young American sojourning in the South seas; Warner Baxter, in a native role as Aloma's South sea sweetheart; Julanne Johnston, the princess of "The Thief of Bagdad," who plays the part of Marmont's American sweetheart; William Powell in another of his superb villainous characterizations; Harry Morey, Joseph Smiley, Frank Montgomery, Mme. Burani, Ernestine Gaines and Aurelio Coccia.

Intense interest naturally centers about the role of Aloma, enacted by Gilda Gray, which affords that star a brilliant opportunity for the display of native dances in her own inimitable manner. Percy Marmont is said to splendidly enact the part of Bob Holden, the man whom Aloma loved, while Julanne Johnston's portrayal of Bob's American sweetheart is on a par with her remarkable work in "The Thief of Bagdad."

The featured attractions will be supplemented by a striking group of added numbers, including Dick Leibert's Organologues, Loew's Palace Magazine, Palace Concert orchestra, Tom Gannon, conductor, and other outstanding features.

Mme. Cobina Wright.

Mme. Cobina Wright, soprano, will appear here in December. She is a singer who became a society woman. At the outbreak of the war, she went to France and gave her services in the entertainment of the soldiers of her country. On her return to this country she appeared in concert. Mme. Wright's most valuable assets are her taste and her nice discrimination in the treatment of the delicate music of the Frenchmen.

ALICE LAKE IN PERSON AT THE EARLE

Alice Lake, brilliant young star of motion pictures, will appear at the Earle theater in person this week as headline artist of an exceptionally interesting bill of vaudeville and photoplay features. Miss Lake, supported by Paul Decker, will be seen in an amusing and intensely human playlet bearing the title of "Liars All." Although Miss Lake has been seen many times on the screen of Washington, this week's engagement at the Earle marks her first stage appearance in the National Capital.

The extra added attraction of the bill will be supplied by Willie Higgie and his Six Magnetic Misses, among whom Eleanor Waterman, formerly a resident of this city, is conspicuous by virtue of her rare ability as a dancer. Mr. Higgie, long recognized as one of vaudeville's foremost dancers, assisted by his sextet of girls, will offer a dance revue which has been elaborately staged and which affords an interval of delightful entertainment. Others of note on this week's bill include Ryan and Lee, in "One and Won is To," a surefire laugh-provoker; Jack La Vier, who announces that his turn is "All in The Spirit of Jest;" and Three Good Knights, a trio of musicians, who offer what they are pleased to term "Barnyard Follies." These young men first play orthodox instruments in a fairly orthodox manner, and then employ the most unusual articles as sources of melody. Among these freak instruments may be mentioned saws, washboards and spoons.

The photoplay feature for the week will be First National's production of "The Far Cry," adapted from Arthur Richmond's stage play of the same name, in which the principal roles are interpreted by Blanche Sweet, Jack Mulhall, Myrtle Stedman and Hobart Bosworth. There is much action and many thrilling climaxes are developed during the progress of this story.

Famous Gridiron Star.

Howard Jones, brother of the famous "Tad" Jones, Yale football coach, is one of the twenty-five well known university football stars who participates in the exciting gridiron battle, one of the big features of the Tiffany production, "College Days," by A. P. Younger, who adapted "Brown of Harvard" for the screen now playing at the Strand theater.

Jones was formerly coach for Iowa and for three years held the Big Ten championship for the Central States. At the present time he is coach of the football team of the University of Southern California, a position he had held for the past two years and who is responsible for the brilliant success of the university's football squad and their intercollegiate games during the period.

COLLEGE FILM AT STRAND THIS WEEK

Beginning today and continuing all week, "College Days," a Tiffany production, will be the feature screen offering at the Strand theater. "College Days" is a picture of thrills, youth, romance, love and adventure, and presents in an entracing way the story of college life. A. P. Younger, author of the screen version of "Brown of Harvard," is responsible for the story and continunity of "College Days." Twenty-five university football stars are among the cast, which includes Marceline Day, Charles Delaney, James Harrison, Duane Thompson and others.

On the stage the offerings are equally attractive, with a vaudeville bill of five Lowe acts headed by the inimitable Roland Travers, an illusionist extraordinary. Among the other numbers on the vaudeville program are Tilyou and Rogers in a thrilling and entertaining character and acrobatic dance number entitled "Dancing Granddaddies;" Alice Thorton and Gil Squires in an uproariously funny comedy skit entitled "In the Swim;" Kaufman and Lillian, who will tickle your funny bone with their "Fun, Faces and Foolishness;" and Casting Campbell's, who will appear as "America's Premier Comedy and Sensational Casting Act."

"BEAUTIES" AT MUTUAL

Whenever the "Bathing Beauties" are announced the faithful burlesque fans make a pilgrimage to the shrine of feminine pulchritude and there feast upon the graceful forms, catchy melodies and attractive costumes on exhibition. This year, and this week, too, commencing today with a matinee at 3 the local Mutual theater will have this group of burlesquers.

The cast is headed by the funmaking Jack Hunt, who has a big reputation hereabouts as a comedian while he will be supported by such artists as the charming Ethel Bailey.

The balance of the cast includes Jack Sacks, Lew Petel, Phil Howard, Bessie Brooks and Anna Trottman, with the sixteen bathing beauties playing a conspicuous part in the entertainment offered.

OPERA SEASON HERE ASSURED

Washington is assured of another brilliant grand opera season by the Chicago Civic Opera Co. next February, according to an announcement made yesterday by Mrs. Wilson-Greene, under whose local management the Chicago Civic Opera Co. will appear here on Wednesday evening and Thursday matinee, February 16 and 17, respectively.

Poli's theater, the largest auditorium of its type in Washington, has been selected this year as the scene of the Chicago company's triumphs.

"The Masked Ball" and "The Resurrection" are the two operas to be given in Washington this season; with Rosa Raisa, Charles Marshall, Richard Bonelli and Cyrena Van Gordon appearing in the cast of "The Masked Ball" at the opening performance on Wednesday evening, February 16, at 8 o'clock, and with Mary Garden and Fernand Ansseau, the latter the famous French tenor, appearing in "The Resurrection" on Thursday afternoon, February 17, at 2 o'clock.

Giorgio Polacco, musical director of the Chicago Civic Opera Co., will conduct at least one of the performances to be given in Washington, it is announced, while the symphony orchestra of 65 members and the Chicago company's famous corps du ballet will be in evidence.

Prominent Washingtonians have again assured Washington its annual visit of the Chicago Civic Opera Co. by underwriting the two local performances next February, and Mrs. Wilson-Greene announces that many of the boxes have already been reserved by prominent Washington society women.

Washington Girl Appears at Earle

At the Earle theater this week a native Washingtonian is appearing with Will Higgie in his elaborately staged dance revue. This charming young artiste is Eleanor Waterman, who comprises one-sixth of the gifted sextet which Mr. Higgie announces as his "six magnetic misses." A large number of Miss Waterman's former associates in this city have already signified their intention of giving this versatile dancer a rousing welcome back to her home town.

Coming Theater Attractions

"The Constant Wife" in which Ethel Barrymore will be seen again under the Charles Frohman management in the National theater Monday evening, November 22, is the latest comedy from the pen of W. Somerset Maugham, whose recent success "The Circle" it resembles in treatment, though quite different in plot. Like "The Circle" and Mr. Maugham's earlier success, "Our Betters," it is sophisticated high comedy, not without a serious undercurrent. Its crisp and epigrammatic dialogue trenchantly discloses the inward reality of the characters, while at the same time exposing their human foibles to subtle irony.

In presenting Ethel Barrymore anew under the Frohman banner, a play has been selected which affords her an opportunity to display that alluring combination of charm and tenderness which is so characteristically and uniquely hers. As Constance, "The Constant Wife," who finds herself involved in an ironic situation after fifteen years of comfortable married life, Miss Barrymore has a role of the type in which her art is supreme.

In the supporting cast of "The Constant Wife" are such well known players as Mabel Terry-Lewis, Cora Witherspoon, Veree Teasdale, Jeanette Sherwin, C. Aubrey Smith, Frank Conroy and Walter Kingsford.

"Blossom Time," the tender, haunting and enchanting musical offering which the Messrs. Lee and J. J. Shubert will again offer as the Thanksgiving attraction at Poli's, opening Monday evening, November 22, with two popular-priced matinees on Thanksgiving day and Saturday, is now in its sixth year and they positively announce that this will be the final and farewell tour of this, the most talked of operetta of the decade. Here is a musical play which each time it comes to this city seems to delight its audience more and more, it has an appeal both to the regular theatergoer as well as the music lover. Filled as it is with the wonderful songs and melodies of that great composer, Franz Schubert, and with the sweet story of his only love incident in his career, it comes year after year and, like old wine, it improves with age. Sigmund Romberg, who adapted the music of Franz Schubert, was in his happiest mood, and the lovely strains of the "Unfinished Symphony," the "Serenade," "Ave Maria" and the "Song of Love" linger in the memory of the music lovers of this city long after "Blossom Time" has departed. The Messrs. Shubert will again present an excellent singing and acting cast, with a special symphony orchestra and an entire new production. Mail orders are now being received and the seat sale will open on Wednesday morning, November 17.

Mary and Florence Nash, whose combined artistry stirred New York to its depth last season, in Rachel Crothers' splendid and convincing comedy, "A Lady's Virtue," under the direction of the Messrs. Shubert, will bring their play to this city on November 22 for an engagement of one week at the Belasco theater.

"A Lady's Virtue" is a story of married life and Miss Crothers has subjected this popular institution to a clinical treatment in three acts, wherein the husband and wife go their separate ways only to run head first into the age-old question of right and wrong.

Two women come into conflict, one an opera singer of note, a woman filled with the passion of romance and the other an humble little woman of small town training, whose frequent visits to the studios and playgrounds of the metropolis, have blunted her sensibilities and filled her silly little brain with romantic notions of woman's equality with man, and it is the struggle of these two women of opposite natures and divergent views to hold the love of the same man, who is the husband of one and the potential lover of the other, that gives life to the play. The climax puts its seal upon the holding power of the home and the marriage tie.

Miss Crothers has put into none of her other plays so much of good observation and veracious translation of life as she exhibits in "A Lady's Virtue." It has been referred to as her greatest contribution to the American stage and theatergoers of this city will await its coming with interest.

It is enough to say that Beverly Bayne and company will headline the bill at B. F. Keith's theater for the week of November 21. Miss Bayne will be seen in a new comedy playlet, entitled "From Eight to Twelve." It is from the pen of Edwin Burke.

Commencing next Sunday, Novembe 21, the Strand theater will present as its feature film attraction "Sparrows," in which Mary Pickford is the entertaining star. In this, Mary's latest picture, there are many moments for laughter, but above all, the most thrilling and hair-raising climax ever screened. "Sparrows" is a dramatic accomplishment, brimful with human interest, and tense with suspense.

The stage offering for the coming week will be nothing less than a huge musical revue especially booked by Manager Sparrow for Thanksgiving week. "Bits and Hits of 1926," a Victor Hyde presentation, will be the offering, with a cast of 22 capable artists headed by Irving B. Hamp. Among the others appearing in this big musical production are Beatrice Jamieson and Earl Root, Lew Lewis, Justine Grey, Leo Stevens, Rush and Butler, and Victor Hyde's dancing chorus.

Short film features and orchestral numbers under the direction of Arthur J. Manvell will complete the program.

"Kosher Kitty Kelly," the famous New York success might be called a musical comedy, but for the reason it has eight musical numbers in it, Leon De Costa, its author, called it a comedy with songs. At any rate the New York critics called it the "little sister to Abie's Irish Rose," which should settle its worth. It deals with the loves of the young Irish and Jewish girls and lads who live in a Hester street tenement. "Kosher Kitty Kelly" comes to the Gayety theater next week, beginning with Sunday matinee.

Harry Langdon's second feature length comedy for First National is announced as the principal screen feature of next week's bill at Crandall's Metropolitan theater, beginning next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. This subject is said to be one of the most amusing feature comedies ever brought to the screen and to reveal Harry Langdon as the peer of silent drama's greatest funmakers. The companion attraction to occupy the Metropolitan stage next week will be Waring's Pennsylvanians, Washington's favorite syncopated orchestra with a personnel of eighteen collegiates, under the conductorship of Fred Waring, with his brother Tom presiding at the piano. The bill will be completed by the customary short reel features and additional musical contribution by the Metropolitan symphony, Daniel Breeskin conducting, and the Metropolitan Ramblers, under the leadership of Milton Davis.

Corinne Griffith will be the pictured star at Crandall's Tivoli theater the first two days of next week, in First National's production of "Syncopating Sue," in which the "orchid of the screen" visualizes the romantic experiences of a song-plugger in Tin Pan alley. On Tuesday and Wednesday of next week the Tivoli will present Rex Ingram's stellar production of "Mare Nostrum," written by Vicente Blasco Ibanez. On Thursday and Friday, Hal Roach will offer Rex, the screen's foremost equine actor, in "The Devil Horse," which will be succeeded on Saturday only by W. C. Fields, in Paramount's production of "So's Your Old Man."

Harry Langdon will be seen for the first time in Washington in the title role of "The Strong Man" at Crandall's Ambassador theater for the first three days of next week, beginning Sunday afternoon at 3. This is said to be one of the most amusing feature-length comedies ever filmed. It will be supplemented by a varied list of short-reel subjects and excellent pipe organ music. On Wednesday of next week Raymond Griffith will be the pictured star in Paramount's production of "You'd Be Surprised," which will be followed on Thursday by Buster Keaton in Metro-Goldwyn's film version of the stage success, "Battling Butler." "Mare Nostrum," Vicente Blasco Ibanez's story picturized by Rex Ingram, is announced as Friday's attraction, while on Saturday of next week the Ambassador will present Rex, Hal Roach's horse actor, in "The Devil Horse," which will be supplemented by short reels, including the ninth installment of the mystery chapter play, "Snowed In."

A new Orpheum Unit Show will provide the major portion of the vaudeville entertainment at the Earle Theater next week beginning Sunday afternoon, November 21, at 3 o'clock. This stage entertainment is composed of clever turns offered by Wills and Homes, the original back-yard entertainers; Billy Gilbert in a novel conceit entitled, "Kerchoo"; Dot Baker, quick change artist, in a protean revue; Joseph K. Watson, famous comedian of vaudeville and burlesque, who offers a monologue entitled "A Disarrangement of Facts," and Roy Weber in a spectacular offering, "Easy Sailing." The feature photoplay for next week at the Earle will be Producers' release of "For Alimony Only," in which Leatrice Joy is the pictured star. The short reel comedy will be supplied by Cliff Bowes in "He Done His Best," and the bill will be completed by the customary house features, including orchestral overture and pipe organ accompaniments of the screen features.

The following feature bookings are scheduled for presentation at Crandall's Central theater the week of November 21, beginning next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock: Sunday and Monday, star cast in "Flame of the Yukon;" Tuesday and Wednesday, Bebe Daniels in Paramount's production of "The Campus Flirt;" Thursday and Friday, Elaine Hammerstein in "Ladies of Leisure," which will be followed on Saturday only by Rex, the equine star, in Hal Roach's production of "The Devil Horse." Each daily program will be completed by abbreviated film features and pipe organ accompaniments and solo intervals.

Footlights and Shadows

By JOHN J. DALY

JAMES K. HACKETT, last of matinee idols. Not one remains. In olden days the stage was cluttered with them. They were to the theater what food is to babies. Now they have disappeared, nothing to take their places.

Like everything else, the theater is ever changing. Even the First Night is not what it used to be. The premiere, nowadays, amounts to little or nothing; a try-out, more or less. Once it was the big moment in the theater.

The matinee idol and the First Night, with capital letters, have passed into the discard.

THERE is always a beginning and end of everything—except Eternity. Charles Montague started the matinee idol on his way. That was back in the days of the old Madison Square theater, long before 1872, when he scored in "The Black Thorn." Ladies flocked to the performances, and at matinees mere man faded into oblivion—all save Charles Montague.

Dead in Paris, James K. Hackett recalls for old-line theatergoers the glories of matinee idols. Wallie Decker, who has been in and around the theater since long before the Spanish war, came trouping into the office with advance copy for "Blossom Time," the perennial favorite at Mr. Leo Leavitt's Pennsylvania avenue playhouse. An old stager himself, Mr. Leavitt and Wallie Decker set upon the virtues of the matinee idol. In the opinion of these fellows, "Thim were the days."

Stage presence was the stock in trade of the matinee idol. He was, in the language of the far West, "a he-man." At least, he looked the part. Cake-eaters and drugstore cowboys had not come upon the scene. The Valentino haircut was unknown, the "sissy type" out of the picture. Women, not far removed from days when the Western frontier was rather near the East, were not given to surrender for sheiks and college students. Works of Bret Hart were still being read, and night clubs an unknown quantity. Out of this period was born the matinee idol.

HACKETT and his fellows were magnificent figures. There was about them no semblance of femininity. If their parts called for heroes they filled the bill. They were what the doctor ordered. Eye-filling, these old masters packed theaters at almost every performance; but especially at matinees.

Now it happens that the theater is without an institution. Close on the heels of Charles Montague came Charlie Thorne. He, too, a matinee idol, playing the part for all it was worth. In turn came such successes as William Redmond and John Mason, of the Boston Museum Stock company, Henry Miller, and John Drew—still with us—matinee idols all.

Since this was merely a passing phase of the theater—albeit a somewhat lasting one—the matinee idol, gone with Hackett, will undoubtedly never return. M. Leo Leavitt and his confrere, Mr. Decker, are of the opinion that the theater is the loser; that the glories of the past might well be revived, if possible, and that there should be a return to normalcy—at least in this respect.

IN a day when attention is being diverted from the theater, at almost every angle, it would be difficult to establish the vogue of a matinee idol—even if an idol might be secured. This is certainly the age of the iconoclast.

The country, as it stands today, is nearing the peak of publicity perfection. News travels fast. A hero, born in the morning, is dead at nightfall. What makes men, breaks them. The public becomes surfeited, satiated, even before its appetite is whetted. Not so, years ago. Then, by the time a man worked up his reputation he had done something to sustain it. Now, reputation starts and work finishes. Matinee idols in the making are killed off by the pabulum that feeds them greatness. Told they are wonderful before they are, they believe they are what they are not. So fall the mighty.

For every star, pseudo or otherwise, there is a press agent; his duty to tell the public how great the star. Unfortunately, the star begins to believe the fairy stories—and so falls.

* * * *

WOMEN made matinee idols. Publicity, too, had a hand; but mostly it was womanhood. In this or that personage the good ladies saw their ideal, the lover of their dreams; for these swashbuckling Romeos were mighty makers of love, beautiful of voice and carriage, and handsome to behold.

Take James K. Hackett when he played the heroes of Anthony Hope in "The Prisoner of Zenda" and "Rupert of Hentzau." As Rudolph Rassendyl there was never a more romantic figure. He cut a caper, did James K.—and many a maidenly heart fluttered when he made his entrances.

At the stage door, before and after performances, the ladies were in waiting. They wanted to see in the living, every-day person, this dream man of theirs. So, too, all their matinee idols. What stage door Johnnies are to Broadway chorines, ladies of the late eighties and early nineties were to matinee idols. They flung themselves at the feet of their heroes.

MANY a good husband, of course, is glad these notions have gone by the boards; that there is no more of this foolishness. Play producers and managers, however, would give their good right eyes for a return to fashion. The matinee idol meant money.

In a way, the sheik came to take the place of the matinee idol; but the sheik didn't last long because, forsooth, there was nothing to this silly creature. He was flesh and blood, and all that; but no man—at least not a he-man. What women want, more than anything else, is something to worship—so say psychologists. In the last analysis, though, there must be something to command their respect—and a sheik can not always do this; or, for long. So the sheik goes the way of the world—and the stage is now clear of his shadow.

MATINEE idols there were by the score, as almost any old timer will tell you. There was, for instance, William Courtney, and Henry E. Dixie, in "Adonis," and—to get out of the straight dramatic field—Donald Brian, when "The Merry Widow" took the world by storm. In this same field were William Scanlon, and J. K. Emmett, and Chauncey Olcott. Even Richard Mansfield, always to be remembered best as a Shakespearian actor, once thrilled the lovers of romance and came to be a matinee idol.

Nor were men only in this role. Women of the stage held the calcium lights in their day. Maude Adams came first and foremost, with Lillian Russell second. They had the same appeal for their own sex as for men; and at matinees it was no common occurrence to see houses packed when either of these women held the boards.

Out of the memory book of time, Leo Leavitt and Wallie Decker recall the glorious days when George Cowyan and Annie Clarke, of the old Boston Museum Stock company, held sway in the theater; when Marion Manola, who was John Mason's wife, packed 'em in at each performance; when Marie Jansen and Pauline Hall, and Fannie Rice, and others of that day, stood the boys on their heads—and girls, too!

Certainly, they were the good old days—the days of the matinee idol. They will perhaps never come again; for the world is working away from the glamour and glare of the footlights and staring instead at the spotlight that throws its ghastly ray upon the notorious and the sensational—the front page puppets of penny tabloids.

Visits Brother.

Hurricane Handy.

Those tropical hurricanes sometimes come in handy, after all. For instance, Maurice Tourneur and his company who went to Porto Rico for scenes for "Aloma of the South Seas," which comes to Loew's Palace this afternoon as the principal photoplay feature of the program, went there in the hope of filming a tropical storm for his picture but not at all sure that he'd get it. Tourneur had hardly set up his apparatus before a ripsnorter of a West Indian storm comes along and gave him a wonderful scene for his film.

WILLEM MENGELBERG, conductor New York Philharmonic orchestra, at the National next Tuesday.

L. STALLINGS HELD DOWN LOCAL DESK

The career of Laurence Stallings, author of the story of "The Big Parade," which comes to Poli's on Sunday, has been closely associated with Washington newspapers. Stallings was born in Macon, Ga., thirty-six years ago, graduated at Wake Forest college, North Carolina, and was put to work on the Atlanta Journal by Maj. John Cohen. Running the wake of reportorial jobs on the Journal, Stallings learned his craft and at length left the Southern city to accept a job on a Washington newspaper. Here he remained until the war called, and then enlisted in the marine corps, as a buck private. Serving his preliminary training at Parris Island, Stalling was elected for the officers' training school and eventually received his commission as second lieutenant. Assigned to the Fifth regiment of marines he went to France with them in 1917 and fought through most of the major engagements with the Second division. Before armistice he was severely wounded at Belleau Woods. Meanwhile he had been advanced to captain.

Months followed in hospitals in France, and there he had time for thought and those thoughts brought to the world the classics of the war "What Price Glory" and "The Big Parade." Capt. Stallings had his first sight of his homeland from a stretcher on Christmas eve in 1918. He was many months in rehabilitation hospitals. As soon as he was able to get about Stallings went and found himself a newspaper job. But it was too much and soon he was sent to the Walter Reed hospital, where his leg was amputated. In March, 1919, after a long period at Walter Reed hospital he was married to Miss Helen Poteat, daughter of Dr. W. L. Poteat, president of Wake Forest college.

Herbert Bayard Swope, of the New York World, gave Stallings a desk job and his column of book reviews soon attracted attention. Then came "What Price Glory" and later his book "Plumes" all of his experiences in the war. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer then engaged him to write scenarios and, founding it on a short story he had done, Stallings gave them as his first effort "The Big Parade." It has made him internationally famous and placed him beyond want for the rest of his years.

Joint Recital.

Roland Hayes, well-known tenor, and Mme. Lillian Evanti, Washington's colored prima donna soprano, occupy a place in the front rank of the musical artists of this country. They will give a joint recital in the Belasco theater next Sunday evening, November 21, and will no doubt draw a large audience in welcome and appreciation.

"NEW YORK TO PARIS"

"New York to Paris" will hold the boards of the Gayety theater this week.

Gene Shuler, whose eccentric Dutch character comedy has endeared him to burlesque patrons, and Evyleen Ramsay, who has often been called "the American Dauphene Pollard," are at the head of an excellent cast. The roster also includes Artie Brooks, an eccentric boob comic who sings, dances and entertains lavishly in other ways; Myles Bell, a fine looking chap who has been for many seasons a juvenile with dramatic and musical companies, and who is considered one of the smartest dressers; Andy Patricia, Belle and Sally McCann, a father and his three daughters, a remarkable quartet of Irish entertainers, who sing, dance and play various instruments. Jules Diamond and Dave Wallman, two fine looking chaps, who are acrobatic, centric and comedy steps; Marie Miller, classic dancer; Olive De Clair a statuesque prima donna with a rich voice, and Mary Jane Berkley, a "blues" singer of classy style.

Football Strenuous.

Football is grand sport, says Richard Dix—in November. But when one has to play football for the camera and rehearse and repeat under the expert eye of "Hurry Up" Yost, all in heavy football armor with the thermometer flirting with the nineties in mid-August, that's another story. That is what Dix and his playmates had to do in filming "The Quarterback" for the early November trade at Loew's Columbia, Washington, and elsewhere.

Echoes of the New York Stage

By ROBERT BELL

Once in a while, only, is a splendid idea actually put into execution. It is so easy to make plans, to put wings to one's imagination, to shout "art" from the housetops, even to get to the place where thousands of dollars look too few and neat little bulletins sent out. Then comes the work, with all its actuality; "art" is no longer an abstract attractive phrase invented to play with and eulogize over, but a stern taskmaster making exorbitant demands. The shouting from the housetops must cease and the praise or blame left to other less enthusiasm-inspired lips; the thousands of dollars look too few now and don't seem to get spent quite as they were intended; the bulletins, written in the heat of inspiration, have promised so much more than what fate permits the results to be. So in time the venture fails and the inspired ones are forced to light new torches!

Again and again has this been the story—true intention bowing its head at last, the easiest course followed, and failure finally setting in. So when Miss Eva Le Gallienne proved that she could succeed in keeping the promises of her swift-flying imagination it is no wonder the trumpets of praise blew loud. This is what but a little year ago this 28-year-old girl promised to New York theatergoers. She would take over an old theater, she said, and would produce in it on alternate nights a repertory of classic drama, both ancient and modern. She would gather around her a company capable of presenting adequately the plays of Goldoni, Shakespeare, Sierra, Benavente, Tchekov and Ibsen. Furthermore—and this is the most amazing statement of all—the top price for no performance in her theater would exceed $1.65, and always there would be many seats for only 50 cents. This at a time, mind you, when producers on occasion think nothing of asking (and receiving) $10 a seat.

This idea of hers, splendid as it is, is not a very novel one. Near every theater-dreamer has had it in his mind at one time or another. But no one, not even the Theater Guild, energetic as that organization is, has ever put it into execution. But it is now accomplished; and the actuality is as splendid as the idea.

She gave her organization the somewhat high-sounding title of "Civic Repertory Theater" and engaged for its home the very oldest playhouse in New York. The Fourteenth Street theater at one time had known glory; on its stage had acted Charles Fechter, Edwin Forrest, Adelaide Neilson, Edwin Booth, Kate Claxton, John Drew, Chauncey Olcott. Little Minnie Maddern, later to become, as all the world knows, our beloved Mrs. Fiske, spoke her first lines there to any New York audience. But the time of its glory was long ago and when the theater district moved up Broadway this old playhouse was left like a single tooth, alone and crumbling. Into this creaking building swept Le Gallienne—doing very little to it, for she had more important things to spend her money on. Renovations could well be left for another day when wealth and success were hers; now it was what went on behind the old curtain that really mattered.

On the night of October 25 a large crowd gathered in this old building to witness the initial production of this high-sounding "Civic Repertory Theater." Benavente's "Saturday Night" was the play. The play itself is one of "theater," has some thrilling moments, is a bit obscure to the American mind, and, in its translation, anyway, badly lacks humor. It needs to be played with vigor and with much stress on its theatrical elements. This vigor and stress Le Gallienne and her company did not bring to it. Many of the players were good, the direction capable, but the ensemble lacked centralization to the extent that oftentimes the story was lost owing to the lack of emphasis and molding. Le Gallienne moved through the five episodes, stately figure, always beautiful and ever lovely, but a little cold, which in itself was well enough and in character, but the other players for the most part took their cue from her.

Three or four capital individual performances were given. Beatrice Terry, Alan Birmingham and Leona Roberts were among them. Washingtonians will remember Leona Roberts from the erstwhile "Ram's Head Players." She has never done anything finer than she is now doing in New York—her scene was the one really thrilling scene in "Saturday Night."

At the fall of the final curtain something nice happened. The audience, which I feel had been a trifle bored by the slow movement of the play, gave Miss Le Gallienne an ovation. They stood by her, you see, realizing that her dreams were coming true.

The very next night they came true, for the very next night, after opening in one play, this dauntless regisseur presented another—even Tchekov's "The Three Sisters." How dare she, said some, follow so closely in the steps of the Moscow Art theater production? Simply because Miss Le Gallienne's production is one of incomparable beauty, incomparable because, unlike the Russians', it is playing to Americans in a language we can understand. A bad play had better be witnessed in a foreign tongue, but a great play needs words that are comprehensible. I have not time to delve into the many wonders of either play or production. It is a forceful, somber piece which none the less is radiant with humor and sympathy. It is as depressing as life while at the same time it shows it is only our "attitude" which makes life seem depressing. An aura of light envelops it.

Very little happens throughout the four acts and yet it is as engrossingly interesting as any detective story. Partly because the entire company interpret it so gloriously, with all the nuances, all the little avenues of thought opened up to us.

At the end of this performance the audience cheered as never it had on the night before. Then they had stood cheering the splendid idea which they saw enfolding before them; this night it was the accomplishment they cheered—for all knew that the "Civic Repertory Theater" had come to pass and the promises fulfilled.

AMBASSADOR STARS SILLS

Milton Sills, supported by Betty Bronson, Lloyd Whitlock, Noah Beery, Charlie Murray, Kate Price, Claude King and a mammoth ensemble, will be seen for the first time in Washington in the stellar role of First National's production of Cosmo Hamilton's story of "Paradise" at Crandall's Ambassador theater, the frist three days of this week, beginning this afternoon at 3 o'clock. The auxiliary attraction will be a revival of one of Hal Roach's most amusing productions for the stellar uses of Harold Lloyd. The bill will be further augumented by added short reels and pipe organ accompaniments and solo intervals by Mirabel J. Lindsay and Gertrude Kreiselman.

"Mismates" announced as the chief feature of the bill for Wednesday and Thursday, brings to the screen an engrossing story of mother love and sacrifice which abounds in action and dramatic surprises. The stellar role in this First National production is played by Doris Kenyon. The short reel comedy to be offered as chief subsidiary of the week's second bill will be contributed by Lloyd Hamilton in "Move Along."

On Friday Laura La Plante will be the Ambassador's pictured star in "Her Big Night," Mack Sennett's comedy "Wide Open Faces" will be the principal auxiliary feature with Ralph Graves starred.

On Saturday Reginald Denny will succeed to the stellar position on the Ambassador's program in "Take it From Me." It will be supplemented by Walter Hiers in "Hitchin Up," and a new issue of the Lyman H. Howe Hodge-Podge and the eighth installment of the mystery chapter play "Snowed In."

Resumes Lecture Course.

Miss Janet Richards will resume her annual lecture course on "Public Questions: Home and Foreign," at the New Masonic temple, Thirteenth street and New York avenue, tomorrow morning, November 15, at 10:50 o'clock.

In addition to the general review of recent world events of paramount interest, Miss Richards will speak especially of her observations and impressions of the League of Nations in action, during her two weeks' stay in Geneva in September. She will also give brief word pictures of the great "personages" at Geneva, most of whom it was her good fortune to meet. The talks are given every Monday morning during the winter.

SOLDIERS AID ON 'STROGOFF'

When M. Jean Sapene decided to produce Jules Verne's story, "Michael Strogoff," he determined that it should be the most spectacular production ever made in Europe. Those who have seen it claim he has splendidly succeeded.

Under the direction of Louis Nalpas every possible endeavor was made to reproduce with exact fidelity the scenes, the time and the costumes and manners of the period of the Jules Verne story. By transporting the entire production unit to Latvia, the new Russian republic in which costumes, customs, scenery and architecture have scarcely changed for the last 75 years, one of the objectives was most satisfactorily achieved. Riga and the smaller cities, towns and countrysides of Latvia presented exactly the Russian type of architecture and peasant types required.

The 6,000 Latvian troops which were loaned to M. Sapene carried out the characteristics of the Russian soldier before the war. It is doubtful if any other film producer could have secured the accommodations which Latvia gladly offered to M. Sapene, the owner of Le Matin, with the greatest circulation of any newspaper in the world, who is interested in numberless French financial and industrial enterprises and one of the powerful figures in Europe today.

Under his magic passport, railways were placed at the disposal of the "Michael Strogoff" production, the custom house duties were suspended for three months, the costumes, properties and persons of the company were free from tax. Postoffices, railway stations, cottages, steamboats and the intelligent army were also placed at the disposal of the "Michael Strogoff" company and Tourjansky, who directed the production.

Dayton Westminster Choir

Announcement is made of the return to this city of the Dayton Westminster choir to sing in the auditorium of the Central High school on Wednesday evening, December 1.

The first visit here of this choir is remembered as a beautiful example of "A-Capella" singing and the choir's purpose in touring in the interest of better music in the churches stimulated the efforts of all those directly interested in ensemble singing.

MABEL TERRY-LEWIS, with Ethel Barrymore, in "The Constant Wife," coming to the National the week of November 22.

THRUSHES INSPIRE A COMPOSER

Because he has one old-fashioned Victorian trait—a liking for poetry—John Philip Sousa, who this season makes his thirty-fourth annual tour with his famous band, giving two concerts in the auditorium the afternoon and night of Friday, November 19, will have a new number of his own composition for Miss Marjorie Moody, American soprano soloist, with the band. "The Thrush" is the name of the number, and two thrushes were the inspiration. One was the poem by Lucy Larcom, almost forgotten New England poetess, and the other was a very much alive 1926 model brown thrush, which sings outside the march king's window, at his home near Port Washington, Long island.

Working in May, 1926, at his home, Sousa, returning to his study after lunch, lighted a cigar and after his custom took up a volume of verse for a few minutes' relaxation before resuming his work. Quite by accident, he says, he turned to "The Thrush," which is not one of Miss Larcom's best known compositions, and almost as he did so, a brown thrush that is one of the regular boarders on the Sousa estate began to sing. A hunch is a hunch and an inspiration is an inspiration. At one sitting, Sousa completed a setting for the words of the poem.

Sousa's new composition has revived interest in the works of Miss Larcom. Born at Beverly Farms, Mass., in 1826, she worked as a girl in the cotton mills. She wrote for the Lowell Offering, a paper edited by a circle of mill girls, and gained the interest and friendship of Whittier. She was educated in one of the female seminaries of the time and for several years taught in one, but because of ill health she returned to literary work. Her best-known poem was "Hannah Binds Shoes." She died in 1893.

The Wild Nineties.

The flappers and sheiks of 1899—only they didn't call them by such names then—come to life again in Richard Dix's new football romance, "The Quarterback," at Loew's Columbia this afternoon, and what a thrill dad and mother ought to get out of this one. "Hurry Up" Yost directed the football scenes and the style of football played in those days resulted in a Saturday casualty list during the gridiron season that would shock and amaze the college professors of the present day. All this appears in a '99 prologue.

BETTY LEAVES "TYPE" CLASS

Another popular screen player has demonstrated her capacity for complete emancipation from the restrictions of being a purely "type" actress. Sometimes it is not so easy to escape the penalties of having made a successful debut as a purring little engenue, sans temperament and dramatic fire. Then again there are times when the transition is made so easily that it all seems a very simple matter. For example:

Betty Bronson grew up and went to "Paradise" last month. That is, the petite, piquant Peter Pan for the first time ventured away from the wistful, whimsical roles of phantasy and attempted a more matured, sophisticated part which called for her journeying to Paradise isle in the South Seas.

Film fans who have fallen in love with this screen darling's child-like characters have a treat in store for them when Milton Sills' new starring vehicle "Paradise" comes to Crandall's Metropolitan and Ambassador theaters this afternoon. They will find an entirely new Betty Bronson in the cast.

For Betty Bronson, cast as his leading lady, is quite a grown-up Betty and more entrancing than ever in the role of a London dancer, down on her luck, who falls in love with a ne'er-do-well earl.

It is certain that Miss Bronson will win new followers as a result of her sincere performance in this First National production, which was filmed by Ray Rockett from Cosmo Hamilton's famous novel.

The Cinderella of fairy tales becomes a Cinderella of the London streets, a more mature, more worldly wise and, we believe, an even more intriguing Cinderella of real life.

MOVIE GRAPHS

By HARRY HITES.

BEING a star looks easy to the audience that views her activities on the screen but, take it from Colleen Moore's press agent, there is more to starring than merely wearing good clothes and looking beautiful.

For instance the aforesaid P. A. announces that Colleen has had to learn to ride a bicycle, operate a switchboard, swim, ride horseback at all sorts of speeds, toe dance, perform a salesgirl's duties, operate a racing car and dozens of other athletic stunts that would stop the average girl cold.

It is presumed that other stars who have climbed the long trail to electric lights in front of the theaters have gone through similar trials. Therefore the path of the star does not seem to be all sunshine and roses.

Once in a blue moon a picture company gathers unto itself a horseshoe unknown. Pathe is the latest to profit by the antics of the blind goddess of chance who threw Gene Tunney into a world's championship shortly after he had finished making "The Fighting Marine," a serial for Pathe. Now the picture, in addition to being used as a serial, will be condensed and shown as a feature as well and it will bring both producer and star "beaucoup" jack as the champ's friends in the A. E. F. would describe it.

The Rialto is to try a new stunt. Following the successful American premier of "Michael Strogoff" last night, the management of the theater has decided to inaugurate a Saturday opening instead of waiting until Sunday, as formerly. The stage at the Rialto has been rebuilt, incidentally, and the management promises some surprises in the way of presentations.

Football, as a motion picture theme, is becoming popular. Red Grange started it. The latest devotee of the game (on the screen) is Richard Dix, appearing in "The Quarterback" at the Columbia this week.

Rox Rommell (not the Athletic pitcher) will make his debut at the Rialto today as conductor of the reorganized Rialto orchestra.

Scott Sidney, who is to direct "No Control" for Metropolitan Pictures, has forsaken the megaphone in lieu of a ring master's whip. The director is now training a large Nubian lion, which will be responsible for many of the laughs in this picturization of Frank Condon's story.

As one of a group whose scheming resulted in the crucifixion of Jesus, Sam DeGrasse has been entrusted with a particularly prominent role in Cecil B. DeMille's pictorial story of The Christ, "The King of Kings." DeGrasse has been cast for the role of Simeon, a Pharisee deep in the confidence of the High Priest Caiaphas.

At the last meeting of the Western Motion Picture Advertisers, better known as the Wampas, at the Writers' club, Alfred Santell, director of Colleen Moore's new First National starring picture, "Orchids and Ermine," and Billie Dove, featured player with First National, were among the guests of honor. Santell told briefly of his New York experiences and how happy he was to be back in Hollywood.

"Easy Pickings" will be the next vehicle in which Anna Q. Nilsson, First National featured player, will display her dramatic talent, according to announcement by John McCormick, general manager of West Coast production for First National pictures. Who else will appear in the cast has not as yet been decided upon.

Count Ilya Tolstoy has turned to the grease paint for the movies. The count will celebrate his sixty-first birthday this month. He will play the role of his father, Count Leo Tolstoy, in the forthcoming production of "Resurrection," which Inspiration Pictures, Inc., and Edwin Carewe will make for United Artists release.

The secret is out. James Cruze's next directorial assignment is to be "Louie the Fourteenth" with Wallace Beery as the star, according to B. P. Schulberg, Paramount's west coast executive.

Lloyd Hughes, First National featured player, received an unusual birthday present on October 21. Mrs. Hughes, formerly known to the screen as Gloria Hope, presented her husband with a son!

Upon completion of his work as a naval rookie in which he appeared with Raymond Hatton in "We're in the Navy Now," Wallace Beery, Paramount comedian left Hollywood for a hunting trip in New Mexico.

"The Beloved Rogue," John Barrymore's first starring picture for United Artists, is now well past the half-way mark in the production schedule, and if present plans are adhered to, should be ready for release to all first-run theaters by January 15, according to John W. Considine, jr., president of Feature Productions, Inc., producers of the picture.

The proverb, "To many cooks spoil the broth," was cast to the winds when it was recently announced from the Paramount west coast studio that twelve chefs and an entire squadron of assistants would be engaged for Raymond Griffith's newest starring vehicle, "The Waiter from the Ritz."

Charlie Murray plays a typical Irish contractor in "McFadden's Flats," the Asher, Small and Rogers production for First National. The featured comedian has a role that is entirely to his liking—one wherein his natural aptitude for fun making is given full sway. Larry Kent, recently signed by First National, and one of the younger players, is cast as the son of Chester Conklin and is in love with the daughter of the contractor, played by Edna Murphy. Conklin has a canny Scottish role.

TWO BETTYS AT PALACE

Two girls named Betty—Betty Hale and Betty Marvin—both dancers alluring and extraordinary, are prominently featured in the stage portion of the presentation program that is announced at Loew's Palace for the week starting this afternoon.

Betty Hale, danseuse, is one of the highlights of the musical offering thar Joe Thomas and his Saxtet will bring to the stage portion of the Palace bill this week. Betty's dancing is a vivid spot of color in the melodious offering these five kings of the saxophone will present today and all week, direct from spectacularly successful engagements at the Tivoli, Riviera, Senate and Pantheon theaters in Chicago; the Mark Strand in Brooklyn, Loew's State theaters in St. Louis and Minneapolis and at playhouses in Kansas City, St. Paul, Milwaukee and other large American cities.

The other featured Betty of the Palace bill this week—Betty Marvin—is the principal dancer in a group of South Sea island beauties who will offer Palace patrons one of the most fascinating atmospheric prologues ever shown in Washington, called "Hawaiian Night," with elaborate scenic and electrical effects as a background for their wonderful, tantalizing South Sea melodies.

PHILHARMONIC THIS WEEK

One of the big features of Washington's season, musically and socially, will be the opening concert of the series by the Philharmonic orchestra, Tuesday, 4:30, at the National theater with Willem Mengelberg, the famous conductor. Mr. Mengelberg's appearances here last season made him a host of friends, who are looking forward with pleasure to greet him.

The orchestra's broadcasting has done much to create and develop interest in music and Washington's quota of music followers has been greatly increased thereby.

The program Mr. Mengelberg has selected for the opening concert promises to offer an afternoon of delightful music.

The program in full is as follows: Weber, overture to "Euryanthe;" Casella, suite from the ballet, "La Giara" ("The Jar"), prelude, Sicilian dance, nocturne, dance of Nela, entrance of the peasants, Brindisi, general dance, finale; tenor solo, Charles Stratton, tenor. Intermission. Stravinsky, two suites for small orchestra, (1) Andante, Napolitana, Espancla, Ballalaika; (2) Marche, Valse, Polka, Galop. Strauss, "Don Quixote," fantastic variations on a theme of knightly character, Op. 35; solo, 'celo—Cornelius VanVliet; solo, viola, L. Barzin, jr.

Fashions of Capital Women

By VYLLA POE WILSON.

THE "seamy" side of United States history is really a bright one, for the ability of the women of the White House to "sew a fine seam" is a continuing tradition to the present first lady of the land.

All the chatelaines of the executive mansion have been adepts in some kind of needle or handiwork. Mrs. Coolidge always busies herself with knitting or embroidery while talking to friends informally, and other ladies of the White House have belonged to the cult which refuse to keep their hands in idleness at any time.

In the early days of the republic the women of the household spun and wove and fashioned the garments worn by husband, children and themselves. It was part of woman's work of the hour, and it was nobly achieved. The Daughters of the American Revolution, with a fine sense of the fitness of things, have chosen the spinning wheel as the symbol of American womanhood of the colonial period.

Mrs. George Washington at Mount Vernon made a famous suit of cloth for the general, spun from the wool clipped from sheep that fed on the green slopes of that home. For herself Mrs. Washington fashioned many garments, including a particularly fetching costume into which she cleverly wove a silken stripe made from the ravelings of a pair of silk stockings brought from London town in prerevolutionary days.

The genius of American women in regard to making their own clothes really has not weakened since that day. If the boudoir secrets of many well-dressed Washington matrons and maids could be told, it would be a surprising fact how many of them, especially the debutantes, do know how to and manufacture their own clothes.

Silver Frock Necessity.

This feat is largely the result of necessity, for in this age of ever-changing costumes and the requirements of social engagements unless one is possessed of wealth it would be impossible to keep up with the procession for many of the belles if they were not able to improvise new frocks and frills with their busy needles.

Frequently the honors in costuming at a given event go to a girl who has lacked the means for a shopping trip to Paris, but nevertheless manages to appear in the height of fashion through the work of her own clever fingers. The fabrics of the year aid in this because a becoming period gown of lustrous satin or taffeta, plain of waist and full of skirt with the tasteful touch of just the right accessories to give it character is not hard to make nor does it take a tremendous amount of time.

Many such belles do not hesitate to make their own frocks. There is a fascination about the creation of a new gown that means a real thrill to the girl who has been taught either by her fond mother or in a fashionable school "how to sew." It is quite true that no one wears her own handiwork with so much pride as the woman or girl who could buy as many costumes as she wishes from the best modistes of the city, but on the other hand, prefers those made by herself.

A Princess Makes Own Gowns.

This will be another bond of sympathy between the younger set and sweet Princess Ileana of Roumania, who will soon return to Washington with her mother, Queen Marie. Princess Ileana, who is very domestic in her tastes, has made many a dress for herself, putting in many hours on fine seams and handiwork and the needle work arts she has learned from her countrywomen, who are expert in this achievement and noted through all Europe for the laces and other embroidery they produce.

The old adage, "A stitch in time will save nine" is a very good first aid to a well-groomed appearance. Often the use of the timely stitch in catching up a loose skirt hem, fastening a button here or checking a tiny hole on its incipient rampage is just the very difference between a well-dressed woman and the woman whose appearance is not quite so "chic," as it were.

It is often the girl who does these little things entirely for herself who achieves the most successful appearance, for no one knows better than the wearer herself, if she pays attention to such things, just what is needed.

Of course no one goes about like the good old Virginia colonial housewives, and sometimes those of later generation, with scissors and pincushions suspended from their girdles by ribbons. But the thrifty woman keeps all her repair tools for her different needs near at hand, whether it be darning silk in the place she keeps her stockings, shoe cleaners and cloths in her shoe closet and hat brushes in her hat closets.

Evening Wraps on Crest.

The evening wrap is riding on the crest of the wave of fashion just now. Not only are the debutantes displaying with great pride the ones in their first season's wardrobe, but the beauty and becomingness have inspired virtually every one else to purchase at least one and often two or three this winter. It is a truism that those who do not watch the arrivals at a ball lose much of the general picture, for many women are at their best coming in from the out of doors with their hair freshly coiffed and the fascination of a luxurious evening cloak to add to the picture.

Just as in the costumes for the winter, the evening wrap of the time is in the reach of the girl who is clever with her needle. In fact, most of them are just huge squares of velvet or brocade lined with satin or shirred chiffon and bordered with ribbons, feathers or furs as the fancy dictates. In the olden days the art of wearing a shawl was practiced by the women of fashion before mirrors, so the wearing of these new wraps has to be practiced and the effects, good and bad, viewed from every angle.

The jabot or a variation of jabot worn not alone on the bodice, but often on the skirt as well, has a firm footing in the winter fashions as interpreted by the evening costumes now being worn at smart functions by matrons and maids alike in Washington.

The sharp difference between the jabot form of trimming and the flare is very apparent to those who have clothes acumen.

It really takes an artist to tell just when to add this ultra smart touch to an otherwise simple frock. While the majority of the effects seen here this winter are very good, there have been some which denote lack of art or one of the failures which even the most finished artists make in the clothes world. Some times this failure is not traced to the artist but to the individual who is wearing the creation.

Individual Color Schemes.

More and more the well-dressed women in Washington are taking some color or run of color or color combinations as their own and clinging to it almost exclusively with the result that their friends and acquaintances become used to seeing them in that color scheme and feel oftentimes that any departure from the idea changes the characteristics of the women wearing them. This, of course, unless the occasional stepping aside from their own colors involves the selection of something which is strikingly becoming.

There are certain women whom we always expect to see wearing something along the silver gray or orchid shades, and feel in our souls a sense of incompleteness if this woman whom we feel so suited to these delicate shades appears before us in an American beauty or emerald green gown. They may be very becoming, but somehow they do not fit into our mental visions of the color surroundings of the individuals.

The debutantes, the creatures of moods and fancies and infinite variety, take a special delight in appearing in demure black one evening, soft and dove-like white another time, while at another hour a flashing sprite in an all red gown spangled with brilliant little figures to match the shining heels and vamps of the snub-nosed slippers.

"Which transformation shall I wear tonight" will soon become a quite ordinary boudoir question if the vogue for transformations which has come over here from the seas increases. At least one can admire the art in which these hair transformations are made. They show every aspect of natural hair and can in a trice transform a bobbed-haired woman into a most interesting long-haired one. There was a time when a certain ignominy seemed to attach itself to the wearing of transformations and wigs of any kind. This seems to be a thing of the past. When a woman effects such creations she is seldom shy in declaring it. In fact, some of the transformations are an integral part of individual evening toilettes, not made of hair but of fine silver gold or colored metal threads to fit in with the color scheme of the dress.

Mrs. Basil Gordon, who came over from Baltimore for a few days on her way to spend the week-end at Wakefield Manor, Virginia, with Gen. and Mrs. George Barnett, wore a smart suit of Channel red cloth. The dress was made with a narrow band collar of gold embroidery on the material tied at one side. It had a band of the embroidery about the end of the low blouse and forming the cuffs. The coat was straight wrap-over model trimmed with fox fur. Her hat was a smart, high-crowned red beret.

Gray Squirrel Trimming.

Mrs. Timothy Smiddy, wife of the Minister of the Irish Free State, wore for a walk with her two daughters recently a black satin dress under a sport coat of white cloth with raised checks of black cloth. Her hat was of black velvet with a high crown. The two laughing Irish colleens who clung to her arms were as jauntily dressed as usual. They wore dark blue coat suits with straight jumper-like coats and smartly box-pleated skirts. Their hats were variations of the beret style.

Mme. Prochnik, wife of the Minister from Austria, is wearing an ensemble costume of black satin and velvet, with the velvet coat made in wrap-over style with large collar and cuffs of silver fox. Her hat is a high-crowned velvet one with a narrow brim of silver. cloth.

Mme. Matsudaira is wearing a handsome seal coat with lovely chinchilla collar and cuffs. With this she wears a very full beret of black velvet with a jeweled pin in the band in front.

White Satin Dance Frock.

Miss Lilia Tuckermann, the beautiful California girl, who will be a member of the younger set in Washington this winter, has a very becoming dance frock of white satin and tulle. The satin forms the molded bodice and the tulle a very full long skirt.

Miss Margaret Howard Kerr, debutante daughter of Judge and Mrs. Charles Kerr, has a daytime dress of velvet with collar and cuffs in boyish effect of gray satin. With this Miss Kerr wears a black coat with gray fur collar and cuffs and a small gray hat with a high crown.

Mrs. Everett Sanders, wife of the secretary to the President, has a new coat of black material made in wrap-over style on straight lines with large gray fox collar and cuffs. With this Mrs. Sanders wears a gray felt hat and very frequently a gray dress.

Mrs. Charles L. McNary, wife of Senator McNary, of Oregon, is wearing a gray velvet dress for afternoon affairs, made on straight modish lines with silver embroidery. Her hat of gray velvet is also embroidered in silver.

Mrs. Lansing's Costume.

Mme. Wilm, wife of the naval attache of the French embassy, had on recently a gown of black velvet made with all blouse effect in the back and a girdle of satin across the front. Her hat was of satin and velvet.

Mrs. Theodora Richards is wearing an afternoon gown of blue velvet embroidered in shades of blue with a tiered effect to the skirt and a surplice bodice faced with chiffon. Her hat is a smart shape

The wrong side out of the fashionable garments are such things of beauty that few women have been able to resist the appeal of the reversible garment.

Reversible Coats Popular.

The debutantes, in particular, in Washington seem to take a delight in wearing clothes with two sides to them, like a coat with a fur lining in one day and the same coat with the fur lining out, the cloth side in the next day.

There is nothing that lends itself so well to the ensemble ideas and the ever uppermost demand for variety than this new style.

The vogue for two-sided clothes has even extended to the gloves, which can be worn right side in or right side out and made to do duty for many occasions.

Some of the prettiest of the velvet walking suits which are being worn by women who like the rather simple type of tailored suit, even for calling, have rare chic because of the linings, which are sometimes of fur and sometimes of leather stenciled in some design to imitate fur or with monograms of the wearers.

When this latter style is used in the coat, the pocketbook and often the hat and shoes are made to match also.

Well-Dressed Year Certain.

The verve with which the debutantes have opened the season in Washington in the matter of clothes at least shows that this is going to be a well-dressed as well as a gay year.

It is expected of the young buds, and most of them come well up to the expectation, that they adhere to the idea that most of their charm comes out of the proverbial bandbox. No matter how few the evening gowns may be in the wardrobes, they must be kept in an ideal state of perfection, with every loop sewn neatly and no flowers or trimmings hanging haphazardly.

The painful sight which used to be common in Washington ballrooms a few years ago of a dancer limping along on run-over slippers is now a thing of the past. It is not so long ago when one pair of shoes for daytime, for dressy afternoon and for evening sufficed in the smart wardrobe, but now the footwear is legion and must show no sign of shabbiness of any kind.

Most of the evening costumes include a vanity bag designed to suit the individual gown and coat, and it is often made of the same material as the slippers.

This habit of making bags out of material of the gowns always has applied, more or less, to afternoon costumes. It is more apparent than usual this year.

Mrs. Elliott McFarlan Moore, formerly Miss Janet Moffett, is wearing a sport costume of golden brown silk and wool crepe made on simple lines with a high collar. Her hat is of soft brown velour.

Mrs. William F. Dennis was seen recently in a swagger top coat of brown and beige checks, worn over a brown dress. Her hat was a new shade in brown felt.

Mrs. William Barrett Ridgely is wearing a sport coat of gray checks with large collar and cuffs of platinum fur. Her hat is a high-crowned soft felt one with a rolled back brim.

Miss Frances Hill, the subdebutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Phillips Hill, is wearing a winter coat of brown velour with collar and cuffs of brown beaver. With this she wears a small brown hat.

Mrs. George Mesta is wearing an ensemble costume of gray velvet with collar and cuffs of chinchilla fur. Her hat is a gray velvet beret. Mrs. Mesta also has an afternoon gown of violet velvet with which she wears a velvet hat with a high, crushed crown made of folds of the material and a roll-backed brim, faced with silver.

Mrs. Charles L. Hussey has a black velvet evening gown made with a long bodice and flaring skirt and with a conservative oval neckline.

Mme. Riano, wife of the former Spanish Ambassador, wore one evening during her visit to Washington a gown of white crepe brocaded in silver, made on long lines with a V neckline back and front and without sleeves.

Mrs. George Barnett, wife of Maj. Gen. George Barnett, who has closed her country place at Wakefield Manor, Virginia, is in her town house, 1622 Rhode Island avenue, for the winter. Mrs. Barnett was recently in a black rep silk ensemble costume made in straight lines and trimmed with Chinese embroidery on the long sleeves and long streamers which fell from the neck. With this costume Mrs. Barnett wore a close-fitting black silk turban.

Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, who has been in New York for the last fortnight, wore at one of the recent concerts a black velvet costume trimmed with collar and cuffs of white fur. Her hat also was of black velvet.

Mrs. John Allan Daugherty, who recently returned from Paris, is wearing a three-piece costume in a soft shade of blue with silver trimming. The coat is long and has a collar of brown fox. With this she wears a small hat of blue velvet to match, with high crown.

Mrs. Harold H. Sims, who was married this summer to the attache of the British embassy, wore at a recent luncheon a gown of black flat crepe over which was worn a smart black coat of a heavy material, cut on semifitted lines. The fur trimming was of black fox and her hat was a small black felt devoid of trimming.

Mrs. Edward H. Alsop, who is here for several weeks from Paris, was seen at a tea recently in a coat of brown velvet cut along straight lines, with a narrow belt across the back and collar of brown fox. Her gown was of brown crepe with touches of brown in a lighter shade and with it she wore a brown felt hat with narrow brim.

Countess Santa Cruz, wife of the attache of the Spanish embassy, recently wore a gown of black crepe with small inverted pleats at the front and touches of white on the bodice. Her coat was of black, with collar and cuffs of pointed fox. Her hat also is black.

Mrs. Joseph Thorpe wore on a shopping tour recently a three-piece suit of brown. The coat was three-quarter length, with a high collar of mink. Her hat also was brown.

Miss Dorothea Lane, who with her mother will pass the winter in Florence, Italy, was gowned at a recent tea in a violet afternoon frock with touches of rose. Her hat was of the same shade, a small model with full crown.

Miss Allison Roebling wears an afternoon dress of black velvet, simply made, with a slight blouse and long, tight sleeves, the bottom of the skirt in large scallops. With it she wears a large black velvet picture hat, with two roses of deep rose shade together at the edge of the brim, one underneath and one on top.

Chats on Stage and Screen Folk

TITO SCHIPA TO SING HERE

Tito Schipa, the brilliant leading lyric tenor of the Chicago Civic Opera company, and one of the greatest musical figures before the American public, will appear in concert at Continental Memorial hall, D. A. R., next Saturday evening, November 20, at 8:30 o'clock, as the first attraction in Mrs. Wilson-Greene's series of evening concerts there and at the Washington auditorium.

The program that Schipa has selected for this occasion is one of the most fascinating and beautiful he has yet presented to Washington concert goers, and it has been specially selected by Schipa for this occasion.

Although stil a young man, Tito Schipa's career has been little short of meteoric. In six short years he has become one of the greatest operatic figures before the American public, while his concert tours have already made him an outstanding musical favorite in the largest cities of the country. Prior to his American debut, Schipa has charmed operatic audiences in Italy, Spain, Portugal, South and Central America.

A dozen selections, exclusive of encores, are listed in Mr. Schipa's program for next Saturday evening. Mr. Jose Echaniz will be the assisting artist at the piano. The Schipa selections are: Sento nel core (Scarlatti), Non posso disperar (De Luca), Manon (Ah, fuyez douce image), (Massenet); La Plainte, (Lagorgue); Claire de lune (Faure); La Mandoline (Debussy); Liebestraum (Liszt-Schipa); La Jota (De Falla); Mi viejo amor, (Esparaza-Oteo); If I Gave You a Rose, (English); The Day When My Dreams Come True, (Bateman), and Werther (Ossian Song) Massenet. Mr. Echaniz will play Scherzo, (Chopin); Seguillas (Albeniz), and Viva Navarra Larregla-Echaniz).

Club Pirate's Den.

Weird green lights, ghoulish decorations, voodoo music, singing and dancing waiters dressed as buccaneers, and not a minute's lull in entertainment from 9:30 on—these features combine to furnish a great thrill to patrons of the Club Pirate's Den, 1219 New York avenue northwest. The club is strictly private and to see the inside of the cave one must join or enter as the guest of a member. There are now more than 4,000 members.

Entertainers include Ripp and Marinelli, vaudeville dancers; the Goldbug quartet; Jack Schrader, character singer, famous for his "Willie the Weeper" dope song; Pete Thomas, marathon piano player; Queenie Powers, soubrette; May Powell, "blues" singer; Grace White and Pearl Long, in a song and dance act, and Maude Fuller, prima donna. Talent from local theaters will augment the program on Tuesday and Wednesday nights. In addition, there will be four big female acts direct from New York each week.

"SENSATION" AT CENTRAL

"The Great Sensation," to be shown at Crandall's Central theater the first two days of this week, beginning this afternoon at 3, as chief feature of a diversified bill, affords splendid roles for William Fairbanks. "The Great Sensation" is highly melodramatic with frequent incidents providing comedy relief. The companion attraction will be supplied by Lloyd Hamilton in a two-reel comedy that is rich in laughter and bears the title of "Jolly Tars." Another added attraction will be a new release in the interesting series known as the Lyman H. Howe Hodge-Podge.

Jetta Goudal will be seen at the Central on Tuesday and Wednesday in her first individual starring vehicle, "Her Man o' War," in which William Boyd appears opposite the star. The short-reel comedy for the second bill of the week will be "Mr. Wife," in which Neal Burns is the pictured star.

Patsy Ruth Miller, in association with a group of brilliant screen artists, is announced for Thursday and Friday at the Central in "Broken Hearts of Hollywood," in which are revealed aspects of picture making not known to many aspirants for screen honors. The comedy will be "Pound Foolish."

On Saturday Johnny Hines will be the star of the Central's bill in First National's production of "The Brown Derby." The comedy for the last bill of the week will be "Bear Cats," a juvenile subject. Each daily bill will be augmented by abbreviated camera subjects and pipe organ accompaniments.

Midnight Sun Magic Lures the Traveler

The magic of the Midnight Sun has been luring travelers to the far north for generations. Year after year the tourist tide flows toward the arctic wonderlands with increasing volume and enthusiasm.

On Thursday afternoon at 4:30 Burton Holmes will guide you to Norway, via Iceland, the lone sentinel isle of the North Atlantic, which is far more interesting than the traveler imagines; a visit to its tiny capital, a glimpse of its primeval solitudes, yield unique and vivid new impressions.

Mr. Holmes made his latest Norway cruise last summer. His pictures present a colorful array of fresh Icelandic and Norwegian travel impressions gathered in the poetic mists of the northern summer and under the all-night, all-day radiance of the Midnight Sun.

Special Programs For the Children

Mrs. Harriet Hawley Locher, director of the public service and educational department of the Crandall theaters, now operated by the Stanley-Crandall Co., of Washington, wishes to emphasize the fact that the "selected programs for children," being shown every Saturday morning in Crandall's Tivoli theater, at Fourteenth street and Park road northwest, and Crandall's Chevy Chase theater, at 5612 Connecticut avenue northwest, are not "educational movies for children" nor fairy tales, or any of the other types of photoplays mistakenly deemed inadequate to intrigue the juvenile mind. The pictures shown are carefully selected from the best of the industry's output and are considered especially from the viewpoint of wholesome entertainment. The effort is to furnish once a week two hours of motion pictures that shall in every way satisfy the children ranging from 6 years of age to 16, and at the same time meet the requirements of their parents. Time, labor and money has been expended generously to make these juvenile programs deserving of the success which they have attained.

Big Questions Discussed.

Queen Marie's tour, the prospective legislative program in Congress of the big organizations of women, Mussolini's apology to France, the Senate issue of seating Vare and Smith, Mexico and other national and international questions are among the topics to be analyzed tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock at Rauscher's by William Rufus Scott in his weekly current events lecture.

"MISMATES" AT TIVOLI

Doris Kenyon, supported by Warner Baxter, will be seen at Crandall's Tivoli theater the first two days of this week in First National's production of "Mismates," the story of a self-sacrificing mother, who was done a great injustice by her mother-in-law, and finally through her own efforts brought about a full realization of the tremendous sacrifice she had endured. A companion offering will be supplied by Esther Cutchin, concert pianist and Knabe-Ampico recording artist, who will occupy the stage at the Tivoli in person. The supplementary attractions include a new Aesop Fable and the latest issue of the Pathe Review.

On Tuesday and Wednesday, Reginald Denny will occupy the Tivoli screen in Universal's production of "Take It from Me," in which he is suported by Blanche Mehafey. This comedy offers many delightful sequences and will be supplemented by the natural color reel adapted from the story suggested by the famous painting of "The Blue Boy." A new release of the Topics of the Day also will be shown.

Dorothy Mackaill and Jack Mulhall will be screened in the stellar roles of First National's production of "Subway Sadie" on Thursday and Friday, with the first installment of a new series of two-reel action dramas bearing the title of "The Collegians" the added offering.

On Saturday, Buck Jones will be the pictured star in "The Gentle Cyclone," which will be augmented by Lige Conley in a new comedy, "Kiss Papa," a new Lyman H. Howe Hodge-Podge, and the ninth installment of the mystery chapter play, "Snowed In."

TREES RAIN COCOANUTS

Striking one tree with lightning is a difficult job even for a movie picture company. But striking two trees is impossible, if Porto Rican men have to be depended on.

For a scene in Gilda Gray's first Paramount starring picture, "Aloma of the South Seas," which comes to Loew's Palace today, Maurice Tourneur wanted a palm tree struck near the top by a flashing bolt, so that it would split and crash to earth. The technical crew figured the best way to do it would be to fasten a stick of dynamite in the trunk of the tree and string wires to the camera. In this way the cameraman could set off the explosion at the proper time.

A native was enlisted to climb the tree and tie the explosive in place. To make sure the tree would be demolished, the sticks were sent up by a man and he was cautioned not to drop them. The lad fastened each of them in the midst of a bunch of cocoanuts.

After the cameras had begun to grind the assistant director pushed the electric button. It rained cocoanuts. All those on the tree and those from a number of nearby trees. Warner Baxter and Percy Marmont were in the foreground when the cocoanuts began to fall, but they didn't stay there.

All the natives within hailing distance ran more than 100 yards away from the place in less than nine seconds flat.

Mr. Tourneur wanted to do the scene over again to make sure it would be satisfactory, but he couldn't find an able-bodied man in that part of Porto Rico to climb another tree.

LENS LURES TENNIS STARS

The town of Forest Hills, L. I., may be completely inured to the sight of international tennis stars like Suzanne Lenglen, Helen Wills, "Big Bill" Tilden or Vincent Richards, but Forest Hills falls for the lure of the camera lens as hard as Fergus Falls, Minn., or any other American town.

This was discovered by Director Fred Newmeyer, of the Paramount forces, who picked out Forest Hills as a location for some of the scenes in "The Quarterback," Richard Dix's new picture at Loew's Columbia this week. Newmeyer figured that Forest Hills would pay no attention to his troupe, being accustomed to sport celebrities of the highest rank.

But—he reckoned without the lure of the lens. During the first hour's filming, bicycles and scooters were abandoned while their owners followed Dix, his leading woman, Esther Ralston, and a group of "collegians." As the morning wore on, the children's broadcasting started to take effect. A contingent of adults watched the proceedings while trying to keep up a polite pretense of disinterestedness.

The policemen on duty were obliged to reroute traffic. Drivers craned their necks to get a glimpse of Richard being paddled and clouted by a group of hazing sophomores.

In the middle of the afternoon Helen Wills, on her way to the west side tennis courts, came upon the Dix unit. Wearing her familiar eyeshade, and carrying a duo of covered racquets, Miss Wills paused on the outskirts of the crowd to watch the queer goings-on with mirrors and reflectors. The crowd glanced at the familiar court figure and returned its gaze to the picture group. But when Dix saw Miss Wills, he dashed up to a friend and demanded an introduction.

Proving—that while a man may not be a hero to his valet, neither is a tennis star something to be stared at in Forest Hills!

Carlton Night Club Imports a Celebrity

Emile Boreo, internationally known entertainer, who has consistently headlined in the vaudeville theaters of this country and abroad, is to be the stellar feature of the Carlton Night club commencing today and continuing for the coming two weeks.

M. Boreo has appeared in Washington previously and always has been enthusiastically received.

Supporting this star is the delightful exponents of the dance, Holliday and Sawyer, known, too, in vaudeville and musical comedy productions as well as the best of the metropolitan night clubs.

On Wednesday night, November 17, the first of a series of Carlton nights will be given, announces the management. This is to be "Midnight in Granada," and will have Senora Dominguez as the shining star for this night only.

The club will be appropriately and artistically decorated to create the atmosphere of Madrid, while the favors, for which the Carlton is already famed, will be in the spirit of the evening.

Senora Dominguez was formerly a member of the Chicago Grand Opera company and is now included in Washington's most innermost society circles.

Manager Pleased.

Manager Ira J. La Motte, of the Gayety theater is pleased at the attendance of Gayety theater patrons, and the way the new policy of presenting, in addition to the regular Columbia burlesque shows, comedy dramas and musical comedies, has been received, the first departure being Aaron Hoffman's latest farce comedy, "Give and Take," which was presented at the Gayety several weeks ago and well attended at every performance. Last week's attraction, "Aloma of the South Seas," proved as popular. This week's attraction is Columbia burlesque, "New York to Paris," which will be followed by the musical comedy "Kosher Kitty Kelly."

LONG GREEN ON THIS HAT

In view of the exceptional receipts attracted to the box office by Michael Arlen's "The Green Hat" ever since it was first produced nearly two seasons ago, it has become known in the A. H. Woods' office as "The Long Green Hat." It has also made a fortune for its Armenian author, adding something like $150,000 in royalties to his bank account to date. And while it has been banned by Will Hayes for picture purposes, it will very probably be put on the screen in due course of time.

It is said that when Al. Woods first heard of "The Green Hat" he put a toothbrush in his pocket and jumped on the fastest boat to Europe. He found Arlen in one of the author's favorite clubs.

Woods strolled over and extended his hand to Arlen. "Hello, Mike," he said. "I hear you've written a play called 'The Green Hat.' What's it about?" Arlen plucked at a mustache about as large as an eyelash and stared at Woods through a monocle. "I don't believe I've had the pleasure of meeting you," he said, rather diffidently, for Arlen is a retiring chap.

"I'm Al. Woods," said the producer. "Tell me, what's this 'Green Hat' about, anyway?"

The author smiled. He knew Woods by reputation, of course. "Well," he answered, "it's about 100,000 words in length, in novel form. Why don't you read it?"

"I never knew there were so many words," retorted Wood. "Boil it down to 150 and make it snappy. I want to catch the next boat back to America."

Arlen did his best and gave Woods a brief synopsis of the story. "Good!" exclaimed the producer. "I'll take it! What's your terms?" It is said that when Arlen mentioned his terms Woods fainted and did not regain consciousness until the opening night of "The Green Hat" on Broadway, when speculators asked as high as $50 a ticket to see Katharine Cornell as "Iris March," the wicked heroine.

Supper Club Stars At Metropolitan

The Giersdorf sisters, Irene, Elvira and Rae, who since its opening have been one of the major attractions at the smart supper club conducted by Harry Wardman in conjunction with the operation of his new Carlton hotel, beginning this afternoon will transfer their activities to the stage of Crandall's Metropolitan theater, where they will constitute the special stage attraction for the week. These three charming and highly gifted young women are instrumentalists, singers and dancers of rare ability. It is confidently expected that this trio will take the same high rank in the view of the Metropolitan's patrons as that accorded the other distinguished artists who have preceded them on the same stage. In this group are included such favorites as Jack Smith, the Whispering Barytone; Rudy Wiedoft, the the world's premier saxophonist; Gene Austin, melodist supreme; "Ukulele Ike" Edwards, The Record Boys, Rita Owin, formerly of the Ziegfeld Follies; The Loomis Twins, preeminent among juvenile performers; Chief Caupolican, Indian barytone, and others of like standing too numerous to mention. The engagement of the Giersdorf sisters, who are literally "The Aristocrats of Melody" is positively limited to a single week.

"Jazz Week," the first of a series of such offerings which will be offered at Loew's Palace from time to time in the future, will be celebrated at that theater during the week beginning next Sunday afternoon, November 21, when Norma Shearer, in her latest Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, "Upstage," a Monta Bell feature, will constitute the principal screen attraction of the program, with such outstanding stage offerings as Cy Landry, eccentric dancing sensation; Jack North and his banjo-uke, Dick Leibert's Organlogues, Loew's Palace Magazine and a splendid musical overture and atmospheric score by the Palace Concert orchestra, Tom Gannon, conductor, the entire program presented with special lighting and scenic effects that promise to make next week's attraction at Loew's Palace the outstanding amusement offering in the Capital.

Activities of the Women's Clubs

By VYLLA POE WILSON.

WASHINGTON women leaders are taking advantage of the lull between the election and the opening of Congres to inform themselves on the status of the various bills in which they are interested and, incidentally, the exact stand of each member of the House and Senate on the issues which most concern women.

Naturally some of this concern is centered around the three reelected congresswomen and the new one, Mrs. John P. Langley, of Kentucky. Women expect these women to be their spokeswomen in Congress and now that they have gained more experience in the art of legislation they will be held to much stricter accountability for their attitudes on public questions in which women are especially interested. There is every reason to believe that now they have served their apprenticeship they will be more assured in their championship of the things desired by women generally.

In Washington our form of government makes it necessary to look to Congress for the answers to our local needs. Therefore women here feel that they should get special understanding and assistance in their undertakings from the congresswomen.

Already all four of the women members of the House of Representatives are being flooded with invitations from local and national clubs and organizations, all of them anxious to meet the women who have placed the women as a fact in the lawmaking of the nation.

Men have gallantly stepped forward to the assistance of the movement, led by the General Federation of Women's Clubs, to place the housewife on an equality with those engaged in other professions in the occupation lists of the next census. Of the hundreds of letters received by Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover every day, many of them come from organizations of men as well as those composed of men and women or women alone, asking that this recognition of the homemaker may be officially made by the United States government.

The local clubwomen are preparing to participate with enthusiasm in the survey to be conducted in the District to find out just how many conveniences homes in the United States Capital have and how many are conducted along scientific lines. A large delegation will go from Washington next March to the American Homes congress to be held in Des Moines, Iowa, sponsored by the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

At the meetings to be held at the national headquarters at 1734 N street northwest, January 10, 11 and 12, of the executive board of the general federation, the Washington survey and those of other cities will be one of the paramount subjects of discussion.

Speaking of homes, the general federation practices what it preaches, for it is doubtful if there is another such homelike atmosphere in Washington as in the house the club women of the nation have purchased for their general headquarters. During the summer it has been put in spick and span condition and seems to simply radiate hominess and good cheer.

This homelike aspect is not even lost in the ten office rooms and the conference rooms, which are daily the meeting places of representatives of great national organizations of men and women, great educational institutions and representatives of the government bureaus seeking and usually receiving the federation's cooperation in world-wide enterprises.

Harvest home in Washington's club world means, as a general rule, the bringing of thankfulness to the many children and other people under the kindly consideration of the club. There are very few of the Washington women's clubs which do not conduct real welfare work of some kind, and the Thanksgiving season is always a very busy one.

With the tendency to make the club houses more and more social and recreation, as well as work centers, it is not surprising that Thanksgiving day has a long list of club teas, dinners and dances on its calendar. In Washington there are always certain groups of most interesting women far from their homes who welcome the festive observance of holidays at their favorite clubs.

More than 1,280 hours' volunteer service were given by the Potomac river patrol of the American Red Cross life-saving corps which has just closed its season's activities.

The river patrol is one of the activities of the District of Columbia chapter of the American Red Cross and was made possible through the donation of a special canoe by Miss Alice Clapp, of Washington. The canoe, of glistening white and carrying the red cross on its bow, was a familiar sight to the campers and canoeists on the Potomac all summer.

Capt. A. Boyd Hinds, assisted by Maj. James Hawley and Assistant Physical Director Martyn of the Y. M. C. A., were the leaders of the crews of junior life savers that man the patrol. Maj. Hawley's private canoe was used in addition to the Red Cross craft and a regular inspection of eight first-aid stations was part of the work of the organization. These stations were located at Great Falls canoe house, Dempsey's boat house, Moore's boat house, Davis's float, at Casey's camp at Rock point, at the Sycamore Island club and at the Corinthian Yacht club. Another station was located at the Boy Scout Week-End camp at Burnt Mills.

More than 110 cases of first aid were cared for with the equipment furnished by the Red Cross and two rescues were made by members of the patrol. One of these was made near Sycamore island by Logan Ratliff, who rescued a girl by the use of the life buoy and swimming.

Capt. A. Boyd Hinds encountered two men choking one another in deep water. Separating them by a clutch on the neck of one and a foot in the throat of the other, he towed the poorest swimmer about 30 yards to the float.

The crew was active in connection with the Potomac river swim for the President's cup race and was on patrol for the motor boat races for the President's cup, under auspices of the Corinthian Yacht club.

The results obtained from the maintenance of these first aid stations on the upper river were so satisfactory that Commodore W. E. Longfellow, chairman of the first aid and life saving committee of the District of Columbia chapter, American Red Cross, is planning to extend the service to the harbor and Eastern branch of the Potomac next season.

A class in home hygiene and care of the sick will begin on Tuesday, November 16, at 5 p. m., at the District chapter headquarters, 821 Sixteenth street northwest. This class will meet for sixteen lessons and will be instructed by Mrs. M. Stevens, a registered Red Cross nurse.

The class will meet twice weekly, on Tuesdays and Thursdays, at 5 p. m. until the course is completed, when a certificate will be given to all who pass the examination successfully. This certificate will help its owners to qualify as health aids of the District chapter of the American Red Cross.

The parliamentary law section of the Twentieth Century club will meet Tuesday morning at the Woman's City Club. The subject for the lesson to be conducted by Mrs. William H. Herron, chairman of the section, is "The Indefinite Postponement." Following the plan adopted at the first meeting two weeks ago, two members of the class will take turns in presiding while practice on various motions goes on. Mrs. G. Wallace Hanger and Mrs. Ray Palmer Teele have been selected for the chair on Tuesday.

The French section, with Miss Elizabeth M. Carhart, chairman, in charge, will meet Wednesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at 22 Jackson place. Mme. Yvonne Daloz, who is now on the ocean returning from a summer spent in France, is expected to arrive in time to speak at the section. The hostesses for the afternoon at the tea which will follow the meeting will be Mrs. George B. Taylor, Mrs. Harriet Ayres, Mrs. E. B. Rounday, Mrs. J. E. Jones, Mrs. Joseph E. Falk.

The nature section will go to Chevy Chase lake Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock for a walk in that locality. Mrs. Miner, the chairman, will be there to conduct the class.

The section of education will meet on Thursday morning at the home of the chairman, Mrs. Thomas W. Sidwell, 3901 Wisconsin avenue, at 11 o'clock. Dr. Harvey W. Wiley will give reminiscences of his close connection with colleges and universities in the '60s and '70s. Armenian handiwork will be exhibited for sale for the benefit of the Near East sufferers. The bus will be at the west side of Dupont circle at 10:30 o'clock for those wishing to take it.

There was a record attendance at the monthly meeting of the club to hear the veteran Shakespearean actor, Robert Bruce Mantell, tell of his experiences in the more than 50 years of his life on the stage.

The civic section will meet today at 12 o'clock at the Women's City club, 22 Jackson place. Col. U. S. Grant 3d will give an illustrated lecture on the future development of Washington.

The Clover club met Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. Barnum, 3205 McKinley street. The president, Mrs. Ralph E. Lawrence, presided. Mrs. Norr, the guest of the club, was welcomed by Mrs. Barnum as a prospective member.

The club has adopted as a part of its program for the winter, a description of experiences incident to a trip around the world, and after the last business meeting Mrs. Joseph Randle entertained the club with a fascinating and interesting narrative about her experiences in Norway and Sweden.

The next meeting of the club will be held at the home of Mrs. Lee D. Latimer, 3739 Van Ness street northwest.

The Sportimist club of business and professional women, Wednesday, at its fifth annual election, unanimously chose Mrs. Helena Doocy Reed for presdient, to succeed Mrs. Mina C. Van Winkle. Those elected to the other offices were first vice president, Marjorie Webster; second vice president, Mrs. Annie Ball; corresponding secretary, Maude Freeman; recording secretary, Margaret E. Conley; treasurer, Mrs. Edna B. Hoffman, and to the board, Mrs. Mina C. Van Winkle, Mary Catherine Lewis, Rosa Place and Katie Dunn.

The Sportimist club of the District of Columbia is represented in the Federation of Civic Executives. Its principal contribution is the maintenance of the eye clinic at the Children's hospital.

Its former presidents have been women of prominence, Mrs. Ruby Lee Minar, a well known realtor; Mrs. Ethel Knigfit Pollard, Miss Agnes Winn and Mrs. Mina Van Winkle, head of the women's bureau of the police department.

The incoming president, Mrs. Helena Doocy Reed, is a native of Washington and has carved quite a place for women in banking annals. She is manager of the personal service department of the Lincoln National Bank, a standard certificate holder of the American Institute of Banking and a member of the bar of the District of Columbia.

As chairman of the women's committee of American Institute of Banking, Mrs. Reed has held the highest office yet accorded bank women in the American Bankers association. She was educated in the public schools of this city and is a graduate of the Washington College of Law. For the past six years she has been prominently identified with civic movements. She is a member of the Women's City club, member of the board of the Women's Bar association and other business and professional organizations.

The twentieth anniversary of the Newcomb club was celebrated October 27 by a luncheon at the Maryland fish and game preserve, during which Mrs. E. F. Kohman, as toastmistress, introduced the speakers. Among the invited guests of the day were Mrs. O. C. Merrill, president of the County federation, and Mrs. Jones, past president of the federation. The first meeting of November was held at the home of Mrs. Jed Gittings, Alta Vista, Md. The next meeting will be the social service afternoon tea and sale at the home of Miss Riley, Alta Vista, Md.

Le Cercle Francais de Washington les Precieuses Ridicules enjoyed the most enthusiastic first meeting in the history of the club at the Pen Women's league. The roll of officers of the preceding year was elected unanimously as follows:

President, M. Edmond Becker; vice presidents, Mrs. Bessie Edson and Augustus G. Heaton; treasurer, Mrs. C. Augustus Simpson; corresponding secretary, Miss Maude Scruggs; recording secretary and manager, Mlle. Marie-Leontine Becker; social secretary, Mrs. Camille Hindmarsh.

The monthly meeting of the Quentin Roosevelt unit, American Women's Legion, was held at the home of the president, Mrs. Howard Hodgkins, all officers being present, and reading reports which were approved. The annual card party was held at 2300 California street Friday.

At the meeting of the Wheel of Progress Wednesday evening, Dr. F. Homer Curtiss and Mrs. Curtiss, lecturers and authors of many books, among which are "The Divine Mother," "The Soundless Sound," and "Coming World Changes," were the speakers, the theme of their address being "The Woman's Age."

The addresses were inspirational and enlightening. Dr. Curtiss pointed out that a new day had dawned—"the woman's age."

The regent, Mrs. Rose Gouverneur Hoes, announces the appointment of Mrs. Jeter C. Pritchard as her new vice regent. The officers of the District Wheel of Progress just elected are: Mrs. Mallie Roberts Nichols, the axle; Mrs. A. L. Reinstrom, axle 2d; Mrs. Anton Stephan, axle 3d; Miss Marion Smith, secretary; Miss M. K. Burkholder, assistant secretary; Mrs. Alfred Anthony, treasurer; Mrs. Bess Baker Pierce, registrar; Miss Helena O'Connell, historian; Mrs. L. M. MacKennon, parliamentarian; Mrs. George K. Kernodle, chaplain.

Mrs. Richard Floyd Irwin, chairman of entertainment, announces December 7 as the date of the card party and bridge to be held at the Mayflower as usual. The Utan society is to be the guests of the Wheel of Progress at the next meeting on the 24th of this month. Mrs. F. G. A. Coulson, chairman of program, will announce the speaker for the November meeting at an early date.

During the summer the National Memorial foundation has held its meetings regularly, these taking place at the homes of different members as the foundation headquarters was closed during July, August and September. It has now been reopened and the regular meetings are again being held there on the first Wednesday of each month.

On the return of the president, Mrs. James B. Burbank, a special meeting was called to discuss plans for this year's extension work. The foundation intends to broaden its field very greatly during the coming year, the growth of the organization and the increasing number of cases presented to it, making this a very real necessity.

An especially interesting contribution sent to the memorial this summer, came in the form of a check for $600, the proceeds of the annual fair held for the benefit of this organization by school children of Rye, N. Y. Among the memorial gifts was one in memory of Sergt. Cottell, sent by Thomas Hyde 4th, of Stanmore, Sandy Spring, Md.

The Women's Home club of North Beach, Md., held the first meeting of the season at the home of Mrs. Samuel Tucker, the president presiding. Miss Lucile Holland was elected to fill the unexpired term as the corresponding secretary, as Mrs. Robert Hopkins has resigned. The following committee chairmen were appointed: Educational, Mrs. Royal Shaw; membership, Mrs. Eugene McDowell; sick, Mrs. Josef Royal; sanitary, Mrs. Appleton Cady; ways and means, Mrs. Charles Eckert. Mrs. John Shaw, as chairman of the committee appointed to assist the mayor and town council entertaining Gov. Ritchie of Maryland during his recent visit to North Beach, gave a very interesting report. The educational committee report that they have promise of another teacher and that the school grounds will be improved. Mrs. Anna B. Throckmorton was a guest.

On Wednesday evening the Abracadabra club met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Batt, 3821 Legation street northwest. "Schools and Colleges," was the topic for responses to roll call.

Mrs. Josephine Griffin, of the Roosevelt apartments, was elected to membership. The papers of the evening was presented by Mr. Harold E. Warner on "The Proposed Department of Education." The reading by Mrs. Bloomfield H. Howard was on the subject, "Florida."

The November meeting of the Woman's Club of Bethesda was held at the home of Mrs. Walter Tuckerman, in Edgemoor, Tuesday. Mrs. Robert Imbrie, widow of the former United States vice-consul to Persia, for whose assassination the Persian government paid $50,000 in reparation, was the principal speaker. She told in detail about the work of the near East relief, with which she was connected, and of how the work had been so greatly hindered because of the many disasters that have overtaken that section. She mentioned the fact that in four and one half years the work of relief has had to be done over seven times. In commenting on the work of the clubs educational committee, to whose report she had listened, she said that in Turkey the educational problem is one of the greatest importance. It is very difficult to get the children to go to school. She spoke at length on the work being done in the orphanages and said that in the orphanage at Trebizond there were 12,000 children from the ages of 2 to 12, 300 boys from 13 to 15 and 700 girls from 13 to 17.

Among the reports of chairmen, that of the chairman of applied education, Mrs. Sears, was particularly interesting, perhaps because it touches so closely the Bethesda school in which all are so much interested. Mrs. Sears said that the $30 donated by the club to the Bethesda school for the establishment of the room reference library had now been spent and the books are to be put on a shelf in the third grade. She read the list of books, 25 in number, which were selected to meet the requirements of that grade.

A letter of appreciation from a third grade pupil addressed to the club was also read. Through a contribution from Mrs. Berlin Brann, the committee were enabled to send two boxes of books, two trunks of California shells and a large oil painting to the Rockville High school, and a picture in color of the signing of the Declaration of Independence, and a group of mounted pictures for class room use to the Bethesda school. The scholarship fund was augmented by a gift from Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, and there is now approximately $150 available. A committee has been appointed to draw up rules for the administration of the fund when it has reached the desired amount. This fund is to be used to send a local girl to a Washington university, and is in addition to the amounts contributed by the club toward the county and State federation loan and scholarship funds.

The chairman of the American home, Mrs. J. Frederick Imirie, said that the October number of the Woman's Home Companion contains a most interesting article by Mrs. Sherman on "The American Home," and shows what this department hopes to accomplish.

Mrs. Maude Howell Smith announced the inauguration by the club of a play contest, to promote the drama throughout the State by encouraging the writing of plays. Except for the prize award, which is to be the production of the prize play, the details of the contest are to be worked out later.

Mrs. William Bride, chairman of public welfare, reported that her committee had prepared a resolution to present to the Montgomery County Civic federation for action, embracing four civic needs. First, the placing of a sidewalk along the old Georgetown road from the school to the Bethesda bank; second, the depression of the trolley tracks along Wisconsin avenue in anticipation of the widening of this thoroughfare; third, more police protection, and fourth the removal of high shrubbery at the corner of Drummond avenue and Wisconsin and at Bradley lane, in order to eliminate any future possibility of accident at these intersections.

Mrs. William J. Peters, county director, reported on the last meeting of the county federation, and Mrs. Chafee, president of the Woman's Club of Bethesda, reported on the meeting of the council of presidents held recently in Baltimore. Mrs. Peters, in her report, said that all club women were invited to attend a series of lectures on parliamentary law to be given by Dr. Bomberger, of the University of Maryland, the first Friday in each month at the Chevy Chase library at 2 o'clock.

Mrs. William Gamble, chairman of international relations, in line with her plan to take up month by month some phase of her subject, announced that on "committee day," November 23, Mrs. Charles E. Lyon, trade and finance commissioner from the United States to London, will address the meeting on the subject of treaties between the United States and Great Britain. The Rogers law will also be discussed.

The pianist, Miss Helen Virginia Clark, introduced by Mrs. Ochsenreiter in the absence of the fine arts chairman, Mrs. Brooks, played two selections. Tea was served and the hostesses for the day were Mrs. J. Girven Peters, Mrs. Henry Jervey, Mrs. W. W. Bride, Mrs. O. Drown, Mrs. E. G. Johnson, Mrs. E. T. Cronin and Mrs. R. B. Breckinridge, chairman.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Woman's club, of Chevy Chase, Md., Wednesday, Dr. Francois Matthes, United States geological survey, will give an illustrated lecture on adventures in the grand canyon of the Colorado. Dr. Matthes is one of the leading topographers in the United States and has an international reputation. He is especially known for his valuable work in the Grand Canyon.

The literature section will meet at 2 o'clock Friday at the home of Mrs. H. G. Moulton, 3700 Oliver street. The program, "Current Fiction," will be in charge of Mrs. Mrs. William B. Greeley. Mrs. George S. Jamison will devote a few moments to poetry; Mrs. Victor Whitlock to current magazines. A selection of 50 books for children will be displayed and a helpful list of desirable books for children will be distributed.

The Junior League met at the home of Miss Josephine Stevens on William S. Garland, assisted by Williams lane Thursday, November 4. Several new members came and the girls worked on scrapbooks for the Children's hospital. A music section of the league was formed and is to meet from now on at the home of Miss Anne Ashley, who is a member of the league.

The members of the social section gave a card party for the members of the club at the home of Mrs. Joseph A. Burkart, 6311 Connecticut avenue, on Wednesday, November 3. Mrs. Burkart was assisted by Mrs. Newman G. Little, Mrs. George P. Hoover and Mrs. Joseph H. DeVeau.

The attendance at the first meeting of the civic section on Friday, November 5, showed the interest felt in the work of the section. Mending of the garments donated for social service needs and preparing rugs for rug making—the rugs to be sold for the fund—went on through the morning. Mrs. E. C. Bebb was in charge. Mrs. R. Harvey Sargent, chairman of civics, introduced the speaker of the morning. Miss Engel, of the Baltimore League of Women Voters, spoke on "Proposed Legislation." Miss Engel answered many questions as her talk progressed, and discussion was continued during the informal lunch hour. Mrs. Sargent called for reports from the chairmen of committees. There followed a motion for definite constructive means to help the Social Service League of Montgomery County. Mrs. Earl W. Chafee introduced Dr. F. M. Bomberger, who gave the first of a series of lectures on "Parliamentary Law."

The French section announces a class in elementary French, meeting at 10 Monday mornings at the home of Mrs. J. W. Crandall, 3733 Jocelyn street. The advanced class will meet Mondays at 2 p. m. with Miss McEwen, 13 East Melrose street.

On Tuesday, November 2, the nature section drove beyond Dickerson, Md., and climbed Sugar Loaf.

The district branch, League of American Pen Women will hold the first of a series of chafing-dish suppers at the clubhouse this evening at 6 o'clock. Mr. Archie D. Engel, magician, will furnish the entertainment.

Tomorrow evening the short story group will hold its first meeting of the year under the direction of Mrs. William Wolff Smith, the president. Hugh M. Irish, president of the writer's league, will be the guest of honor. The members of this group will write the first chapter of a mystery story which will be continued throughout the year by writing one chapter at each meeting.

The poetry group, Miss Alice Hutchins Drake, chairman, will hold its regular monthly meeting tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock. There will be a brief discussion of plans for the coming season followed by a study period devoted to original poems submitted by group members. Manuscripts to be read at the next fellowship tea will be selected.

Mrs. Theodore Tiller, chairman of the book review committee, announces the first luncheon of the season Tuesday at 1 o'clock at the clubhouse. An interesting program has been prepared. Stanley Olmsted will review his latest book "At Top of Tobin." Miss Margery Quigley, librarian of the Mt. Pleasant branch of the public library, will talk on children's books and will also tell something about the three books she wrote in collaboration with Miss Mary E. Clark: "The Poppy Seed Cakes," "Etiquette, Jr." and "The Cook's Surprise."

The commercial group in charge of Miss A. Maris Boggs will meet Friday evening at 8 o'clock.

A class in parliamentary law will be organized by Miss Bertha Frances Wolff as soon as enough applications have been received. The date for the meeting of the motion-picture group, Mrs. Harriet Hawley Locher, chairman, will be announced later. During the past week the following groups have met for study: Juvenile story, Susie White McGowan, chairman; special feature writing, Mrs. Victoria Faber Stevenson, chairman.

The District of Columbia Home Economics association will hold three section meetings this week. The textile section will meet at 4 p. m. tomorrow at the bureau of home economics. The topic for discussion is recent developments in the use of rayon, led by F. L. Lewton, curator of the division of textiles of the United States National museum.

The nutrition section will meet at the auditorium of the American Red Cross building at 8 p. m., Tuesday. Dr. Hazel E. Munsell will give an illustrated talk on "Getting at the Facts of Nutrition With the Help of Laboratory Animals."

The child-study section will meet at 8 p. m. tomorrow at the bureau of home economics. Miss Anna Richardson, field worker in child care and parental education for the American Home Economics association, will speak on recent trends in preschool education. Miss Richardson is now making a special survey of child care and parental education courses as offered in American colleges and universities.

The voteless District of Columbia League of Women Voters will hold its semiannual business meeting at the board room in the District building Friday at 8 p. m. Important matters concerning District welfare will be discussed by prominent speakers.

The Quota club held its regular monthly business meeting Thursday at 1634 I street northwest. The board of directors, consisting of Misses Jane Winfree, Janet Lake, Ethel Einstein and M. K. Tancill, met before the dinner meeting. Reports were submitted by the chairmen of the various committees. The report on the girls' service work was given and the outline for the plans for 1927 were approved by the club.

The officers of the club are Mrs. John G. Capers, president, Mrs. Sallie V. H. Pickett, first vice president; Mrs. Helen Ray Hagner, second vice president; Miss Anne E. Henderson, third vice president, and Mrs. M. K. Home, treasurer. Miss Elsie Pierce is secretary of the club.

Tuesday is president day at the Woman's City club when Mrs. J. Garfield Riley will meet informally club members and their friends and attend to the club business. The hours of tea will be from 3 to 6 o'clock. Members are invited to take advantage of this opportunity to become better acquainted with the president and each other.

The Tuesday evening free-and-easy acution section will have as hostesses Miss Mary E. Gott and Miss Meda Martin. Instructing will be Mrs. W. G. Sears, Miss Gladys Gordon and Mrs. George M. Talbot. Guests of members last week were Miss F. H. Tuck, Miss Grace M. Paul, Miss Mae C. Riley, Miss Olney, Miss Gantt and Miss Kenyon. Club members playing for the first time this season were Mrs. Snyder, Miss Alice Potts, Mrs. C. M. Vosbury, Miss Elsie Davis, Mrs. G. Russell, Miss Henrietta Olding and Mrs. H. G. Gantt.

The child welfare committee announces Dr. Richmond as speaker at the open meeting Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock at the clubhouse. His subject will be "Child Psychology." Other speakers on interesting subjects will be present. The child welfare committee is uniting with the public relief committee in the holding of a "doll and toy shower" Saturday afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock at the club, 22 Jackson place. Children of the District are invited to bring their cast-off toys and Christmas tree decorations for the little children of Caney Creek Community center. Mrs. E. J. Brennan and Miss Adela Heaven will receive and distribute the gifts.

Dr. A. Frances Foye will preside at the forum luncheon on Saturday at 1 p. m., when William I. Corbin will speak on "What Makes a Book Live." Reservations are limited to 100.

The tea given at the club this afternoon, from 4:30 to 6 o'clock, will have as honor guest Miss Lucy Gardner, a lecturer from England. Miss Gardner is in Washington for a few days as guest of the Washington Federation of Churches. Members admitted on November 9 to the club with their sponsors will also be honor guests this afternoon. They are:

Mmes. Alda M. Bird, Robert J. Bourke, Louis F. Bradley, Genevieve A. Brown, G. H. Chasmar, Edward W. Chatterton, William S. Cleary, Metta R. Cole Catherine M. Creeron, T. H. Dawson, Jules A. The Zonta Club of Business and Professional Women held its weekly meeting with a luncheon at the Raleigh hotel Wednesday, the president, Miss Jane Bartlett, presiding. The guest of honor and principal speaker was Mrs. Alice Van Leer Carrick, of Hanover, Vt., authoress and collector of antiques. Mrs. Carrick spoke chiefly on the delights of antique collecting, giving many humorous anecdotes of her experiences. Mrs. Carrick was introduced by Mrs. Rachel Forbush Wood. Another guest of the club was Mr. Schafer, of the Cosmopolitan club, who issued an invitation to the club members to attend the annual dinner of the Federation of Civic Clubs, to be given Saturday at the Mayflower hotel. This is the first time women's clubs have been included in this event, and it is expected to be an epoch making affair.

Zonta was glad to welcome as a new member Miss Mildred Barthelow, who was introduced by Miss Jessie LaSalle.

Reports were given by the different captains of the teams in charge of work for the national convention of the Federation of Zonta Clubs, to be held in Washington next May. Mrs. Lucia Hendley announced a dinner to be given in her studio Saturday, December 4. Miss Leonore Reed invited all to a bridge party at the Grace Dodge hotel Saturday. Among the other guests were Miss Mary Thom and Mrs. John Stewart.

The matinee dance given by the Junior Hadassah Sunday, November 7, at the L'Aiglon proved to be more than a success. Approximately 150 couples attended, which included a number of out-of-town guests. All proceeds will go toward the upkeep of the educational institution for orphans and their adoption.

The Hadassah will give their first hike of the year next Sunday. They will all meet at the center at 8:30 in the morning for Great Falls. In order not to burden themselves with luncheons they will stop some nice place for their dinner. More than 85 girls are expected to attend.

The Hadassah sees that its members get rewarded for their hard labor. So after each affair the members can look forward to some nice surprise. On Sunday, October 31, the Juniors gave a closed dance at the Dupont Studio. To make it more interesting all the girls masked. The Montana's orchestra kept the club in happy spirits.

The Sixteenth Street Heights club held its regular program meeting at the home of Mrs. Thomas Humphrey, jr., 1215 Fern street, Tuesday. Mrs. John W. Frizzell was the guest speaker and gave a talk on "The American Home." Mrs. Clarence A. Reed was made a member of the club. Guests were Miss A. M. Walker, Mrs. Pitcher and Mrs. Fuller. The club costume party, which was held at Mrs. Thomas W. Marshall's, was voted a most successful affair.

On Tuesday afternoon Mrs. J. Enos Ray, county president, called a meeting of her department chairmen at the home of Mrs. Preston, Cottage City, to discuss work to be pursued during the year and to receive reports on that already accomplished. The Yearbook will be ready for distribution to the clubs within a short time, it is hoped.

Mrs. W. Allen Griffith, chairman department of applied education, held a meeting of her club representatives on Monday at the Y. W. C. A. rooms to disseminate information on the projects to be undertaken. It is planned to conduct a county-wide contest among the graded and rural schools in beautifying the school grounds, prizes of $8 and $6 to be awarded in each class. Stress was laid upon the need of illustrated lectures for the school children and the importance of including one educational speaker in the club programs.

The Women's club of Beltville met at the home of Mrs. Fillmore Beall on Monday at 2 p. m., with fifteen members and two guests present.

A short business meeting was followed by readings most delightfully rendered by Mrs. W. C. Wells. Announcement was made of a Christmas party, the date to be fixed later.

At the last business meeting of the Women's club of Cottage City, held at the home of Mrs. Mattingly, the president appointed Mrs. P. P. Greenwood to serve as chairman of the committee on education, and Mrs. Muse Russ as chairman on legislation. A card party was given by the club Monday at the firehouse, for the benefit of the local fire department.

As has been the custom each year, members were requested to bring to the next meeting donations of food to fill several baskets for needy families of our county at Thanksgiving. The social meeting of the month will be held at the home of Mrs. Joseph Robicheau, on Central avenue, with Mrs. Harold Russ and Mrs. George Mack, assistants, the program being in charge of Mesdames Mattingly, Marshall and Loche.

The Progress club of College Park held a well attended meeting Wednesday afternoon at the home of the president, Mrs. C. O. Appleman, and several new members were presented for nomination to membership in the club. Mrs. Close, as director, gave a report of the semiannual meeting held at Beaver Dam club on October 22.

The delegates appointed to attend the County Community council were Mesdames E. M. Pickens, Fred Clarke, R. S. Allen and H. Fix.

The revision of constitution and by-laws was discussed and Mesdames Waite, Close and Creese were appointed as a committee to have the revised matter put in printed form for distribution. It was cited that in response to a request of the club, "School-Slo" signs had been erected on the Washington-Baltimore boulevard by the State roads commission.

A very complete report was read by Mrs E. M. Pickens, chairman on education, who asked the club's cooperation in furthering the county school contest for beautifying the school grounds. The club's pro rata share of $1 was authorized, same to be used in securing prizes. Mrs. E. Powers, chairman on scholarship, reported on the work of her committee.

Mrs. George Harrison, chairman of group one, appointed by the ways and means committee, announced that the rummage sale was a wonderful success, and a rising vote of thanks was given to this committee. It was reported that greetings of the club had been sent to Mrs. B. E. Carmichael, a member who had been seriously ill.

ART EXHIBITS OPEN TODAY AND TUESDAY

By ADA RAINEY.

SEVERAL exhibitions are to open this afternoon and on Tuesday which promise to be decidedly out of the ordinary in interest. At the Arts club this afternoon, with welcome tea to the artists, will be shown the works of Anne Akers and Herbert W. Faulkner. Mrs. Akers is a resident of Washington and a member of the Arts club. She has been painting and studying in Provincetown several years and her paintings will concern old Provincetown.

Mr. Faulkner recently has returned from Italy, where he has been living for some time. His paintings will be on view at the Arts club for two weeks and then will be shown in the National gallery.

This is the first time his work has been shown here, but he has exhibited in Paris, New York and Chicago. He lives at present in Washington, Conn., is a graduate of Yale university and has passed his time mostly overseas studying and working under several of the great artists. He has made perhaps his greatest success in painting Venetian scenes, having lived in Venice many years.

Life to Work.

Mr. Faulkner has devoted his life to his work and as a lecturer, a wood carver and an author is equally delightful. His studio in the woods which surrounds his home in Washington, Conn., is a mecca for travelers coming from and going to Europe. He is allied more closely with Italy and France than with America. He will give a lecture at the Arts club November 23, at the Washington club and at St. Thomas Parish hall later on "Italian Gardens." He will be the guest of Mrs. William Wheatley.

Garden Exhibit.

Blondells Malone, an artist from South Carolina, will give an exhibition of her paintings of "Gardens of South Carolina," beginning Tuesday and continuing for two weeks, at the Tabard inn, 1739 N street. These paintings are large oils and are concerned mostly in depicting the crepe myrtle trees which were brought to South Carolina from India and the lovely "Pride of India."

Miss Malone has been a great traveler and there are few quarters of the globe where she has not painted. She has painted in India, Japan, France, Greece, Italy and many other localities where there are lovely gardens. In Tokyo she was the guest of the bishop of Tokyo. Later, after the earthquake, she had an exhibition in Grace church, New York city, and sent half the proceeds of the entrance fees and the sales to the bishop for the hospital which he was building. The exhibition was of the paintings of Japan, painted while she was there.

Shown in London.

At the Royal Horticultural society in London her paintings also were exhibited. At the Grand Central Palace, New York city, she had a large space occupied by her garden scenes. This was in the Southern exhibition held there two summers ago. One critic says of these paintings: "New York artlovers will find them more attractive and even more sincere love of her theme than anything of the kind shown in the country."

Filled with the glory of color that flowers offer, exhaling their delicious odor and breathing the freshness of out of doors, for she paints everything direct from nature, they bespeak a not only sincere realism but they have a poetic aspect as well. A poignant attribute of her pictures is that each one radiates individual character and reflects to a marked degree the personality of the owner.

"In her long study of every sort of flower, the artist is able to infuse into her work their supreme quality until the various species may be quite as well understood in her pictures as in nature."

Not Understood.

The many-sided activities of the Smithsonian institution are not understood as well as they might be. For instance, there are the numerous traveling exhibitions. These exhibitions are concerned with etchings, the difference between a line engraving and a wood engraving. At present, when there is such interest in etchings and wood block prints, it is important to know the difference.

Can Be Borrowed.

A traveling exhibition answers these questions. It can be borrowed on application to the institution. It is free to libraries, schools, women's clubs, &c. All that is necessary is to pay the express charges of the exhibits which are mounted on cardboard and have explanations. The purpose of the Smithsonian exhibit is to show graphically the difference between the various kinds of prints and to furnish the visitor with the basic information necessary to identify various types.

This is a long step toward an understanding and thorough appreciation of the great array of original and reproductive work which forms such an important part of our everyday life. The display is an introduction to the permanent collections scattered throughout the country in libraries, museums and other collections.

The exhibit consists of series of specimens with brief descriptions telling how the various types of prints are made with notes on their history. It contains nothing spectacular, but includes good average specimens representing the better grades which were produced in the past or are being produced now. Last year the 6 different exhibits were displayed in 55 separate places scattered through 15 States.

One of Activities.

The sending out of these exhibitions is but one of the many activities that take the attention of Ruel Pardee Tolman, who is of the department of graphic arts. Mr. Tolman arranges all the exhibitions of etchings and prints that are shown in the Smithsonian building and renewed every month.

Mr. Tolman also is an artist of great versatility. He was for some years art instructor in the Corcoran school of art. This summer he has been painting some interesting things which he worked on while passing his vacation on Chesapeake bay. They are small paintings in oil of the sea and sky and the varying changes that the artist has caught while painting from a fishing boat.

"The North Star" is a particularly lovely impression in dark blues and blue greens which is universal in feeling. There is the feeling of mystery and space and grandeur which is often the last thing that the artist can paint. These various impressions of the water and sky of Chesapeake bay are Whistlerian in effect. They are poetical, filled with the feeling of water and sky under changing lights painted to express the response of the artist to the moods of nature. Their technique is delicate, subtle and lovely in color. This series of eight paintings is individualistic in its expression and wholly delightful. A portrait of an old oyster fisherman, Capt. Jimmy Joyce, shows much strength and vitality in execution.

Miniature Expert.

Mr. Tolman also is an expert on miniatures, especially of the early American period and on American portraits. He has a large and varied collection of paintings in his studio of some of the American painters of great ability of a decade or so ago that are rare and of great interest to the appreciator of art.

Nelly Tolman has two miniatures in the Philadelphia exhibition of miniature painters. They are of Margaret Gill and Mrs. Elizabeth C. Wickersham, of Washington. These miniatures are the first ever painted by the artist, so it is the more remarkable that the Pennsylvanis Society of Miniature Painters should accept her first work.

Taken by Jury.

Catherine C. Critcher has a painting in the Carnegie International Exhibition. This painting is one of the 31 accepted by the jury. There are 105 paintings by Americans shown, and all were invited except the 31. These were chosen out of 800 sent to the jury. So it is a real distinction that has come to Miss Critcher in being chosen out of this large number. She is the only Washington artist represented in the exhibition.

Still Discussed.

The Pittsburg International Exhibition still is being greatly discussed among the critics and artists, most of whom seem to believe that it is not particularly satisfactory from the standpoint of good art or as a representative showing of international art. The eight prize paintings come in for much criticism. They are spoken of by Arthur Stanley Riggs, editor of Art and Archaeology in this manner: "All the rest of the eight mentioned pictures are dull. One is struck by their uniform lack of character. Neither bad nor good, they convey a strong sense of triteness, almost of hack work."

The current number of the magazine has several interesting articles on art, notably one on "The Vienna Painters," by A. S. Levertus, which is illustrated profusely. Another article on "Luxor and Armageddon," by James H. Breasted, is noteworthy.

Boy and Girls.

May Ashton has been doing some unusual and compelling portraits. These portraits are of young girls and a boy, but they convey an impression entirely removed from the ordinary portrait painted for the family. Mrs. Ashton has the power of seizing the essential characteristics of the sitter and emphasizing this essential and making it effective, decorative and vital.

By Fellow Artist.

The Business High school perhaps is the last place that one would think of looking for a vital and new expression in art, but this was the rather astonishing thing that was discovered through the kindly instrumentality of a fellow artist, who so admired these portraits by Mrs. Ashton and called attention to her work as of undoubted values.

Mrs. Ashton has an entirely individual manner of painting. She uses a thick impasto, which she does not hesitate to rub out and paint over again and again, if the result does not please her. She is not satisfied easily in her work, which she calls merely experimenting. Her experiments are of intense interest. Her color is particularly rich and vibratory. It is neither flat nor heavy, but shimmers with a light that seems to come from the canvas. She seeks to get the background of the character she is painting. It is not merely the outward surface qualities that she is seeking to present. In each model she sees that which they are the embodiment of.

For instance, in painting a little Swedish girl, it was the long line of stalwart, uncompromising ancestors, the snow-laden fields and their effect on the character of the girl that she was seeing and painting. This makes character interpretation something beyond mere surface representation. It comes forth as an expression of the physiological background of the personality of the sitter and thus adds a richness and value totally lacking in most portraits.

Natural Pose.

There is a swing and movement about some of the figures that is arresting. The poses are natural, one that the body of the model falls naturally into and so is convincing. Paint and personalities are strangely attractive in the hands of this almost unknown artist.

Her artistic history is unusual, too. For a short time she was a student at the Corcoran school, but did not take up oil, as she studied mostly drawing and black and white. Then she went to Munich, but was not particularly fortunate in the school or the teachers under whom she studied. She then did a little work at the Critcher School of Painting in Washington. But as she had to teach all day she did not arrive until just as the light was failing, so her time was short.

Mrs. Ashton has been teaching drawing at the Business High school for years and has done all her painting after school hours, which meant after teaching more than 100 students a day. But she was determined to paint, so she set up her easel in her classroom after school hours and has painted her pupils for lack of other models, with the result that she has got something original, and interpretative of the youth of today in a unique form. She is almost entirely self-taught, entirely so in oil. She says she has found her bluebird at home, which has proved her treasure.

Opens January 23.

It is announced by the secretary of the Society of Washington Artists, Minor S. Jameson, that the thirty-sixth annual exhibition of works in oil and sculpture will be held in the Corcoran Gallery of Art from Sunday, January 23, to February 20, 1927. Circulars and entry cards will be sent out about December 1.

New Magazine.

A new art magazine, the Art Digest, has made its bow to the public. It suggests a compendium of the art news, the opinions and criticisms of the writers on art in different cities and in Europe and America. It is welcomed by all who are interested in art and matters pertaining to art, and promises to be an important element.

The first editorial, by Peyton Boswell, strikes a note that is toward progressiveness, and the outlook toward beauty in mind and heart. He says: "As a disseminator of significant art news and opinion, it should serve to bind together the art world, composed of the appreciators of beauty and its creators, into a cohesive whole, the thoughts and achievements of one part known and understook by all the other parts." He says the growth in the appreciation of things of beauty has been tremendous.

There are at present 30,000 artists craftsmen and designers in the nation making their living through art. The increase in the number of art museums, private collections and art schools has been astonishing. This is encouraging, for all that increases understanding in art means greater and deeper cultural attainment.

Art surely is not a something added as an ornamentation, but an expression of the things really deep, true and significant in life. It is the expression of life and can not be divorced from it. The life of a people can be gauged by its expression in houses, articles of daily life, paintings and sculpture and all forms of art expression.

Simon Etchings.

There are a group of etchings in color by T. F. Simon at the Dunthorne gallery that are especially delightful and which there was not space to review last week. They are mostly etchings of Paris, but are not hung on the walls of the exhibition. They are the most intimate expressions of Paris, done in delightful color. Simon's line is firm, true and subtle. He has no tendency to escape the limitations of his line, which he makes the means of his free expression. His color is fresh and harmonious. His greens particularly effective, of which he uses a great deal.

He knows and loves Paris and seems to have access to her heart, for his views are interpretative of the "feel" of the city. This is true of "Entrance to the Market," "Rag Gatherers, Pont Neuf" and the "Bird Merchants of Paris." "Silhouette Prague," with the river in the foreground and the picturesque castle in the distance, is impressive.

There also are some newly received Pennell etchings that are in the best manner of this artist. Several lithographs of the streets and buildings of Berlin and of Works castle are most unusual and effective.

* * * *

Of Interest Here.

Three etchings by Emily Burley Wait hold much interest for Washingtonians. The view of the White House, the Capitol and of the door of the Arts club are full of charm and beauty.

An original wood block, made of boxwood by Lepere, showing the original wood engraving with the black and white plainly discerned, is another of the rare and interesting things that are part of the present exhibition, which will last throughout the week.

Silver Plate.

Old silver and Sheffield plate on exhibition at Francise shop should not be missed by lovers of arts and crafts work. This is the largest collection of old silver and Sheffield in the country. It was made by Brainard Lemon, of Louisville, Ky., and contains many pieces signed by Hester Bateman, Philip Randell, Benjamin Smith and Peter and William Bateman. The silver is of the time of George I, II and III, and is heavy and massive in design.

The designs of the Sheffield are even more attractive than the silver. Much of the silver bears the crest of old families.

In the collection is the most complete service made by Paul Stoor, silversmith to George III. Many of the pieces are exquisite in design. The collection will be on view during the week at 1747 Rhode Island avenue.

"Juanita," by Catharine C. Critcher, of Washington, one of the 31 paintings selected by the jury out of 800 sent in by American painters to Carnegie exhibition at Pittsburgh.

Book Notes

Doubleday, Page & Co., Walt Whitman's publishers, have issued recently an authorized abridged edition of "Leaves of Grass," edited by the distinguished Whitman scholar, Emory Holloway. In this edition, Prof. Holloway has retained all of the favorite poems, indeed all of the works which could be called great, eliminating only the objectionable passages and the lesser things. He has also included a generous and representative selection of Whitman's prose works. The little volume will slip into the pocket and can be carried around conveniently by the student and lover of poetry.

Thomas Hardy brought out his first volume of poems when he was nearly 60. He was already famous and had been placed in his historical niche as a great Victorian novelist when he surprised the literary world by suddenly becoming a major poet of the twentieth century. Last year, at 85, he brought out a new volume of verse, "Human Shows, Far Phantasies, Songs, and Trifles," and the contents of this volume have now been included in the new edition of his "Collected Poems," which will be published by Macmillan on the 26th of this month. ($4.00.)

Rudyard Kipling's new book, "Debits and Credits," has just been added to the Outward Bound edition of the works of Rudyard Kipling which is published by Charles Scribner's Sons and sold by subscription only. This is Mr. Kipling's first book of new fiction in ten years.

After Tolstoy's death, his daughter, Alexandra, whom he had made his literary executor, gave certain of his unpublished manuscripts to a close personal friend of Tolstoy for publication in Moscow. That being impossible the friend and his coeditors recently issued the volume in Paris, for the benefit of the Russian Society for the Diffusion of Tolstoy's Works; and English translations of these twelve stories and a full-length play "The Contaminated Family," will be published early in November by E. P. Dutton & Co. The translations are by C. J. Hogarth, Lydia Turin and H. M. Lucas. The title given the collection is "Stories and Dramas."

Knud Rasmussen, noted Danish explorer, recently returned from the Putnam expedition to Greenland, will lecture before the American Geographic society in New York on November 23. Rasmussen has crossed northern Greenland several times and last year made a dangerous sledge joorney from Greenland to Alaska in the unknown territory of the American archipelago. His book, "Across Arctic America," describing this trip will be brought out next year by Putnam's.

"The Time of Man," by Elizabeth Madox Roberts, has just been chosen as the outstanding current novel by the selecting committee of the Book-of-the-Month club in its October choice. In spite of the number of imposing names on this month's list the committee selected this novel of a practically unknown woman. The committee consists of Henry Seidel Canby, William Allen White, Dorothy Canfield, Christopher Morley and Heywood Broun.

"The Time of Man" was almost immediately recognized by critics to be an outstanding American novel. Sherwood Anderson, one of the first to read it, wired the publishers, the Viking Press: "It is a wonderful performance. I am humble before it." Carl Van Doren, Edward Garnett, Harry Hansen, Keith Preston Fanny Butcher, Robert Morss Lovett, William Rose Benet, Mrs. C. A. Dawson-Scott, T. S. Stribling, Henry Long Stuart, were among the many who hailed this novel. In a season to which the best-known authors have contributed books the name of Elizabeth Madox Roberts emerged suddenly and fully. As one critic stated: "She steps with a first novel to the front rank of American writers."

Boni & Liveright, the publishers of Theodore Dreiser's "An American Tragedy," announce a prize of $500 for the best essay on the question: "Was Clyde Griffiths, the central figure of 'An American Tragedy,' guilty of Roberta Alden's death and therefore subject to the penalty of capital punishment for first degree murder?"

No recent work of fiction has created the furore that has fallen to the lot of this biography of Clyde Griffiths. It has been praised by the greatest critics in the country. It has been called "the Mount Everest of American fiction" by John Macy, author of "The Story of the World's Literature," and "the greatest American novel in our generation" by Joseph Wood Krutch of "The Nation."

Latest Books Tersely Reviewed

RED GILBERT'S FLOATING MENAGERIE. By Russell Gordon Carter (The Penn Publishing Co., Philadelphia).

In this book the author has solved one of the most difficult problems for American parents, namely, the selection of wholesome and yet up-to-date reading matter for their children, particularly for the boys of their households. For boys demand adventure and red-blooded people in their books and if they can not get such material from the works of trustworthy writers they will get the thrillers and successors of the old dime novels and feast upon them in secret.

This second book of the Red Gilbert tells how Red and his chum evolve a plan for making money. The scheme is to buy a houseboat and care for the pets of families during their summer vacations. This modern Noah's ark is, of course, as beset with perils and tribulations and funny stories as was the ark of old and some of the adventures of the floating menagerie would win a laugh from the most hardened of adults.

MARGE. By Nelia Gardner White (Penn Publishing Co., Philadelphia).

Nor are little girls neglected in the supply of books for the Christmas trade from this most progressive of firms. In "Marge" there is a real story of the sacrifice and desires and heartaches of youth that bring tears very close to the surface, as well as frequent smiles to the lips of older readers. Marge is the light of the parson's family into which she is born until an accident renders her a cripple. How she is cured and the spirit of unselfishness her mishap bred in her family and friends is really a touching tale and one that any little girl will enjoy reading.

A YANKEE GIRL AT VICKSBURG. By Alice Turner Curtis (The Penn Publishing Co., Philadelphia).

One can easily see that this June Prescott, who is the heroine of this story, had rather an unhappy time of it at Vicksburg during the civil war. But she survived it, and while the tale that she crossed the river and told Grant how to enter the city is apocryphal, it is none the less thrilling for being simply "fiction."

The book was written without bitterness or sectional feeling, and there is much historical data interwoven with the story itself. June Prescott certainly was a brave girl and there is no doubt but that she was a replica of hundreds of similar heroines on both sides in the war between the States.

THE PORTRAIT OF ZELIDE. By Geoffrey Scott (Charles Scribners Sons, New York).

The publishers of this volume quote the statement of Dr. Joseph Collins regarding it that it "is the best fictional biography that has been published in English." While this comment might be termed a trifle extravagant yet there is much to justify it in the biography itself.

Mr. Scott has made this remarkable character live anew in his pages.

Furthermore, he paints with utmost fidelity the background of her life bringing in a most realistic manner the personages with which she associated who are remembered in either literature, the arts or court life of her times.

In the eighteenth century in which Zelide flourished also was a certain Boswell, a quaint character chiefly cherished in history because of his utmost loyalty and devotion to Dr. Samuel Johnson. He also was a friend of Zelide. Benjamin Constant was another friend of this brilliant feminine star of the moment.

Mr. Scott has a lucid, unique and unforgettable style of phraseology. One could read his book with pleasure simply for the felicity of his phrases but it is much more than mere fine writing. It is the recreation of a character that in the brief span of living allotted to men and women on this sphere wrote ner name in flame on the golden scroll of time.

FLORIDA WILD FLOWERS. By Mary Frances Baker (The MacMillan Co., New York).

In the Florida of today, the mecca of the pleasure seeker and the money-maker, one is apt to forget the natural beauties of a land whose very name tells of the magic of floral richness which abounds within its borders.

With the lavash hand of mother nature her stores of wild flowers are unequaled in this country and indeed in the world. The exotic fragrance of these year-around blossoms make the very air of this happy land a joy merely to breathe.

The author has written a comprehensive handbook more than a manual of botany and yet sufficiently technical in terms and descriptions to satisfy the most ardent nature lover of her real knowledge of the subject of which she writes.

In the book are described more than 700 separate species, including the insect catchers, air plants, tree orchids and some garden plants related to the native flora. The book is splendidly illustrated.

From the title one expects to be introduced to still another of the series of futarists modern books, all seeming to be grist for the novelist mill at present, but receives a pleasant surprise to find that while this book is written in a new and original style there is continuity and coordination of theme elements of which no self-respecting ultra modernist work would be guilty.

The author has employed a deft, delicate and elusive manner of telling her story which, however, does not really deviate from the purist narrative style. Miss Flanner paints her characters and situations with clear-cut strokes of letting the shadings and the subtle little shadows be filled in the imagination of the reader. This is probably where she differes from other writers in present day style because they more generally give the shadows and shadings leaving, the readers to furnish the outlines themselves, often with fatal results in regard to a real understanding of just what the book may mean.

Miss Flanner has used a thick and heavy pencil to outline the really remarkable and elusively true to life character of Goldstein, the Jewish theatrical producer, who is so strange a mixture of sentimentality and sensuality. While the outstanding character of the book, the writer and many of the readers would doubtless say is Della Poole, the scenic designer, there is no doubt that in this characterization of the Jew, the author has given us something new to think about. The book from the beginning to the end is a complicated skein of emotional adventures and intellectual wanderings. If there is that raw frankness which so many decry with uplifted hands in modern novels it is skillful and inoffensively presented. We do not say that this book will become a best seller, but we will not be surprised if it does.

This is not the book of a tourist but the impressions received by a lifetime of actual living in many lands interspersed with incidents and adventures which make it most readable.

The writer, the son of an employe of the British foreign office, whose travels really began from the cradle, graphically describes the Europe and Central America he knew as a child and the South Africa he explored during his service with the British colonial forces.

HAWAII TODAY. By R. C. Wriston, lieutenant air service, U. S. A. (Doubleday, Page & Co., New York.)

The outposts of the United States are always of special interest to the citizen of this country and those of us who have not been able to view in actuality the garden spots of Hawaii are grateful to Lieut. Wriston not only for the pictures taken in his line of duty as a specialist in aerial photography in the air service, but for the well written word pictures which form the text of this interesting book. Lieut. Wriston made the first flight to Kilaiea volcano, the first flight by airplane to the islands of Kohoolawe, Lanai, Niihua and Kauls Rock, and still holds the record as the only man who has visited all the islands of the group by airplane.

"BEYOND THE MILKY WAY." By George Ellery Hale, honorary director of the Mount Wilson observatory of the Carnegie institute of Washington. (Charles B. Scribner's Sons, New York.)

In this volume some of the newest discoveries—both in astronomy dealing with infinitely large and in physics dealing with the infinitely small—are outlined. The first chapter, on "The Oriental ancestry of the telescope," is most interesting and instructive, and describes the devices used by the Egyptians, Chaldeans, Greeks, Chinese and Hindus before the invention of that instrument.

SHIP MODEL MAKING. By Capt. E. Armitage McCann. (The Norman W. Henley Publishing Co., New York.)

"The Boy's Delight" would be a true additional title for this volume, for it has elements in it to lure any lad into whose hands it may chance to fall.

Nothing is better for youth than to try to build and create. The wide-awake American lad will find healthful occupation and perhaps an awakening to latent genius by following the directions for ship model making to be found in this comprehensive volume. Its inclusion in the Christmas stocking will mean happy hours for the boy during the year and a sense of security as to his occupation on many a rainy day and holiday.

NEW SCIENCE SERIES. Fatalism or Freedom, by C. Judson Herrick. Myth in Primitive Psychology, by Bronislaw Malinowski. Science and Poetry, by T. A. Richards. (W. W. Norton, New York.)

These volumes are part of a new series which aims to present new scientific trends and discoveries to the public in a form, while not too technical, on the other hand avoids the pitfalls of overpopularizing what must always be expert information.

The first three volumes have been edited by C. K. Ogden. They are handsomely and durably bound and have a good typographical appearance.

In "Myth in Primitive Psychology" the learned scientist who discourses there has elevated "Mythology" to the full dignity of a science. He gives due credit to the myth maker as the preserver of otherwise forgotten information. He points out that the myth in a savage community is not merely a story told, but a reality lived.

At first thought, the relationship between science and poetry would seem very remote. It is not, however, and sometimes the poets have become prophets of achievements of the men of science, even as Tennyson saw "the heavens filled with commerce, argosies of magic sails" long before airships were considered a feasible scientific feat.

As Mr. Richards declares, the visualization of the word pictures of poets is, in itself, a scientific fact. He also commends the poet's command of words used expertly. This gives him a command over life itself—one of the aims of science in all its phases.

The author does not hesitate to discuss—after a microscopic examination—the output of living poets. He prophesies that in the mental chaos that may result poetry will play a remedial role.

"Fatalism or Freedom" on the title page is declared to be "A Biologist's Answer." To what? This question comes naturally to the mind of the reader, but it is soon answered. The question is "Whence are we and why do we come."

In our natures war incessantly the biological and the human control. Quite correctly, Mr. Herrick defines "freedom" as the "liberty of law." There is no other type which can withstand the corroding touch of time.

There is a strong trace of the improbable in this new book which will appeal especially to lovers of romantic works. This author has the art of making the reader accept the impossible as truth.

WILLA CATHER, whose latest work, "My Mortal Enemy," has recently been published.

BARDS BRAVE CRITICS AND DULL MARKET

It is at least reassuring that some one is trying to write poetry in these modern days when the dollar sign is displayed on most literary goods. For poetry, never a lucrative trade at best, is less so nowadays, except for our popular bards who sometimes, alas, sacrifice poesy for mammon.

A good word should be said for publishers who risk their hard cash on the dubious market of poetry. They are the real heroes of modern verse and credit should be given to them for their temerity and sportsmanship.

In "Moon Shadows," by Sherman Ripley (Harold Vinal, New York), one catches more than a glimpse of poetry at times. It is not great poetry, it may not even outlast a first edition, but it is a sincere, honest effort to add to the sum total of the world's greatest treasure, its poetry.

Strange to say, Mr. Ripley rises to his greatest heights when he steps aside from accepted poetic themes and embodies the everyday happenings of the lives of men and women in poetic form.

For instance there is real poetic thought in these eight lines:

AN EPISODE IN THE LIFE OF SING TOY.

Unloosed the secret catch, removed the slide
That closed the bells of the god divine—
The sacred rubies burned and glowed inside.

He reached with eager hands to seize his dream. * * *
Then, with a snap, the crocodile-like snare
Came crashing down! The priest was heard him scream,
And smilingly they crucified him there.

From a feminine pen comes another sheaf of poetic inspiration in "Flesh and Spirit," by Kate L. Dickinson. (Harold Vinal, New York.)

One of her critics has said that "Miss Dickinson is a poet of delicate perceptions." Even the most casual reading of her latest volume of poems will bear out this statement. Miss Dickinson likewise has the gift of brevity, always a desirable quality where one's genius is not overpowering. Only a Shakespeare or a Milton, or similar star folk, can write poetry at length and not weary either the muse or the reader.

Glancing over the vignettes which charm here and there in the attractive pages of this volume, the eye and heart are caught by the sheer beauty of this one:

CONSECRATED GROUND.

She does not sleep in consecrated ground
Within a walled and populous town of death.
Her soul loved solitude.
Now, in the deep spruce wood
She sleeps alone.
Only the shy young deer approach the stone,
A rough-hewn granite full of ruby fire,
(Her life was fire).
Only the wandering wind, the climbing briar.
It is her own desire
To sleep alone.

Ninety-nine out of one hundred critics will call that poetry.

W. Thompson Writes Of Central America

"Rainbow Countries of Central America," a book describing social and economic problems of that part of the world, by Wallace Thompson, local author and newspaper man, appeared on the market last week.

Mr. Thompson, State Department correspondent for the United States Daily and formerly with the Associated Press and Christian Science Monitor, spent many years in the countries of which he writes. This is his fourth book, others being "The Peoples of Mexico," "The Mexican Mind" and "Trading With Mexico."

ELECTRIC OUTLETS CAN BE INSTALLED AT SMALL EXPENSE

Single Plugs May Be Converted Into Convenience Additions by Duplex Disks.

LITTLE EXTRA WIRING REQUIRED UNDER PLAN

New Taps Can Be Placed in Rooms, One or Two at a Time.

By SALLY E. DAVIDSON.

Wiring for extra electric convenience outlets, wall brackets and lights ought to be done before winter really closes in. Therefore now is a good time for people to think about the comfort and convenience they could add to their home lives by making it easier for them to use electric appliances. It is sometimes hard to say just how many outlets are "enough" in a house, but there is this to remember: People are constantly discovering new ways in which to make electricity help them, so that what seemed "enough" a year or two ago never is "enough" now. It pays to try to keep up with electrical progress all the time so as not to miss any of the benefits.

But it is safe to assert that today there are few homes with sufficient electric outlets in every room in the house for the need. I speak from experience, for we have sixty outlets in a house of eight rooms and two baths, yet there are times I have felt even acutely the need for more.

Comfort and Convenience.

Electricity, considered from any point of view, is perhaps the only source of real comfort and convenience, and whether or not you are availing yourself of its full benefits depends on the wiring of your house—the wiring of every room in your house.

To begin with, let me say that adequate wiring need not become a big investment. You may have one or two outlets installed at a time as you can afford them. But even before undertaking this it would be best first to make the most of the old equipment. The majority of houses have nearly all single outlets, whereas the comfort and convenience of any house can be greatly enhanced by replacing the single with duplex outlets. This is a very simple process. It rarely requires any extra wiring. It is mostly replacement of the single outlet disk by a duplex. For a time, at least, this arrangement will provide additional convenience at very little cost.

Where to Install Outlets.

One question always arises when extra convenience outlets are considered, and that is where to install them. For the guidance of those unfamiliar I will set down those considered essential.

In the laundry there should be adequate light and two or three outlets. One near the tubs for connecting the washer, another near a window for the iron or ironer, and a third for a fan or heater. In the kitchen, in addition to lamps, there should be at least two outlets which can be used for connecting the electric cooker, any one or more of the table appliances, the electric kitchen unit, fan, heater, and the like. A triple outlet is adequate in the breakfast nook. If only a single is available use a double or triple portable outlet for preparing meals on table appliances.

There should be at least one floor plug in the dining room and one in the living room. The one in the dining room should be located under the table, while in the living room it should accommodate a table lamp or tea table. Four or five wall outlets each fourteen inches from the floor should be provided in living room and three in dining room.

Each sleeping room ought to have three or four readily to accommodate warming pads, the radiant heater, portable lamps, the pain relieving ultra-violet ray appliance, the hair curler, and the other devices by which electricity can add comfort and even luxury to the most modest sleeping room at little cost. The bath must have at least two, so that a heater can bring up the temperature in five minutes on the coldest morning and so that the shaving water in the bowl or the healthful early morning glass of drinking water can be heated to the right point speedily.

Express Firm Horse Gives Way to Truck

The number of horses used by the American Railway Express Co., which operates the largest fleet of commercial vehicles in the world, is decreasing in favor of electric and gas trucks.

The steady decrease in horse-drawn vehicles is shown in the following figures: January 1, 1923, 14,117 horses; January 1, 1924, 12,149 horses; January 1, 1925, 10,294 horses; January 1, 1926, 9,210 horses; August 1, 1926, 8,717 horses.

Electric League Briefs

By N. H. BARNES, Assistant Secretary.

One of the outstanding meetings of its career was held by the Electric league Thursday night. From the points of attendance, interest, important matters decided and enthusiastic promptness, this meeting will make history in the local industry, and may have a bearing on national electrical activities. More of this meeting will be said later.

For the year 1927, executive committee members have been announced by some of the groups of the Electric league. Executive committeemen are selected by the groups, of which there are at this time eight. Two members of the executive committee are appointed from each of the groups. This committee, in turn, at the December meeting of the league, announces the officers for the next year.

The following 1927 executive committeemen are known to have been elected: For the union contractors, Joseph Kirchner and Jere D. Mackessey; for the nonunion contractors, R. L. McDormand and E. R. Bateman; for the dealers, J. D. Harding and F. B. Dillon; for the fixture dealers, P. A. Davis and E. R. Brooks, and for the Central station, George P. Mangan and John H. Potts.

The jobbers group, the manufacturers' group and the "At Large" group will announce their executive committeemen for 1927 in these columns on next Sunday. With these sixteen members of the executive committee and any officers that are elected who are not already members of the committee, the Electric league expects to do much next year.

The nonunion contractors' group is holding meetings every month now. Officers for the next year in this group are R. P. Gibson, chairman, and Robert Smith, secretary. L. L. Hayes is retiring chairman.

The union contractors' group of the league will hold a meeting on next Wednesday, at 12:30 p. m. in the City club. L. T. Souder is chairman of this group this year and George B. Colbeck is secretary. Officers for the ensuing year have not yet been announced.

Already the new 1927 executive committee includes names of several men who will constitute new blood in the governing body of the Electric league. These men are R. L. McDormand and Jere Mackessy, both of whom have been active for some time in league affairs, but not on the executive committee, and E. R. Brooks, who is one of the newer members of the league.

On Monday the executive committee of the Electric league held one of the most snappy meetings that has been known to any similar organization of which we know. There were sixteen present, constituting the entire membership of the committee, with Howard P. Foley, chairman of the business promotion committee, present to submit recommendations. President L. T. Souder, of the Electric league, was happy to express his appreciation for this large and enthusiastic attendance.

The Electric league membership has during the past year been steadily increasing. It is of interest to note at this time that there are now 55 active members in the Electric, a total membership of 104. This membership record exceeds anything of the past, and is not the result of any drive, but of steady progress which results in the seeking of membership in the league by reputable electrical houses.

P. A. Davis, live-wire chairman of the lighting fixture group of the Electric league of Washington, D. C., is making a study of the conditions under which fixtures are installed in other cities in connection with city inspections. Mr. Davis, or "Pat," as he is best known, already has information from Pittsburgh, where he visited, and is lining up the status of Cleveland and Detroit in this connection.

Three members of the Electric league have been welcomed as an active part of the progress of the organization. The following two are members of the union contractors' group: E. B. Warren, 906 Twelfth street northwest, and Frank R. Holt, 731 Park road northwest, and in the fixture dealers' group, J. W. Johnson, of the Artcraft Light Shop, Inc., 741 Twelfth street northwest, has been added.

A recent meeting of the fixture dealers group of the Electric league, of which there are nine members, was attended by all but one, who was forced to be out of the city on business. The group meetings in the league are becoming rapidly one of the vital functions of the organization. At these meetings problems that are pertinent to the particular branch of the industry involved are discussed and action taken. This leaves time at league meetings for the discussion of matters that are of interest to every one present.

C. M. Marsh, manager of the Potomac Electric Appliance Co., and member of the Electric league, has been using two of his main assistants who are also members of the league, as professional barkers at the Food show. Fred Schuler and Francis Dillon have been able to secure and maintain deep interest at all times from everybody that visited the show. Biscuits were cooked electrically and passed out to an ever-ready-to-receive public. John C. Harding, another member of the Electric league, also had a prominent location at the Food show, and drew much attention to Whirldry washing machine and Royal vacuum cleaners.

Rail Electrification Increases.

Electrified railroading continues to spread throughout the world. In England the Southern is about to electrify 105 miles of existing line that is still steam-operated and expects to convert its present electrified mileage from an overhead wire system to the third-rail, direct-current system. It is estimated that the cost of the new electrification will reach $18,000,000, a heavy expenditure in itself, but one of a sort that has justified itself on many railroads the world over.

Meters That MEAN What They "Say!"

HERE'S where you can most appreciate accuracy! Every exacting test in the selection and installation of meters is for your protection. This rugged recording instrument is the subject of much scrutiny before it ever enters your home—once it is placed there you can be confident it will record with unfailing accuracy only the amount of electricity you actually use.

MEET the METER MAN!

ONE you seldom see—the Meter TESTER. Daily he tests the accuracy of a Meter which later may be placed in your home. His work assures accurate recording and billing to you. Of course, there are many Meter Testers here as every Meter in use is periodically tested on the premises it serves. In addition tests are made before it is placed in use. You can be confident that your Electric Meter records RIGHTLY at all times.

Your meter is more than just a gauge as to what your electric bill this month will be. It is a symbol of service—service that brings you energy of the highest efficiency at the lowest possible cost! With this service properly utilized in your home, it becomes the greatest creator of comfort for EVERYONE in it.

Every test possible is made to make our meters "mean what they 'say'"—to the fraction of a kilowatt. To you they say SERVICE—satisfying service—as supplied by

FUTURE HOLDS VAST LIQUID FUEL SUPPLY AT MANY SOURCES

Burning of Raw Coal Wastes Valuable By-Products, Says Heating Expert.

CROPS ON WASTE LAND WILL PRODUCE ALCOHOL

Extraction of Oil From Shale Is Expected to Provide Billions of Barrels.

By FRANK P. HARBIN.
General Manager, Automatic Heating Corporation.

A very few years may see it a penal offense to burn raw coal in any of our towns. While the popular view of coal is that it is something that is to be burned, the scientific view is tending to be precisely the opposite. It is that coal is too valuable to be burned, that to burn it is to squander it, that the by-products of coal—ammonia sulphate, benzol, creosote, tar, gas and crude light oils—are of greater moment than the coal itself, and that not until these by-products have been extracted should residuums, that is, the heat-producing constituents, be used.

Another very important source of liquid fuel supply is through the production of industrial alcohol from annual crops. Work on this was begun as far back as 1907 and is now more active than ever before. Most of this work is being done by Prof. C. A. Lucke, of Columbia university, under direction of the U. S. Bureau of Agriculture. Prof. Lucke is also actively engaged in research on oil production from coal tar. He says:

"When one undertakes to forecast the future, he is on dangerous ground, but in this fuel situation I have often had to take that position of sheer necessity, and so far my guesses have been more right than wrong over a period of more than twenty-five years. So far I have seen nothing to make me fear a shortage of petroleum products except possibly with reference to some particular specified grade. While there does not, however, seem to be any necessity for radical action on the assumption that there will be a shortage, it is good sense, both from the engineering and the business standpoint to have some kind of a practical plan in case there should be a shortage.

Annual Crops Offer Alcohol.

"My reviews of the situation have led me to believe that we have in sight, independent of shale, two huge unmeasured sources of liquid fuel, so far very little used. The first is alcohol produced by annual crops, and the second is coal tar and its light products like benzol, with heavy products like tar-oil produced by the processing of coal.

"On alcohol a good deal has been written and many plans made. My own early publications can be secured from the U. S. Department of Agriculture as the work was done at their request.

"When the time comes, and that time will be indicated by prices, tropical and semitropical lands can be planted to yield sugar and starch crops, from which alcohol can be produced. These will probably be waste lands such as the Amazon jungle, for example, and the work must be undertaken on a large scale, somewhat like the cultivation of rubber trees, which were planted to supply the demand for automobile tires. If carried out on a large scale in these districts, the alcohol will not be produced at the expense of food crops nor will it involve any present land values. It must, however, be undertaken on a large scale, large enough, for example, to permit of tank ship transportation. This alcohol can be mixed with other volatile fuel, like gasoline or benzol, and heavier constituents can be added like kerosene, for example. It is my opinion when alcohol comes, it will be used as a mixture product and not alone. This mixture can supply indefinitely all appliances that require volatility in the fuel.

Coal Provides Tar Oil.

"The coal supply of the United States is indefinitely large and the annual consumption at the present time is sufficient to yield, by processing, more tar oil than the present production of fuel oil. This processing is now being definitely studied, and we have reason to believe that in the not too distant future it will be commercialized to an extent that will materially reduce and ultimately eliminate the using of raw fuel burned as it is mined. The tar is formed by cooling the gases, yields light constituents more or less like gasoline, of which benzol is one, and it yields also a very excellent liquid fuel, tar oil and similar products to fuel oil except that they have higher ignition points.

"It seems to me that it is a matter of some importance for all concerned with fuel utilization to promote both of these activities, always, of course, subject to question of price and economic demand. I think, though, that sooner or later we might be justified or perhaps forced into the organization of an association for liquid fuel utilization. This might well be made to include the great mass of the public as consumers, but it is hard to get the public mind behind a thing of this kind. They might come in to help a real active organization with definite motives, and this might be built around the manufactures of appliances for utilizing liquid fuel to generate power and heat."

Billions of Barrels in Shale.

It is not alone to known producing oil wells that we can look for future supplies of oil fuel. Geological surveys show a vast future source in the beds of oil shale scattered all over the world. Victor C. Alderson, president of the Colorado School of Mines, who has made an extensive study of the location of oil shale and refining methods, explains the properties of oil shale as follows:

"Oil shale virtually contains no oil as such. It is a consolidated mud or clay deposit from which petroleum is obtained by distillation.

"Oil shale may be regarded as an unfinished oil field and is one of a long list of natural deposits which result from the decomposition of organic matter from plants or animals of a former geological era, like anthracite, bituminous and brown coal, peat, petroleum and asphaltum."

In a recent article in the Mining Congress Journal, December, 1925, Mr. Alderson gives some idea of the vast resources of oil available from oil shale. He says:

"The figures arrived at to express the future supply of oil from wells may seem impressive figures in relation to shale oil. The supply of oil derivable from shale in Colorado is conservatively placed at 80,000,000,000 barrels; in Kentucky, at 50,000,000,000. Together this amounts to 130,000,000,000 barrels. Colorado and Kentucky alone are considered because the facts are better known there than in other States. It is a well-known fact, however, that great beds of oil shale exist, which if added to the Colorado and Kentucky supply would indicate an available supply of shale oil that could be expressed only by a most liberal use of astronomical figures."

Shale Costs in Scotland.

The treatment of shale for the extraction of oil has formed a profitable industry in Scotland for about 70 years. The Scotch shale yields an average of less than 30 gallons of oil a ton, whereas the American shales give up between 40 and 50 gallons, with some even as high as 90 gallons to the ton. For the six months ended September 30, 1925, the average cost of mining shale in Scotland was $2.66 per ton of shale treated. Mr. Alderson, in commenting on this cost, says:

"The costs in Scotland have notably been high on account of technical and economic conditions, and do not offer a fair comparison with costs in the United States. It is reasonable to infer that an oil shale company, adequately financed and operating on the open cut plan, with a 500-ton daily capacity, can manufacture shale oil at a cost of approximately $1.25 a barrel.

"After a careful analysis of the entire situation, it is evident that if oil shale industry is adequately financed and properly managed it can be made a valuable adjunct in helping to meet the constantly increasing demand for oil."

It is a significant fact that the United States navy and far sighted oil companies have been active in securing oil shale acreage. In Colorado alone, a partial list of principal owners shows more than 300,000 acres have been taken up for this purpose.

A second source of supply is to be found in coal. The coal supply of the United States is indefinitely large and the annual consumption at the present time is sufficient to yield by processing more oil than the present production of oil through wells. Oil produced in this manner is already a large factor in the industry and several grades of gasoline largely come from this source.

AUTO BODIES MOVE TO OBTAIN COMFORT STATIONS ON ROADS

TEMME ORGANIZATION IS VITALLY INTERESTED

Work Emphasized to Create Sanitary Conditions for Tourists Over Country.

By W. H. BANCROFT.

A movement to obtain comfort stations as a vital adjunct to good roads is being contemplated actively by the Motorists' Association of Illinois, affiliated with the National Motorists' association, and by the Chicago Motor club, which is a branch of the American Automobile association.

Officials of these organizations declare that the increasing need of such stations along public highways, between cities and towns, is recognized by all motorists, for frequently when touring they must drive long distances in search of comfort facilities, which often are not only meager and antiquated, but insanitary.

One official points out that although a certain number of gasoline stations throughout the country, from coast to coast, are providing at least limited toilet accommodations for the motoring public, better, larger and more of these facilities are needed urgently. With the vast development of the auto industry, Americans, according to this official, rapidly are becoming a nation of motorists, and there are today many millions of car owners who motor extensively, and the deplorable absence of modern comfort stations along public highways is becoming each year a problem growing more and more acute.

It is felt that the solution of the problem is essentially one which each community can solve, and this demands cooperation among public-spirited and progressive agencies, such as chambers of commerce, business associations and civic bodies.

O. G. Temme, president of the Motorists association of Illinois, in a recent interview, declared that this matter was one in which his organization was interested vitally, and that he was going to inaugurate a campaign of publicity along this line in the Motorist, the official weekly newspaper of the association. He said he would be glad to receive pictorial suggestions with regard to types of motorist comfort stations in conjunction with oil stations, from plumbing supply houses or from any one of the plumbing and sanitary engineering fraternity.

Approved by Temme.

In an official statement Mr. Temme said, speaking of the great need of highway comfort stations: "The Motorists Association of Illinois, in accordance with its policy of interest in all matters of civic welfare, believes that public comfort stations should be provided for motorists along all highways.

"While it is hardly possible that money can be drawn from State road funds for this purpose, we believe municipalities themselves should be interested in this matter and should take whatever steps seem feasible for the accomplishment of the object in view. Chambers of commerce and similar organizations and associations should display activity in this connection.

"Gasoline companies should equip their stations with toilet facilities. The Independent Gasoline Service Association of Illinois, headquarters of which are maintained at the clubhouse of the Motorists Association of Illinois, at 2626 South Michigan avenue, Chicago, will be glad to cooperate in any way within its scope and possibilities."

H. M. Brown, general manager of the Chicago Motor club, and one of its board of directors, is a strong booster for adequate comfort station facilities for motorists. Discussing the matter officially he declared: "The Chicago Motor club is interested in seeing that an ample number of comfort stations are provided along the various highways. The problem is how to procure them.

"Obviously money can not be taken from the road fund for any purpose but the building and maintenance of highways. It is doubtful, too, whether any legislature would pass an appropriation for comfort stations if the money were to be taken from the general revenue of the State.

Should Be Interested.

"Most municipalities, however, should be interested in such work. The rapid increase in camp sites will automatically take care of the increase in the number of comfort stations.

"Gasoline companies can perform a great service for the traveling public by equipping their gas stations with suitable toilet facilities; in fact, this is being done now.

"Live chambers of commerce can assist in this work by inducing municipal authorities to erect comfort stations wherever possible."

Herman N. Bundesen, commissioner of health of Chicago, is in thorough accord with motorist sentiment concerning comfort stations on roadways and highways. From the standpoint of health conservation, he emphasizes the great necessity of such conveniences. In a recent statement, the commissioner said:

"There is an urgent need for such conveniences. We are far behind in this matter, and every effort should be made to provide them from a health standpoint. There are enough health disturbances, occasioned by lack of public comfort stations where needed, to warrant official action.

"On public highways, outside of the city, public comfort stations would be an ordinary sanitary precaution. They undoubtedly would be one of the great means of preventing typhoid fever and diarrheal diseases, not to speak of their being health conveniences for women and children."

The average motorist feels that the establishing of highway comfort stations can be accomplished if the proper cooperation is forthcoming, and since practically all master plumbers are also motorists they have therefore an opportunity to join hands with their brothers of the road in appealing to the civic pride of chambers of commerce and the municipal authorities in every community. Thus they can promote public sentiment in favor of these much needed comfort stations.

What are good roads without comfort stations?

German Is the Father Of 87 Living Children

Berlin, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—The story of a man who twice married, at 76 is the father of 87 children, 84 of whom are living, is reported by a Vienna medical association journal.

Bernard Scheinberg, living near the German border, had 69 children by his first wife who died at the age of 56, the journal says. Not one was a single birth. There were four quadruplets, seven triplets and sixteen twins. Sixty-seven of the children are living, but he admits having lost count of the grandchildren. Scheinberg's second marriage at the age of 57 was blessed with 18 children, including two sets of triplets. His second wife is still living.

ILLINOIS COAL MINERS PRODUCING OWN DRAMAS

HOPE TO GO ON TOURS

Taylorville, Ill., Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—After a day in the coal mines, or the kitchen, the miners and their wives of this district turn to the drama in their pursuit of education and culture.

Tom Tippett, educational director of subdistrict number 5, said the miners already have produced half a dozen one-act plays, all acted by coal miners and their families.

"We are now working on a new one, 'The Price of Coal,' dramatizing with telling effect the cost of coal in human life. We will travel to other Illinois mining towns with the plays this winter spreading, if possible, the idea of 'Labor-Drama.'

"We feel that our pioneering in the field of play has met with success. We have learned that a play, directed by a competent person, has a tremendous appeal to these hard working folk. Hazel MacKaye, of the Brookwood players, is directing our dramas.

"I took three months to get two plays ready for production. One of them had to do with the tragedy of poverty in the southern hill country; the other was just good fun into which we introduced a labor slant. The men and women in the cast, who on the very day of the play had done their regular work in the mine or in the kitchen, gave a performance that surprised everybody.

"New recruits came to the classes and we obtained Miss MacKaye to produce our new plays."

"Plumbing At Cut Prices"

When you buy "cut price" plumbing, expect cut quality. Such fixtures may cost less, but they soon develop shortcomings which cannot be repaired. The fixtures must be torn out and replaced, which is expensive. It's far cheaper and safer to install good fixtures in the first place.

Because of the very uses they serve, plumbing fixtures—if they are to remain sanitary—must have a finish as smooth and fine as glass. Anything less means—very soon—breeding spots and harbors for disease spreading germs.

Avoid costly and dangerous mistakes in buying plumbing. Members of this association will not gamble with YOUR health. They will give you your money's worth—sound advice—personal service—and first quality fixtures—GUARANTEED.

Anything "just as good" would sell for the same money. There is always a reason for a cheap price; it may be hidden but it is always there.

Radio Equipment on Planes.

The Navy Department recently announced that the two PN-10 seaplanes, which will make the flight from Hampton Roads to Panama, will be equipped with radio equipment to enable them to keep in touch with guard ships and shore radio stations all along the 1,789-mile route. The equipment will have a daylight transmitting range of from 250 to 400 miles. At no time will the two planes be more than 200 miles from the coast or from islands.

NAVY OBSERVATORY HEAD TO LECTURE IN POST RADIO HOUR

"WHAT TIME IS IT?" TOPIC OF SCIENTIFIC ADDRESS

Ivan Kozekavitch, Russian Barytone, and Hart Boys Will Furnish Music.

The Post radio hour from WRC, the Radio Corporation of America station, at 6 o'clock tomorrow night will include two talks of local interest and novelty presentations of vocal and instrumental music.

"What Time Is It?" will be the subject of a talk by Capt. Edwin T. Pollock, superintendent of the Naval observatory, the source of all accurate measurement and recording for public use of the illusive hours and minutes. Starting next Saturday, the query, "What time is it?" will not be answered by officials of the Naval observatory. Observatory scientists, since the discontinuance of the Western Union service, have attempted, with unofficial courtesy, to give the time of day to many thousand persons who possess no timepieces or whose watches and clocks are out of adjustment.

Telling 2,000 persons a day what time it is, if continued, would interfere with the normal operation of the observatory, which is a scientific institution concerned with time measurement. The true functions of the naval observatory and its service to the world will be described by Capt. Pollock.

The musical portion of the program will feature the appearance of Ivan Kozekavitch, Russian barytone, who will appear all week at the Rialto in its first presentation since the completion of a new stage and scenic effects. Another theatrical singer will be Ottilie Corday, prima donna of "Moonlight" and soprano of a Keith revue. The Hart boys, Raymond and William Hart, of the Walter T. Holt studios, will enliven the hour with banjo selections.

In continuation of her series, Elisabeth E. Poe will speak again on "Little Journeys Around the Capital," a talk arranged to be of particular interest to children. Cora Sponsler, soprano, accompanied by Margaret Bowie Grant, will conclude the dinner-hour program.

CONCERT BY DAMROSCH OVER RADIO SATURDAY

Will Wield Baton for New York Symphony Orchestra Over Many Stations.

HAS LONG EXPERIENCE

Walter Damrosch, familiarly know as "the dean of American conductors," will wield the baton when the New York Symphony orchestra provides the radio audience of WEAF, WEEI, WFI, WCAE, WWJ, WSAI, WTAM, WGN, KSD, WCCO and WDAF with the fifth program of the popular Balkite hour to be broadcast through these stations Saturday evening, beginning at 9 o'clock.

The development of music in this country is indicated by the following statement recently made by Mr. Damrosch:

"My father used to conduct from twelve to sixteen symphony concerts during the season, but nowadays our New York Symphony orchestra plays over 100 concerts. Until four years ago I conducted all of these myself; even today I conduct 80 out of the 105 that make up our season. Of course many of these are given in cities other than New York."

The father of Walter Damrosch stimulated in him a love for the classics, his favorite readings being along the lines of Greek mythology, fairy tales and biblical parables. At an early age his mind was trained to search for the dramatic. Early in his boyhood came the departure for America, where Walter Damrosch attended the public schools, continuing his piano lessons while wrestling with a strange language.

Dr. Damrosch, his father, had many duties with the founding of the Oratorio and Symphony societies, and in the discharge of these Walter rendered able assistance. At the age of 18, Walter Damrosch was appointed the director of the Newark Harmony society, the concerts of which were attended by Dr. Damrosch and thoroughly analyzed. In 1882 Walter Damrosch was sent to Europe to advance his musical culture through contact with prominent musicians, among them Liszt, Von Bulow and Brahms. Dr. Damrosch had in the meantime been appointed director at the Metropolitan Opera house with a commission to begin a season of German opera and won a pronounced success in the season of 1885-6.

10 New Broadcasters Make Debut to Fans

With ten new broadcasters crowding into the already badly congested ether lanes, a new record has been established, inasmuch as the stations licensed to go on the air now exceed 600. The government announces the following new stations:

The new Balkite "B" at $27.50 and the new Balkite Charger convert your radio set into a light socket receiver

To enjoy the convenience of operating your radio set from the light socket, add the new Balkite "B" and the new Balkite Charger.

Balkite "B"—the unique "B" power supply—eliminates "B" batteries entirely and supplies "B" current from the light socket. The new Balkite "B"-W at $27.50 serves any set of 5 tubes or less requiring 67 to 90 volts; Balkite "B"-X at $42 sets of up to 135 volts and 8 tubes; Balkite "B"-Y at $69 any standard set.

The Balkite Charger at $19.50 with both high and low charging rates, is the most convenient of all methods of charging your "A" battery. At the low rate it can be left on continuous or trickle charge, thus automatically keeping your battery at full power. Used as an intermittent charger, its high rate provides a ready reserve for heavy-duty use. This new charger gives you the advantages of both trickle and high-rate charging.

Both Balkite "B" and the Balkite Charger are entirely noiseless in operation. Both are permanent pieces of equipment, with nothing to wear out or replace. Other than a slight consumption of household current, their first cost is the last. Both are built to conform with the standards of the Underwriters' Laboratories.

Over 650,000 radio sets—one of every ten—are already Balkite equipped. Add these two Balkite Units to your receiver now. Then you too will know the convenience of owning a radio set always ready to operate at peak power. Ask your dealer. Fansteel Products Company, Inc., North Chicago, Illinois.

Balkite Trickle Charger $10

MODEL K. With 6-volt "A" batteries can be left on continuous or trickle charge thus automatically keeping the battery at full power. In effect it converts your battery into a light socket "A" power supply. With 4-volt batteries can be used as an intermittent charger. Or as a trickle charger if a resistance is added. Charging-rate about .5 ampere. Over 200,000 in use. Price $10.

Balkite Combination

Supplies automatic power to both "A" and "B" circuits. Controlled by the filament switch on your set. Entirely automatic in operation. Serves any set now using either 4 or 6-volt "A" batteries and requiring not more than 30 milliamperes at 135 volts of "B" current—practically all sets of up to 8 tubes. Price $59.50.

All Balkite Radio Power Units operate from 110-120 volts AC current with models for both 60 and 50 cycles. The new Balkite Charger is also made in a special model for 25-40 cycles.

NEW YORK-LONDON INSTALLATION SEEN FOR BEAM SYSTEM

265 WORDS A MINUTE IS RECORD OF SPEED

Messages Taken Instantly, Due to Intensification of Signals by Method.

It is understood that if the Montreal to London beam wireless service proves successful, the system will be installed between New York and London early next year. When the Canadian service was inaugurated last month messages were sent at a speed of nearly 200 words a minute and instantaneously recorded in the Central Telegraph office in London.

The first message from the Canadian metropolis was from Lord Atholstan to Lord Burnham, chairman of the Imperial Press Union. This message was sent at 11 a. m., Montreal time, and was immediately transmitted to Lord Burnham, and his reply was filed with the Central Telegraph office at 4:58 p. m., London time, which is 5 hours later than Montreal time. Before the expiration of a minute the message had been received in the Marconi office in Montreal, decoded and handed to Lord Atholston.

Fastest in World.

"The wonder of the beam wireless system seemed greater than had been imagined by newspaper men who had some knowledge of cable work," the Editor and Publisher comments. "The messages are handed to an operator who sits before a Creed perforator, which is a peculiar shaped typewriter with an ordinary keyboard. He copies them out, but instead of punching letters on to a continuous tape he punches the Morse code for those letters.

"This tape then is run into a Wheatstone transmitter at a speed which can be regulated from 20 to 400 words per minute. That transmitter operates the main transmitter at Drummondville by a system of wired wireless controls over Bell telephone wires and from Drummondville the message is sent out instantaneously by the directional beam, and at the same instant is recorded in Bridgewater, Somerset, where the general receiving apparatus is automatically transferred to the land line of the British general postoffice and recorded in the Central Telegraph office in London.

On Moving Tape.

"There is no retransmission of the messages anywhere, for immediately the tape goes into the transmitter in Montreal it operates the high speed undulator in London which records the Morse code on a moving tape, which passes in front of an operator at an ordinary typewriter in London, who decodes the message as it passes in front of him.

"So far, the highest speed attained by the receiving undulator is 265 words a minute, and in order to handle messages, the Marconi Co. has a corps of typists who take the strips of Morse code as they come in and divide it into sections. The signals are so intensified by the beam system that no matter how fast they are sent they are recorded on the tape."

Railroad Watches Radio.

The Pennsylvania railroad, as are several other large systems, is keeping in close touch with radio development in the hope of working out a more practicable means for communication between the front and rear ends of mile-long freight trains. This is a difficult problem for railroads, particularly in foggy or snowy weather.

KIDNEYS MUST HAVE PLENTY OF WATER

Also Take Salts Occasionally if Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers.

Kidney and bladder irritations often result from acidity, says a noted authority. The kidneys help filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it may remain to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread; the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse; again, there is difficulty in voiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it, because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is often one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Begin drinking lots of soft water, also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast. Continue this for two or three days. This will help neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer are a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs, which then act normal again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by acid irritation. Jad Salts causes no bad effects whatever.

Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which may quickly relieve your bladder irritation.—Adv.

RADIO AMATEUR NEWS

Conducted in Cooperation With the Washington Radio Club

"For many years past the signal corps has felt a keen interest in the amateur radio operators of the country," according to Gen. Saltzman. "These enthusiasts have many times aroused the admiration of the nation by their contribution to radio development and research, by the tremendous distances they have frequently bridged, using their low-powered, inexpensive home-built sets, and by the devotion they have displayed in transmitting important information when normal channels of communication have been destroyed by flood, storm, fire or wind.

"As a result, there has been opened up a new and vast network of radio channels of communication which will be of great potential value in time of emergency. And there has been made available to the signal corps a large reservoir of radio operators who will have received most valuable training in time of peace and who can be more quickly adapted to military needs in time of emergency. It is believed that the establishment of such close contact with the radio amateur is a real step toward a better national preparedness."

Official ARRL Broadcast NR 162, November 15—November 21:

"Work on 20 meters is again coming to the fore. Good DX contacts are being made under both daylight and dark conditions. 1CKP and 1XAM are on 20 meters every Saturday and Sunday afternoon. Others that can be heard and worked consistently are 2AVU, 4BU, 4DW, 4CC, 4RM, 4SI, 4TN, 5TT, 5AWZ, 6ZAT, 8CJJ, 8AUL, 8DRA, 8BGD, 9CP, 9BSK, 9CMJ, 9COV, 9BKL, 9DBZ, 9BWN, 9ANZ, 9AUV, 9CM, and French 8CT. All stations that can do so are asked to cooperate by going down to 20 meters every Saturday and Sunday afternoon and evening. It is requested that everyone receiving this broadcast send a complete report of his 20 meter work to ARRL headquarters so we will know at just how short a distance 20-meter work is possible at this season. Jump into the game on 20 meters, see how they pound through and help find out more about one of our useful bands while rolling up a few records for yourself."

3AB, Ep chief op of 3BWT, and 3NB left Saturday, November 6 by auto for a trip to Williamsport, Pa. They stopped at Northumberland, Pa., to get 8BSE and then proceeded to Williamsport, where they were royally entertained by the gang there. They saw many amateur stations, among them 8EU, 8BFE, 8AVK, 8CMO and others. They returned November 8 tired, but all declaring that they had a royal good time.

Lieut. A. J. Spriggs, U. S. N., is a new station in D. C. His call is 3KR and he has a crystal control station. His fist is a mighty good one. Welcome to our gang OM.

Conditions seem to be quite good these days, with a result that traffic handling is on the increase.

3CAB to date has a total msg for the month of 115. He is now one of the reliable stations.

According to speculations of some scientists, radio conditions are likely to grow worse until sometime in 1928 when solar sunspots and other solar activities reach a maximum. Nineteen twenty-eight may be a year of local radio.

2-WAVE LENGTHS USED BY WOK ARE EXPLAINED

238 Meters Enables Station to Reach More Listeners, Says President.

CHANGE U. S. SUGGESTION

As an explanation of the use of two lengths by Station WOK, President Cory, of WOK, makes the following explanation:

"The government established several years ago a series of high-powered lanes in the Chicago district. The lanes were established to allow 50,000 cycles separation between all Chicago stations. Roughly, the lanes are as follows: 217, 226, 238, 250, 265, 275, 302.

"WOK has been using half time on 217 until recently, when a new transmitter was installed, designed to operate on a higher wave. Half time on the band of 238 being occupied only by WHT for one and a half hours each night, it was decided to put the new transmitter on the 238 band. WOK is, therefore, operating one transmitter part time on 217 and another transmitter part time on 238. The operation on 238 in nowise crowds any other station in the district, as it is 60,000 cycles above 226 and 60,000 cycles below the 250 meter band.

"The use of one transmitter on 238 meters enables WOK to reach a large number of listeners who own antiquated sets unable to tune down to 217 meters. The use of the 238 band by WOK is with the full knowledge of the department, it having formerly suggested that WOK use this position."

BATTERIES INJURED BY OVERCHARGING

Excessive Gassing Is Produced and Temperature Is Increased.

Overcharging of storage batteries produces excessive gassing and increases the temperature and in general may prove injurious to the batteries, George W. Vinal, of the bureau of standards, advises.

Some cases of buckling of the plates are to be attributed to overcharging, although this is by no means the only cause of buckling of the plates. Occasional overcharging is beneficial, but habitual overcharge decreases the period of useful service which the battery can give. On the other hand, consistent undercharging results in a gradual running down of the cells. Likewise insufficient charging is also one of the most common causes of buckling of the plates.

Corroded terminals on storage batteries are a hindrance to the passage of the normal amount of current and cracked or broken jars invite the addition of water, which weakens the cell capacity. Impurities in the cells may be eliminated by pouring out the electrolyte and flushing the cells with distilled water. Corrosion of the grid, the reversal of the negative and positive plates, the growth of positive plates, the shrinkage of negatives and explosions, Mr. Vinal concluded, are the main sources of battery trouble.

Schlegel on WJZ Tomorrow.

Carl Schlegel, who for 20 years served as a barytone with the Metropolitan Opera company, will be the featured soloist with the Willys-Overland hour to be broadcast by station WJZ at 7 o'clock tomorrow night. Supporting him will be the 20-piece orchestra under the direction of Henry Hadley, the associate conductor of the New York Philharmonic orchestra. All of the men who compose this orchestra are members of the New York Philharmonic.

America Wins Contract.

American engineers were awarded the contract for the erection of a new broadcasting station at Sjaellend, Denmark, which is expected to be one of the best equipped in that part of Europe. Its power will be 5 kilowatts, on a wave length ranging from 1,050 meters to 1,300 meters.

MANY INTERFERENCES RETARD RECEPTION

Circuit-Breakers in Power Station Often Cause of Static.

CONNECTIONS ARE VITAL

There are many kinds of equipment in electric power stations which may cause interference to radio reception. Sparking at the commutators of the generators is an especially common cause of interference in small towns having a direct current light supply. This trouble may usually be overcome by connecting two two-m. f. condensers in series across the power lines, and grounding the middle point, where the condensers are connected. Suitable choke coils placed in the lines also reduce the interference. Power companies are almost glad to adopt these measures if they believe that they will be of help to radio listeners in the community.

The circuit breakers and switches in a power station sometimes cause interference, but these disturbances are but momentary, occuring when the circuits are made or broken. It is, therefore, usually unnecessary to use the methods outlined above for overcoming the disturbances caused by such devices.

Faulty lightning arresters are a part of the station equipment that some times is responsible for trouble. Trouble from this source is easily located, and when encountered may be overcome by replacing the arrester with one which is functioning properly.

By no means all of the soures of electric power interference are confined to the power station and its distribution lines. The most persistsient interference can often be traced to various electric devices used about the home. Violet ray machines are often serious offenders. Usually the owners, when located, can be prevailed upon to use the machines only in the daytime, when one does not wish to listen in over the radio. Mechanical battery chargers also cause interference. Here, again, the owner should be persuaded, if possible, to use his device only in the daytime. More rarely, such devices as electric bleaching machines, physicians X-ray equipment, telephone bell ringers, etc., are encountered. In the case of bleaching machines and of bell ringers, it has been found possible to eliminate the interference in many instances by the means outlined above for overcoming interference for sparking generator commutators. If troubled with telephone interference, the set owner should be careful to use a ground connection other than the telephone ground.

In persistent cases of interference, where the source cannot be located, or where the owner of the equipment fails to take the proper measures for overcoming the trouble when notified of the disturbance he is causing, the district radio inspector should be notified.

Lighthouse Keeper Cheered.

The United States mail recently brought the Champion Sparkers, who are one of station WJZ's regular Tuesday night broadcast features, a letter which has become one of their proudest possessions. It was from a guardian of one of Uncle Sam's lighthouses stationed in a desolate location along the Atlantic coast. The letter related how the "Sparkers" had helped him to keep the lighthouse in operation by cheering him during the long nightly vigil. The Champion Sparkers have arranged another program which will be broadcast by stations WJZ, WRC and WGY at 8 o'clock, Tuesday night, November 16. As a special tribute to the lighthouse keeper who wrote to them, they have included a bass solo, "Davy Jones' Locker."

Bureau Anniversary.

Although a more youthful unit, the radio laboratory will join in celebrating the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the bureau of standards, under the Department of Commerce, Saturday, December 4. Dr. J. H. Dellinger, is director of the radio laboratory.

FRIEDA HEMPEL LAUDS RADIO IN LEARNING SONG

Soprano Cites Opportunities in America; In Atwater Kent Concert Tonight.

PRAISES EUROPE ALSO

The opportunity to hear the greatest artists of the opera and concert stage over the radio makes America the ideal place to learn the art of song, according to Frieda Hempel, noted soprano, who will broadcast in the Atwater Kent concert at 9:15 o'clock tonight.

"There is no need of dashing off to Europe the moment one begins to practice scales," she added. "Some of the greatest teachers in the world are in America, and most of them are Americans. I do not underestimate the good that Europe can do. Europe has centuries of music behind it and Europeans go to the opera as we go to the movies. Here, through the radio, the opera is brought into the home.

"But if they must go, let them go well equipped that they can appreciate and discriminate intelligently; otherwise the mass of music may confuse rather than broaden their view. And the radio is doing a great deal to develop this ability to discriminate."

Toscha Seidel, who will participate in the Maxwell house hour scheduled by WJZ and WRC, beginning at 10:15 o'clock, will be assisted by the Maxwell ensemble, under the direction of Nathaniel Shilkret. Among the numbers that will be played by Mr. Seidel are "The Slavonic Dance, No. 2," by Dvorak; the "Tambourin Chinois," by Kreisler, and the "Turkish March," by Beethoven.

Glenn Will Rejoin Eveready Singers

Wilfred Glenn, bass of the Eveready group, has just completed a six weeks' engagement at Prince's supper club in London.

Glenn left New York early in September with a selected group of American radio stars engaged to sing before English audiences. Included in the party are Franklin Bauer, Eddie Smalley, Lewis James and Elliott Shaw. The American singers are returning to this country with new English song successes. Glen will rejoin the Eveready hour probably in time for the program to be broadcast from stations WEAF and WRC Tuesday evening.

The United States is the world's leading exporter of radio apparatus, its total 1925 shipments of $9,903,857 being $3,407,325 greater in value than radio exports from the United Kingdom, which was our nearest competitor during that year, according to a regional review of American sales abroad by E. F. Bemis, of the Department of Commerce.

American radio products are making satisfactory progress in the markets of the world, with the single exception of Europe, where it appears the British have obtained a strong foothold.

British radio sales to Europe constituted more than 41 per cent of the total British radio exports and over 15 per cent of the total was sent to divisions of the British Empire. The leading European markets for the British exports in 1925 were the Irish Free State, Netherlands, Spain, France and Sweden, which countries took more than $1,305,949 of the exports from Great Britain during that period.

FOUR-HOUR PROGRAM ON RADIO TOMORROW

Performance Will Introduce National Broadcasting Company to Public.

A four-hour radio performance given by stars of the opera, the stage and the concert hall tomorrow evening will introduce the National Broadcasting Co. to the American public.

This step marks the definite retirement of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. from the public broadcasting field and the beginning of a service by the National Broadcasting Co. to the chain of stations interconnected by wire with WEAF.

POWER TUBE IS MERELY HANDLER, NOT PRODUCER

Will Not Make More Volume Than Ordinary Attachment in Itself.

CUTS TONE DISTORTION

Power tubes are power handlers, not power producers, as many think. Of itself, a power tube will not produce more volume than a non-power tube. Its design permits it to handle greater volume with out distortion.

Most receiving sets are capable of delivering more volume to the last audio tube than can be handled without distortion by the usual types of amplifying tubes. This is where the power tube is needed—in the last audio stage only, where it can receive the volume developed in the earlier stages of the set and pass it on, amplified but undistorted, to the loud speaker.

The electrical characteristics of power tubes are quite different from those of the customary amplifying tubes. Power tubes consume more B battery current, and they require greater C battery voltage.

The wrong C battery voltage robs the power tube of its ability to handle greater volume without distortion, resulting in operation little, if any, better than ordinary tubes. In addition, if the C battery voltage is too low, the B current consumed by the tube is multiplied many fold, which rapidly exhausts the B battery. Merely substituting a power tube for another tube in the last audio stage of a receiver will not bring about any noticeable improvement in reception. Provision must be made in the wiring of the set to allow placing the correct value of C battery voltage on the grid of the power tube.

The international friendship service of the local Y. W. C. A., inaugurating the week of prayer, in fellowship with the Young Women's Christian associations of the world, will be held this afternoon at the Church of the Epiphany at 4 o'clock. All departments of the association will be represented in the processional, and all friends, both men and women, are invited to be present.

Each morning throughout the week, with the exception of Tuesday, a short service will be conducted by the staff of the Y. W. C. A. The leaders will be Miss Gist, Miss Sandberg, Mrs. Hubbard, Miss Wright and Miss Anderson.

Miss Lucy Gardner, of London, who is in the United States under auspices of the World Alliance for International Friendship, will be the guest at luncheon of the world fellowship committee of the association Tuesday. She will speak on "Christian Social Service Work."

The Kamp Kahlert committee will be hostess to members of the board of directors and the board of trustees, with their husbands and wives, at an oyster roast at camp next Saturday. The bus will leave 814 E street at 3 p. m.

There will be a meeting of the board of directors Thursday morning at 10:30 o'clock at 614 E street.

Committee meetings scheduled for the week are as follows: Monday, the building committee will meet in the home of the chairman, Mrs Fred E. Wright, 2134 Wyoming avenue, at 2:30 p. m.; Tuesday, the rooms registry committee will meet at 614 E street at 10:30 a. m.; Wednesday, the finance committee will meet at 2 p. m. and again on Friday at 10:30 a. m., both meetings at 614 E street.

Following the international friendship service this afternoon at the Church of the Epiphany, the young girls employed in business will assemble in their clubrooms at 1104 M street for tea.

Tuesday night at 7 o'clock the department council will conduct a Czechoslovakian contest and two prizes, Czechoslovakian articles, will be given for the best results. During the last six weeks the young business women have been following a "get acquainted" program concerning Czechoslovakia and this contest will review interesting outstanding facts which have been developed and will close the program.

Next Saturday night the Tip Top club will give a dance at the Blue Triangle. Miss Kate Rielly is chairman. Music will be furnished by Dolly Leishear's orchestra.

The girls employed in homes will leave the association, 614 E street, Thursday at 2:30 p. m. for a trip through the Smithsonian institution.

The Greek club will hold a business meeting Thursday evening at 7:30 o'clock. Mrs. F. Dounis is president.

One important phase of the Girl Reserve program is the social service work done by the girls throughout the city. This plan is taking form by each senior high school Girl Reserve club assuming some responsibility for the welfare and development of a young orphaned child.

The Girl Reserve club at Macfarland Junior High school, accompanied by their adviser, Miss Lucille LaVarre, will visit the Children's hospital tomorrow at 3:30 o'clock and will give a program for the children.

One hundred and fifty girls attended a camp fire on the Marlboro road last night.

Advanced class in social dancing will start Friday. Registration and payment of fees must be made at 614 E street, although the class will meet at 8 p. m. at the Elizabeth Somers residence, 1104 M street. The beginners' class, which meets the same evening at 7 o'clock, will start as soon as ten have signed.

A new class is forming for gymnastics on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 5 p. m. It will meet for the first time Tuesday.

CHRISTENSEN SCHOOL OF MUSIC

AMONG MUSICIANS

By ELISABETH E. POE.

MUSICAL Washington is awaiting with much pleasure the Wednesday morning musicales at the Mayflower, beginning on December 8, to be given under the auspices of Mrs. Lawrence Townsend.

Mrs. Townsend will present notable artists in the course of these musicales. Among them will be Lucrezia Bori, of the Metropolitan Opera company; Mary Garden, of the Chicago Opera company; Maria Mueller, of the Metropolitan Opera company; Rosa Ponselle, Metropolitan Opera company; Edward Johnson, Metropolitan Opera company; the Washington debut of Frederick Schorr, barytone; G. Novaes, pianist from Brazil; Hector Dansereau, French pianist; Nikolai Orloff, Russian pianist, and Paul Kochanski and Ruth Breton, violinists, and the world's greatest harpist, Alberto Salvi.

The special evening concerts to be given at Memorial Continental hall have been arranged in order to give students of music and those employed during the day an opportunity to hear leading artists. These concerts are conducted on a nonprofit basis, and therefore the use of D. A. R. hall has been granted for their presentation.

The concert to be given by the Westminster Dayton choir, December 1 in the Central High school, promises to be the big church musical event of the season. Its tour last year was a great success.

The choir features a capella (unaccompanied) music, being composed of 60 voices under the leadership of John Finley Williamson. Its program ranges from old world chorales to such folk songs as "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot."

The Rev. J. R. Duffield, executive secretary of Washington City presbytery, is chairman of the committee promoting the choir. Other members of the committee are: The Rev. J. R. Duffield, Adolf Torovsky, Mrs. Ruby Smith Stahl, John Monroe, Clyde R. Atchison, Dr. E. N. C. Barnes, Miss Mary Sullivan, Dr. Charles Wood, Bishop McDowell, Rabbi A. Simon, Percy Foster, the Rev. Z. B. Phillips, the Rev. W. L. Darby, Mrs. W. L. Darby, Mrs. H. S. Irwin, Miss Imogene B. Irland, T. Arthur Smith, Mrs. L. W. Hardy and Mrs. Arthur Seaton.

Under the chairmanship of Harriet Harding Guthrie, of the First Methodist Episcopal church, Chevy Chase, a musical tea has been arranged to be given at the home of Mrs. Edward Beckley Adams, 103 Leland street, Chevy Chase, on Tuesday evening, 8 to 10 o'clock.

Among the contributing artists will be Mary Sherrier Bowie, soprano; William E. Braithwaite, tenor; Roger J. Whiteford, barytone; John C. Smith, bass, and the Westbrook trio, consisting of violin, cello and piano. Readings will be given by Maude Howell Smith and Albert Falconer.

The MacDowell Music club held its annual benefit card party and dance for the MacDowell fund for the Peterboro colony, which is dedicated to the memory of Edward MacDowell, America's greatest composer. The president, director and members of the club worked with a personal interest and much enthusiasm and in consequence the many friends of the club responded most loyally to the cause.

The second rehearsal of the Columbia Choral Art society was held on Tuesday evening at the Thomson school. Despite the rain, there was a crowd in attendance. Mr. Simon, the conductor, expressed great satisfaction in the quality of the work done, stating that he felt assured of very beautiful choral performance in the very near future. His breathing exercises and lessons in tonal work are producing some fine effects. New members were enrolled.

District of Columbia chapter, International Federation of Catholic Alumnae, held its first meeting of the Music club on Wednesday evening. Miss Margaret McAllister, chairman of the club, presided. Mrs. Frederick Rice was appointed chairman of the choral society. At this meeting it was voted to hold weekly rehearsals of the orchestra and choral societies.

Prof. Alexander Henneman, of the Catholic university, is to direct the music. The first rehearsal is to be held on Tuesday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

The Washington College of Music will give its forty-sixth public concert at Central High school Monday evening, November 22. There will be no cards required for admission, no reserved seats and no collection taken.

The program follows:

"Reve Angelique" (Rubinstein), string ensemble, Dr. Christiani, conducting; "Berceuse" (Chopin), Miss Dorothy Sornborger (piano); "Les Vieilles de chez nous" (Levade), "Arios—Benvenuto Cellini" (Diaz), Joseph M. Barbecot (barytone); Iorgetto (Handel-Hubey), "Walter" (Cramer-Burmester), Miss Flora Clayton (violin); "Toccata and Fugue," D minor (Bach-Philipp), Miss Rebecca Easterbrook (piano); "Andante" from Fifth Symphony (Tschaikowsky), string ensemble; "Answer" (Terry), "Life" (Curran), Miss Gertrude Spindler (soprano); "Romance, Op. 26" (Svendsen), "Schoen Rosmarin" (Kreisler), Fritz Maile (violin); "Hungarian Rhapsody No. 2" (Liszt), Burrus Williams (piano); "Romance" (Wienawski), "Canebreak" (Gardner), Miss Evelyn Scott (violin); "I Heard You Go By" (Wood), "I Cry Out" (Marshall), Seba Christie (tenor); "Cosi fan tutti" (Mozart), string ensemble. Accompanists, Miss Marjorie Davis, Miss Evelyn Bissig, Burrus Williams.

Under the auspices of the League of the Covenant, Mrs. Guy Stewart McCabe, of Pittsburgh, gave an entertainment before an audience that filled the ballroom at 2400 Sixteenth street Tuesday evening. Her songs and impersonations of childhood in which she introduced to her hearers the irrepressible and inimitable "Henry Melville," a boy character of her own creation, were a hit. Mr. Harvey Murray, organist of the Church of the Covenant, accompanied her on the piano.

Christine Irish, soprano, sings at Christ Episcopal church today.

The fifth of a series of City club musicales will be given in the lounge of the club Thursday, at 6:15 p. m., by the Nordica Mandolin and Guitar orchestra and the Nordica Banjo club, under the direction of T. Walter Holt, under whose direction these organizations have become established institutions during the 20 years of their existence. The clubs, numbering 60 artists each, have a program ranging from difficult classic selections to simple old-fashioned melodies.

Miss Annabel Bird, guitar soloist, will assist with a special group of numbers arranged for this instrument. The orchestra will be assisted by Mary Elizabeth Parker. Arrangements have been completed with station WMAL to broadcast on 294 meters, all future musicales.

John Russell Mason has been appointed organist of the Central Presbyterian church. Earl Carbauh, barytone, is precenter and soloist.

Club and choir directors are reminded of the meeting called for Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock in Vermont Avenue Christian church by W. E. Braithwaite, chairman for the massed spring concert to be held under the auspices of the District of Columbia Federation of Music Clubs. Mrs. Charles G. McRoberts has consented to serve as chairman for Christmas caroling in the institutions.

In addition to its regular meeting at 11 o'clock, the Rubinstein club will hold a rehearsal at 8 o'clock every Tuesday evening at the Willard hotel. This rehearsal is for the benefit of those members who find it difficult or impossible to attend the morning one. This decision was announced by the board on Tuesday.

Henry Smidt Gregor will give a recital at the Arts club next Sunday.

His program will be built upon the idea, "The Dance Form as Inspiration of Classical and Modern Composers."

Miss Edith B. Athey, organist, announces a series of organ recitals at Hamline M. E. church, Sixteenth and Allison streets northwest, at 8:15 on the following dates:

November 22, Scandinavian music; December 20, Russian; January 17, Belgian; February 21, English; March 21, Italian; April 25, French; May 16, American.

Music lovers will recall that Miss Athey, sponsored by the community center department of the public schools, gave a similar series at Central High auditorium several years ago. There are no tickets of admission, but an offering will be received to help in the work. Hamline church now has a fine new organ and wishes to minister in this way to the people of Washington.

The Eastern High school's fall show, to be given Thursday and Friday this week and on Monday next week, will take the form of an operetta entitled "The Gypsy Rover," written by Mr. and Mrs. John Wilson Dodge, of Cincinnati.

Miss Ina Holtzscheiter, soprano, will be featured as Lady Constance, while Jimmie Madison, tenor, will sing the part of Rob, the Gypsy Rover, later revealed in the character of Sir Gilbert Howe. Mary Gastrock, soprano, will depict the role of Zara, the belle of the gypsy camp, while the part of the gypsy mother will be sung alternately by Kathryn Clark and Frances Tucker, mezzo-soprano. Margaret Cook, soprano, will sing the part of Nina, the daughter of Sir George Martendale, the last-named character to be interpreted by Jack Vivian and Alvin Graves, in turn. The part of Lord Gerome will be sung by Tom Coiner, while the comedy parts are divided among Edward Andrus, Dale Snell, Manuel Rice and Herbert Cooper.

Evelyn Scott and Joseph Botazzi will be featured in violin solos and William Bennett, tenor, a member of the gypsy camp.

The part of Lord Craven will be taken alternately by Russell Davis and Edwards Roberts, and Katherine Brown, an alumnae, will do a special dance. Other characters will be in the hands of Eldred Wilson and Sam McGlathery. Special dance features will help to make the whole evening a continuation of happy surprises.

The school orchestra will play throughout the entire score.

The choir of Christ church, Georgetown, will give a concert Friday. The proceeds are to be used for additional male voices to assist the present choir (which is largely volunteer) and for incidental choir expenses.

The following artists will sing: Charles Trowbridge Tittman, the well-known concert singer; Mrs. Kincheloe, wife of Representative Kincheloe, of Kentucky; Glen Carow, pianist, who won the contest to represent Washington at the Sesquicentennial; the Westbrook trio, violin, cello and piano, and the Insurance Men's quartet.

On Wednesday the United States Army band, Captain William J. Stannard, leader; Thomas J. Darcey, second leader, will broadcast at 7:30 o'clock a new march dedicated to the members of the band, by Harry S. Morris.

Mr. Morris is a retired New York business man, now residing in Washington. He is a great lover of military band music and has written many marches. He is a former member of the New York Seventh regiment.

A Double Treatment for Colds

It is an obstinate cold indeed that can resist the direct, double action of Vicks VapoRub. When it is rubbed over throat and chest at bedtime, Vicks acts in two ways at once:

(1) Direct to the inflamed air passages with its medicated vapors, released by the body heat; and

(2) Direct through the skin like an old-fashioned poultice, "drawing out" the tightness, soreness and pain.

Head or chest colds may easily sap your vitality and undermine your health. Don't neglect them.

VICKS VAPORUB

OVER 21 MILLION JARS USED YEARLY

Best Way to Loosen Stubborn Cough

This home-made remedy is a wonder for quick results. Easily and cheaply made.

Here is a home-made syrup which millions of people have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs. It is cheap and simple, but very prompt in action. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easier, tickling in throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, throat tickle, bronchial asthma or winter coughs.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. If you prefer, use clarified honey, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you get a full pint—a family supply—of much better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Keeps perfectly and children love it.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract and palatable guaiacol, known the world over for its prompt healing effect upon the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co, Ft. Wayne, Ind.

QUICK ACTION IN SOUR STOMACH

Pape's Diapepsin Instantly Settles Worst Attacks No Matter What You Ate or Drank

Am Always Ready and Hungry for the Next Meal Since I Discovered Pape's Diapepsin

Yes, instantly! You feel good that quick. In five minutes the sour, acid, dyspeptic risings, gas on stomach, belching, bloat—all are gone. You have made the discovery of your life. Now you know you may eat or drink any combination you like without fear of sour, acid-dyspeptic stomach. Try it and prove it. Get a 60 cent box of Pape's Diapepsin at any drug store.

APPLY SAGE TEA TO DARKEN FADED HAIR

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients. It is known as Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound and can be obtained at all drug stores for only 75 cents a bottle.

While gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger. —Adv.

WAR DEPARTMENT TO CENTER EFFORTS ON FEW MEASURES

Activities in Short Session Are to Be Concentrated on Pending Legislation.

SIX NOW ARE BEFORE HOUSE MILITARY BODY

Interest Centers on Proposal for Retirement of World War Officers.

Although not much is expected to be done in the way of army legislation during the approaching short session of Congress, the War Department will make an effort to get through some bills that already are pending and have passed one of the other houses.

Six bills that have passed the Senate and now are before the House military committee are the following:

1. To amend the law relating to sale of ordnance and ordnance stores to the republic of Cuba, as contained in an act of August 29, 1916.

2. To amend a provision of an act of March 3, 1879, relating to issue of arms and ammunition for protection of public money and property.

3. To authorize payment of claims in admiralty arising from operations of the army transport service.

4. To amend a portion of section 15 of the national-defense act relating to chaplains.

5. To enable members of the reserve officers' training corps that have interrupted the course of training prescribed in an act of June 4, 1920, to resume such training and to amend accordingly section 47c of that act.

6. To amend the act providing for payment of six months' pay to the widow, children or dependent relative of any officer or enlisted man of the regular army whose death results from wounds or disease not the result of his own misconduct, so as to permit army nurses to designate a beneficiary.

Result of Decision.

This privilege is denied as a result of a decision of the comptroller general. Corresponding legislation for the navy provides specifically that beneficiaries of members of the navy nurse corps are entitled to the six months' gratuity.

Three proposed measures of importance that have passed the House and now are before the Senate military committee are:

(1) To provide for relief of officers and former officers of the army in settlement of accounts of disbursing officers and others.

(2) To provide for payment of claims for pay, personal injuries, loss of property, etc.

(3) To authorize reimbursement to the government of the Philippine Islands for maintaining alien crews.

The latter measure is of great importance, and it is expected that it will be passed. Three measures reported by the House military committee and awaiting consideration are:

(1) Authorizing the National capital park and planning commission to purchase Fort Hunt, Va., and Fort Washington, Md.

(2) To authorize the surgeon general of the army to pay for human blood transfusions.

(3) Providing for return of funds belonging to world war national guard organizations that were not reconstituted.

Interest in Bill.

Another bill awaiting action by the House is one that makes eligible for retirement under certain conditions officers and former officers of the world war, other than those of the regular army, who incurred physical disability in line of duty while in the service during that war. Widespread interest is evinced in this measure, which has been disapproved by the budget bureau.

A Senate bill, reported out by the military committee of that body, authorized the Secretary of War to classify as secret certain apparatus pertaining to the signal corps, air corps and the chemical warfare service, and empowers him to authorize purchases thereof and contracts therefor without notice of advertisement.

Six Marine Planes to Fly From Quantico to San Diego

FB Single-seater Pursuit Models Ordered to Pacific Coast Statoin—Will Be Replaced by De Havilands Brought From California.

Arrangements have been made to transfer six FB-3 single-seater pursuit planes from the marine corps aviation field at Quantico, Va., to San Diego, Calif. The flights incident to the transfer will be in direct charge of Maj. Ross E. Rowell, in command of the second marine aviation group at naval air station at San Diego. He and First Lieut. William J. Wallace and Second Lieut. Clayton E. Jerome will pilot three DH planes (de Havilland) from that place, leaving about November 15, to Quantico, and they will bring with them Marine Gunner Michael Wodarczyk and Gunnery Sgts. Charles W. Frith and Albert S. Munch, who will pilot the DHs back to San Diego.

Maj. Rowell and Lieuts. Wallace and Jerome and Capt. James T. Moore and First Lieuts. Christian F. Schilt and William L. McKittick will fly the six FB-3s from Quantico to San Diego. Master Technical Sgt. Archie Paschal and Gunnery Sgts. John I. Hockman and John H. Price will fly three DHs of the Quantico station to San Diego, in order to provide air transportation for the return of Capt. Moore and Lieuts. Schilt and McKittick to their station.

These transcontinental flights of six planes in each direction will follow generally the southern route by way of Tucson, Ariz.; Dryden, San Antonio and Dallas, Tex.; Muskogee, Okla.; St. Louis, Mo., and Dayton, Ohio. Besides the transfer of the six pursuit planes to the west coast, the flights also are of importance, in that they afford opportunity for training over the coast-to-coast route. No effort will be made to establish speed records. It is expected that the flights will be made each way in from four to seven days.

Second Lieuts. Glenn M. Britt, William L. Conway, Charles R. Fike and Lawrence R. De Wine, who were pursuing the aviation course that was suspended as a result of the destruction wrought by the hurricane at Pensacola, Fla., a few weeks ago, and who now are attached to marine barracks at that place, will resume the course with the class to assemble there in January. In addition Capts. William C. Byrd and Euvelle D. Howard and Second Lieuts. James Smedeker and Leslie F. Narum, now under preliminary aviation training at Quantico, will be assigned to that class

SCOUTING FLEET MARINE COMMANDER TRANSFERS

Maj. Edward A. Ostermann Moves Headquarters From Wyoming to Texas.

SHIFTS ON CHINA STATION

Maj. Edward A. Ostermann, fleet marine officer of the scouting fleet, will be transferred from U. S. S. Wyoming to U. S. S. Texas when the fleet commander makes the corresponding shift. The Wyoming, which has been serving as flagship, now is at her home yard for major alterations, and the Texas, which has completed such work, will become flagship of the scouting fleet.

Capt. C. P. Matteson has been ordered detached from naval air station at San Diego and to duty as marine officer of the U. S. S. Seattle, flagship of the United States fleet. He will relieve Capt. A. F. Hart, who will go to duty as marine officer of U. S. S. Rochester, relieving Capt. J. W. Thomason, who will come to this city for special duty at headquarters of marine corps.

Capt. Omar T. Pfeiffer will be transferred from U. S. S. Huron, flagship of Asiatic station, to command of a provisional company of marines on duty in south China, as relief of Capt. William B. Croka, who will go to duty on board the Huron.

First Lieut. H. M. H. Fleming will go on November 22 from duty at marine barracks at Quantico to duty on board U. S. S. Antares, flagship of train squadron 1 of the fleet base force, as relief of First Lieut. G. R. Roman, who will go to duty at navy ordnance plant, Charleston, W. Va. First Lieut. F. L. Buchanan, now at that plant, will go to duty at Quantico. First Lieut. P. A. Lesser has been ordered transferred from U. S. S. Huron to U. S. S. Helena, and First Lieut. J. A. McShane from the Helena to the Huron.

NAVY OFFICERS SHIFTED IN FAR EASTERN POSTS

Capt. John M. Enochs Detailed to Command Helena and South China Patrol.

RELIEVES COMDR. MOSES

Capt. John M. Enochs, who recently arrived at Manila from duty at New York as assistant commandant of Third naval district and port director of New York harbor, has been assigned to command the gunboat Helena and the south China patrol, relieving Commander Charles C. Moses, who will come home for assignment.

Other changes among navy officers on the Asiatic station are Commander Randall Jacobs to command of the gunboat Monocacy and Lieut. Comdr. J. L. Schafferhaus from command of gunboat Palos to United States for assignment.

Commander Richard B. Coffman has been ordered detached from Third naval district and assigned as executive officer of U. S. S. Seattle, relieving Commander Charles W. Crosse, who goes to duty in Twelfth naval district.

Commander Harvey Delano has been ordered detached from receiving ship at New York and to duty as executive officer of U. S. S. Utah, relieving Commander Isaac C. Kidd, who will assume command of U. S. S. Vega. Commander George H. Bowdey, now in command of the Vega, will go to duty as executive officer of U. S. S. New York, to fill a vacancy.

Commander Herbert S. Babbitt has been ordered detached from command of U. S. S. Williamson and to duty in Third naval district. He will be relieved in command of that destroyer by Lieut. Comdr. Herbert A. Ellis, from recruiting duty at Springfield, Mass.

Commander Robert M. Hinckley will go from duty in office of naval intelligence, Navy Department, to duty as navigator of U. S. S. Trenton, as relief of Lieut. Comdr. Vance D. Chapline, who comes to the department for duty in bureau of navigation.

Lieut. Comdr. Rush S. Fay, now attached to receiving ship at San Francisco, is assigned to command U. S. S. Mullany, relieving Lieut. Comdr. Ward W. Waddell, who will go to recruiting duty at Los Angeles, Calif., as relief of Commander Daniel T. Ghent, who will be placed in charge of the Western recruiting district at San Francisco.

JAPANESE BEAT BUGS WITH ELECTRICAL AID

String Lights Over Rice Fields to Lure the Insects to Suicide.

Rice crops in parts of Japan are spangled with electric lights every night during certain season of the year. Japanese farmers have learned that by the use of many lamps they can fool myriads of bugs to commit suicide. Otherwise the bugs would deposit ravenous larvae in the rice plants—to the detriment of the crop.

Experiments showed that a 50-watt lamp suspended over a vat of water for each 2½ acres of rice field would attract enought of the insects to materially reduce the damage they can do. The bugs, flying toward the point of light, strike against the lamp bulb and drop into the water to expire.

Further experiments will determine how much additional light can be used economically for this sort of thing so as to increase the tragedy of bugdom to its highest point in the interest of cheaper and better rice.

Methodist Woman Ordained as Elder

(By the Associated Press.)

Mrs. Belle C. Harman, who was ordained elder at Helena, Mont., is said to be the first woman in the Methodist Episcopal Church to receive elder's orders. Two years ago, when Mrs. Harman was ordained deacon, a similar claim went undisputed. She was granted orders in both cases after a rigid examination and a vote of conference. She has been a supply pastor for a number of years.

In the Methodist Church there are two ordinations for the ministry, ordination as deacon and ordination as elder.

AGE AS PROMOTION BASIS IS OPPOSED BY ARMY OFFICERS

Arrangement Declared as an Unacceptable Substitute for Length of Service.

BOARD IS IN SESSION TO CONSIDER PROBLEM

Age-in-Grade Retirement for All Ranks, as in Navy, Has Been Suggested.

The board, consisting of the two Assistant Secretaries of War and the chief of staff, now in session at the War Department for the purpose of considering problems relating to the army promotion system, in accordance with a clause in the act of the last session relating to the air corps, has been giving attention to views of individual officers and to studies furnished by the Army War college and the personnel branch of the general staff.

Two phases that have been the subject of service comment relate to an arrangement of the promotion list according to the age of officers in certain grades, and the determination of position on that list by length of service. Much has been said in favor of both propositions, but the board is expected to find the former arrangement, that of age, an unsatisfactory and unacceptable substitute for length of service in any attempt to revise the promotion list.

The records show that in 1920 there were appointed to the army some 115 officers over 45 years of age, and 315 more over 42 years. These officers were, and are for the most part, junior on the promotion list to officers much younger in age.

Advantage for 47 Per Cent.

It has been figured out, if preference were given for age in the matter of promotion, that something like 47 per cent of the entire group would gain an advantage, while more than 50 per cent would lose. If the promotion-list were arranged on the age basis, there would be a disturbance, it is pointed out, of seniority in the case of those from the United States Military Academy and of the former provisional second lieutenants.

The existing relative order in these particular groups of officers was the result of competitive examination, and this form of compensation in order of merit would be nullified. This has been described as rewarding those that entered the army late in life and placing something like a penalty upon those that pass the requisite examinations and come into the service early in their careers. The board, therefore, is apt to conclude that this proposition is not acceptable, all things considered.

Group Is Dissastified.

There is much dissatisfaction among a group of officers that regard themselves as detrimentally affected by assignment to position on the promotion list according to length of commissioned service, that from April 6, 1917, to November 11, 1918. They express a desire to have counted previous service, represented by a variety of connections, as that of former enlisted men, national guard service, that as reserve officer, and so on.

There also is a request in some quarters for credit for constructive service claimed on account of previous training or education. It is admitted by those having to do with the problem that such claims in some instances are valid when taken as an independent proposition, but it is imagined that the special board will find, as have other boards that have wrestled with the subject, that it would be a grave mistake to abandon the principle of counting actual commissioned service, confined within the period within the two dates named, in the case of those that entered the regular army after service in the world war as temporary officers.

Limitation Likely to Prevail.

This limitation probably will prevail, despite the assertion of some officers that service rendered after November 11, 1918, should be counted as well as that prior to that date. This would be regarded as unfair to those combat officers whose service terminated with the armistice, while it undoubtedly would be beneficial, for example, to those that remained for purposes of demobilizing the world war forces.

With respect to studies under consideration, there are intimations of a plan to provide for age-in-grade retirement for all ranks, a system that now prevails in the higher grades of the navy and proposed by pending legislation for extension in that service. This feature, however, may not be developed in detail in time to present to Congress as a concrete departmental project in December.

BUDGET MAY CAUSE NAVY TO PUT SHIPS IN RESERVE SERVICE

Contemplated Force Scarcely Furnishes Complements for Those in Commission.

HOLD GEN. LORD SEEKS GREATER CUTS IN FUNDS

Service Contends It Could Carry On Unhampered by Politics.

The navy continues to struggle with problems pertaining to maintenance of its enlisted force and the keeping of enough ships in commission to operate the fleet in accordance with minimum requirements.

Appropriations for the current fiscal year contemplate an enlisted force of 82,500 men, and with the rising cost of the ration and other items of expense it would not be surprising if the service were unable to keep that number, with available funds, to the end of the year. That force scarcely furnishes complements for ships supposed to be in full commission.

Budget estimates for the next fiscal year contemplate maintenance of an enlisted force of 80,750 men, which represents a theoretical decrease of 1,750 men. The result, however, may be an actual decrease of greater proportions, if costs of personnel maintenance continue to rise.

The new aircraft carriers Saratoga and Lexington are to be ready for commission by spring or summer. Each will require an enlisted complement of about 1,173 men as ship crew and about 327 for aviation, or a total for the two ships of approximately 3,200 men. This added to the decrease that will result from inadequacy of funds will represent an actual enlisted deficiency of approximately 5,000 men.

Would Put Ships in Reserve.

Naval officials have been giving careful consideration to the situation thus in prospect. Several schemes for the placing of ships out of commission and thus curtailing the activities of the fleet have been discussed, and the matter has been gone over again with Admiral Charles F. Hughes, commander-in-chief of the fleet, since his arrival on the East coast the first of the month.

It is the intention not to give out anything officially concerning the plans until the situation is explained to the congressional committees having to do with appropriations. It is understood, however, that one proposition is to put four, and possibly five, of the battleships of the scouting fleet in reserve next year, and it is said that is preferred in the Navy Department to another suggestion that one battleship, one light cruiser and six destroyers be withdrawn from active service.

The naval appropriations for the current fiscal year are in the neighborhood of $327,000,000. The approved budget estimates for naval purposes during the next fiscal year are understood to be about $315,000,000, and the budget bureau and the President have refused to approve additions to them. Moreover, although the imminent situation promises to be bad enough, it is likely to be worse in the future if the budget bureau has its way.

Could Save $25,000,000.

Gen. Herbert M. Lord, director of the budget, is understood to have the ambition to bring military and naval expenditures down to a combined total of $500,000,000 a year; and it is manifest that, if the ambition continues to approach realization, the army and navy will be subjected to policies that will impair defense projects and seriously interfere with training and maintenance of the forces on an efficient and adequate basis.

The navy contends that if it were permitted to administer its shore establishments on the basis of economy and efficiency unhampered by politics and unrestricted in some respects as to the purposes for which the lump sum made available could be used, it would be able to carry on even with the curtailed appropriations in contemplation for next year. It is estimated that something like $25,000,000 a year could be saved by closing unneeded shore stations and curtailing the activities of some of little importance.

Although the number of enlisted men that would be released directly by that process to the service afloat would not be great, if the appropriation laws so were worded that the savings could be applied to personnel maintenance, the navy probably could obtain enough men to man its ships. However, even a suggestion that any station be closed or its civil employes be reduced has brought down upon the Navy Department an avalanche of protests from local people and members of Congress.

USE OF POWER INDEX TO NATION'S OUTPUT

"Power has always been in America a cheap substitute for labor," Prof. J. B. Davidson of Iowa State college said in a discussion of electricity on the farm. "As a motor, man is hopelessly outclassed. A good husky man is able to develop about one-tenth of a horsepower. With horsepower at 10 cents per hour, his value as a motor is one cent an hour.

"The relation between power and production in agriculture is clearly shown in a chart in Bulletin 1348, U. S. Department of Agriculture. It is to be noted that there is a very definite relationship between the value of the crops produced per agricultural worker in the various States and some of the foreign countries and the amount of power used. If there is a more significant relationship in American agriculture I do not know of it."

VETERANS' NEWS

AMERICAN LEGION.

Victory Post.

Victory Post, No. 4, the American Legion, held its first meeting in the Woodmen of the World hall Tuesday. Chaplain Buker opened the meeting with a prayer for the unfortunate victims of the La Plata tornado. In the absence of Commander Schwalm, Past Commander Shultz presided. Final arrangements for the surrender of the old charters of the Robley D. Evans and the McGroarty-O'Connell posts and the request for a new charter for Victory post, No. 4, were made.

Richard Simpson and Charles Ellsworth, adjutants of the consolidating posts, presented the new flag to the Victory post. An Armistice day committee composed of Raymond A. Burke, chairman; Neal Lanahan, Eugene L. Callaghan, Madison Hill, John Clark and Ernest Lyons, was named to lay Legion wreaths on the graves of "Fighting Bob" Evans, Lieut. Stephen Patrick McGroarty and Private John O'Connell in Arlington National cemetery.

In the drive for funds for the drum corps the following were awarded prizes: Leonard Colbert, a handsome inlaid Lane cedar chest; Capt. Watson B. Nuller, Vice Commander Neal Lanahan, M. B. Young and Miss Anne Hutton each a $2.50 gold piece. Adjutant Simpson made a report on the Halloween ball. Raymond Davey was appointed president of the Drum Corps association; Raymond Burke, the financial and corresponding secretary, and Robert Hundley, quartermaster. The drum corps paraded in the business men's festival, Friday night, in Anacostia, and was warmly greeted along the entire route.

With a view toward increasing the 1927 membership to 500, Madison Hill was appointed chairman of a membership committee. Paul Burthe, a member of Costello post, was a guest of the evening. This initial meeting of Victory post, No. 4, was attended by 75 members and upon adjournment refreshments were served.

At the last meeting of Kenneth H. Nash post, No. 8, "Old Timers" night was celebrated and a large number of comrades were present. Seven members were initiated. Comrade George P. Grove had charge of the entertainment. Capt. F. H. K. Reynolds was elected junior vice commander to fill the unexpired term of Comrade Cogswell who resigned due to pressure of school work.

The badges for the various officers of the post have arrived and are very neat. Nominations for officers for the year 1927 will be made at the next meeting of the post to be held on Wednesday, November 17.

VETERANS OF FOREIGN WARS.

National Capital Post.

National Capital post, No. 127, Veterans of Foreign Wars, at its bimonthly meeting Monday was addressed by Post Commander A. E. Pierce on urgent assistance needed by the Widows and Orphans Home association which is striving to secure necessary funds to erect a home for widows and orphans of veterans of all wars.

Miss Elizabeth Shaw has graciously offered sufficient land at Brentwood, D. C., for this worthy project and will deed this land to the association, free and unencumbered, immediately after building begins.

The commander stressed the fact that all veterans in the District should be proud to belong to this organization and should put forth every effort to help raise funds needed to build this edifice and especially the world war veteran because in the natural sequence of events the widows and orphans of their comrades will benefit the most of all. A card of membership costing $1 per year can be secured from Arthur H. League, 1352 South Carolina avenue southeast.

The membership voted that the post purchase a box for the departmental ball on Armistice day. All members were requested by the commander to make every effort to be present at the two meetings in December in order that capable and efficient officers may be chosen for the ensuing year.

Memorial services were held and taps sounded by Sergt. Bugler Henry Loveless for the following comrades: Joseph Much, George Seymour and William Riley.

Robert Callahan, who served in Battery G, Fourth United States artillery, in the war with Spain, and Dr. John L. DeMayo, who saw service in France and Germany with sanitary unit No. 115, M. C., were obligated to membership. Carleton R. Bingham, who served in Company E, First gas regiment, C. W. S., resumed his membership after an unavoidable absence of four years.

A delegation of members represented the post Tuesday at the funeral of Sergt. John J. Boyle, past commander of Louis A. Craig post, V. F. W., Kansas City, Mo., also a past commander of Ernestine Schumann-Heink chapter, No. 2, Disabled American Veterans. Sergt. Boyle was buried with military honors in Arlington cemetery.

Federal Post.

Federal post No. 824, V. F. W., gave a birthday party to its Ladies' auxiliary, November 4, at St. Agnes' parish hall. The features of the evening included cards and the awarding of fantastic prizes. The program comprised selections on the musical saw by Comrade Souder, accompanied by his daughter on the piano; vocal selections by Miss Elsie Jorss, who is a new member of the auxiliary, and a tramp skit given by comrades Lapin and Guthridge. The program concluded with a monkey drill given by Comrades Lapin, Guthridge, Lawless, and Ollernshaw, directed by Acting Commander Lucas.

Chaplain Anderson, in the name of the post, presented the auxiliary with a silk altar flag, which was accepted by Mrs. Mary Lucas, president of the auxiliary.

The Ladies' auxiliary will give its first big card party this season at St. Agnes parish hall, 46 Q street northwest, tomorrow evening, for the benefit of the relief fund.

SPANISH WAR VETERANS.

Richard J. Harden Camp.

Richard J. Harden camp, No. 2, at its meeting Thursday mustered into the camp the following:

Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries, chief chemical warfare service, at present department commander of the department of the American Legion; Powhatan English, Louis Nusbaum, Arthur V. Thomas, Ernest E. Landon, John R. Bradley and H. B. Tyler, bringing the camp membership nearly to 700 in number, Harden being one of the largest camps in the organization. The camp was notified of the deaths of Joseph B. Much and Martin M. Garvey. They were buried in Arlington National cemetery with military honors. Commander Shuster reported the receipt of a cable from the President of Cuba acknowledging message of sympathy previously sent by the camp on the occasion of the recent hurricane. The commander announced that the meeting on December 2 will be called at 7:30 p. m. in order that the business of the camp be transacted before the banquet takes place. Many guests have been invited for this occasion and a large attendance is looked for.

Addresses were delivered by Department Commander Edward J. Nolan, Gen. A. A. Fries, Past Commander C. P. Belknap, National Chief of Staff William L. Mattocks, Senor C. de Quesada, Past Department Commander Samuel P. Mawson and Capt. W. J. Stannard, leader of the Army band. There was a large attendance and the speakers were all well received.

James S. Pettit Camp.

Col. James S. Pettit camp, No. 3, met Tuesday night at 921 Pennsylvania avenue southeast and increased its membership by one by the transfer from Richard J. Harden camp of Samuel Hubacher. Commander Deck is at present confined to Walter Reed hospital and in his absence the meeting was called to order by Past Commander Lemuel D. Jones. Department Commander Edward J. Nolan reported the appointments of members of this department as national aid de camps. Past Department Commander League spoke at some length on the proceedings of the recent meeting of the Widows and Orphans association and commended the auxiliaries of the Spanish War Veterans for the assistance which they had rendered the association in the past. He also announced that the Henry W. Lawton camp has decided to organize an auxiliary in the near future, and extended an invitation to the members of Pettit camp to attend the next meeting of Admiral George Dewey Naval camp. Announcement was also made of the election of Commander J. P. Yaden, of Lawton camp to the office of president of the Citizens association.

Department President Edna R. Summerfield announces that the services of Happy Walker and his jazz band have been secured to furnish the music for the ball to be given on December 18 at Franklin Square hotel by the auxiliaries of the department of the District of Columbia. Many other interesting features are planned to make the ball a most enjoyable affair. All Spanish War Veterans, members of the auxiliaries and their families, as well as the public are invited to attend.

Volunteer Infantry Association.

The First District of Columbia Infantry association held an interesting meeting on Wednesday night at 835 Southern building, at which time plans were completed for the annual banquet to be held Saturday, commemorating the muster out of the regiment. The association decided to hold the banquet at the Metropolitan hotel at 7:30 p. m. Those desiring to attend should forward their names to John Lewis Smith, secretary, 835 Southern building.

The "huskin' bee and barn dance" of the American War Veterans club on Halloween was so successful and so thoroughly enjoyed by the members of the club and their friends that the club has decided to repeat the affair at the L'Aiglon salon, Eighteenth street and Columbia road, Monday night, November 29.

As on the previous occasion gingham dresses, aprons and sunbonnets will be worn by the women folks and overalls by the men. George Bruce's Orkney Springs Hotel orchestra has been reengaged for the occasion and the coming event promises to eclipse the last one. Instead of those attending bringing their own lunch boxes as heretofore the club on November 29 will serve cider, doughnuts, ginger bread and apples.

Prizes will be awarded to the best "rube" costume, with prizes for the best "gingham" outfit worn by a woman attending. Other prizes will also be awarded in various contests. The affair is open to the public and veterans of various organizations and friends, who should communicate with Lieut. Charles Riemer, secretary of the club, Metropolitan Bank building.

KIMBROUGH NEXT IN LINE FOR GRADE OF COLONEL

No Promotions Made in Army During Week; Vacancies in Various Ranks.

FIVE IN POST OF MAJOR

During the last week no promotions were made in the army, but there are vacancies in the several grades that are due to be filled.

One of them is in the grade of colonel, to which Lieut. Col. James M. Kimbrough, infantry, is entitled. Upon his promotion, Lieut. Col. Alvin K. Baskette, quartermaster corps, will be senior in his grade, and next due for advancement on occurrence of a vacancy.

There are four vacancies in the grade of lieutenant colonel, to which the following are entitled; Maj. Levi G. Brown, cavalry; Owen G. Collins, quartermaster corps, and Richard C. Moore and Lewis M. Adams, corps of engineers. With their promotion, Maj. Frederic H. Smith, coast artillery, will remain as senior in his grade.

Five vacancies exist in the grade of major, to which the following are entitled: Capts. James K. Cockrell, cavalry; William Spence, field artillery; Willis McD. Chapin, cast artillery, and Fred B. Inglis and Robert B. McBride, jr., field artillery. When they are promoted, Capt. Paul V. Kane, field artillery, will be senior in his grade.

There are six vacancies in the grade of captain, to which the following are entitled: First Lieuts. Thomas J. Heavey, cavalry; Henry M. Black, chemical warfare service; Wallace F. Safford, cavalry; Willard D. Murphy, coast artillery; Joshua A. Stansell, signal corps, and John M. Erwin, ordance department. With their promotion First Lieut. Fidel V. CATHOLIC U. DEBATE SCHEDULE INCLUDES TRIP TO NEW YORK

DOD NOON CLUB GIVES SMOKER; RYAN SPEAKS

Men From Education Faculty Address a Meeting at Trinity College.

The Dod Noon club of Catholic university held a smoker Thursday night at College inn. The Rev. John A. Ryan, honor guest, gave a talk on politics. He pointed out the problems confronting a young man of today who is about to join a party and explained policies of the parties and what each stood for. Following Dr. Ryan's talk, members of the club gave a short entertainment. The Rev. Moderator, Dr. Charles Hart, concluded the evening with a talk on "Club Spirit."

Edward M. Curran, president of the Shahan Debating society, announced a schedule of six debates. Plans call for debates with George Washington university, Bucknell and St. Viator college of Bourbonais, Ill. These debates will be held at the university. The team also will debate Loyola college at Baltimore, St. Joseph's college at Philadelphia, and Fordham at New York. The question for debate will be "Resolved, That the Eighteenth Amendment Should Be Repealed." This will mark the second year of intercollegiate debating at the university. The team last year had a successful season, having defeated Fordham college and the University of Arizona and loosing to Wyoming by a 2 to 1 decision.

Speak at Trinity.

Dr. Johnson and Dr. Jordan, of the department of education, addressed the nineteenth annual meeting of the Women's Intercollegiate Association for Student Government, held at Trinity college, Thursday through yesterday. Dr. Johnson spoke on "Psychology Applied to Judicial Functions of Student Government;" Dr. Jordan on "The Uses of Psychology in Influencing Public Opinion."

Exercises in observance of education week were held Monday, Wednesday and Friday in the Martin Maloney chemical laboratory auditorium. These exercises have taken their place as one of the most important events of the school year and all professors and students were in attendance. Dr. Jordan spoke on "Education and Moral Development." He stated that whether we define education as life or as preparation for living, morality must be the principal objective of the educator.

Dr. Ward took as his subject "Some Catholic Chemists." He recalled that the history of chemistry is filled with Catholic names, and no time is more fitting than the present to recall those whose contributions laid the foundations of the science and furnished the inspiration for its progress. Lavoisier, the father of chemistry, was a stanch Catholic and numbers among his followers the distinguished Catholic chemists, Dumas, Sainte-Clair, Deville, Chevreul, Dulong, Petit, Regneault, Cailletet, Fraunhofer and Berthelot.

Read Drama and Grow Wise.

Mr. Deering, in his paper "The Educational Value of the Drama," said: "Read drama and grow wise in your own conceit and wiser in the conceit of others. Thus you will work with a clearer understanding of your fellowman; you will be happier because of the hours you spent with the children of that make-believe world; you will grow more sympathetic with human nature and more tolerant of human failure; you will become a better companion of those who must spend their lives close to your own. Thus will the aim of education be more realized; therein lies the educational value of the drama."

Dr. Landry took as his subject "Religion and Exact Science." Religion is essential in two respects, he said, to a world which is in process of rapid transformation before our very eyes by the results of scientific research and progress.

Dr. Foran, in a paper, "Catholic Opportunities in Educational Research," explained the opportunities available in the field of experimental education and in educational psychology are tremendous in their proportions. Students of this branch of education are in a position to make a contribution to Catholic education that is eagerly awaited and that will have a widespread and penetrating influence, he said.

Paper on Newman.

Dr. Ryan read a paper on Cardinal Newman's "Idea of an Educated Man." He said that "perhaps the highest praise we can bestow on Newman's conception of education is to say that it is not really his at all but in essence an acceptance of the ideal of Plato. And he claims our deepest gratitude for defending that ideal at a critical moment when the fads and fancies of the present day are coming to light in the form of people's institutes, universities without residence and without tutors, the glorification of what is sometimes arrogantly called science, the demand that education be made 'practical' and the other horrors that beset us now."

Dr. Lennox explained "The Function of Literature in the Development of Character." He said literature unquestionably will render service in the development of character.

BUSINESS HIGH ALUMNI VAUDEVILLE THIS WEEK

Show Will Be Followed by Dancing in Gymnasium; Play to Be Given.

PRINCIPAL WRITES SONG

Plans for the annual alumni vaudeville were outlined by Alfred McGarraghy, speaking before the Business High school students at assembly Thursday. Dates for the vaudeville will be Friday and Saturday. Paul Graves and Miss Evelyn McQueen will be the headliners and Miss Margaret Ryan will be in an original one-act play. The show will be followed by general dancing in the gymnasium.

At a pep meeting for the football team last week, the Boys' Glee club sang a new song written by Allan Davis, principal. The song was written for the occasion. Cheering was led by Nathan Cohen, school cheer leader. Mr. Cohen and M. Sharity also entertained with a one-act play.

The first Business High school tennis team in several years has been chosen by elimination through a tournament. Four players qualified for the team out of 25 candidates who played in the tournament. Joseph Sharritz was named captain of the team. Girls' basketball teams also were formed last week. The teams represent sections of the school, and practice is held twice a week.

Miss Bliss Miller and Miss Louise Gillis won first and second prizes offered annually by Galt's jewelry store. Miss Miller took first prize with a chart which she prepared on "Insect Pests," and Miss Gillis chose "Milk" for her topic.

Discarded cadet uniforms belonging to the school were included in the bundles prepared by the students for the Near East Relief. These suits are heavily padded, and should make very acceptable wearing apparel during the winter.

KAPPA BETA PI GIVES FIRST SUPPER PARTY

The first of a series of Chinese suppers given by the Epsilon chapter, Kappa Beta Pi legal sorority, was served Friday night in the tea room of the Washington College of Law. Miss Maude H. Yates, Miss Elizabeth Reed, Mrs. Anna Wolf, Miss Agnes Kempf, and Miss Annie Treadwell, Kappa members of the senior class, were hostesses. A business meetnig of the sorority was held Wednesday evening.

Prof. Harry A. Hegarty will complete his course on elementary law for the freshmen this week, and an examination will be given Friday. This will be followed by a course on sales under the supervision of Prof. Elizabeth C. Harris.

Practice court sessions were started November 8, ample facilities having been provided by Dean Grace Hays Riley for three courtrooms, which are arranged in equal dignity with actual courts, giving the student the benefit of orderly procedure.

PATRIOTISM URGED IN EDUCATION WEEK AT GEORGETOWN U.

Religion Also Is Stressed to Students of College Meeting in Conferences.

LAW SCHOOL PROPOSES $10 FEE FOR ATHLETICS

Assessments Planned Would Go Into Effect in Next Collegiate Year.

Cooperating with the United States bureau of education as in previous years, the entire student body of Georgetown college during the past week joined in the observance of national education week.

Dean Robert A. Parsons arranged a series of daily conferences on different phases of education pertaining to national life in accordance with the appeal made by the Federal bureau to all universities and schools. Members of the faculty, directing the various conferences, emphasized particularly the patriotic and religious influences of Catholic universities on the youth of the nation.

Conferences Monday were devoted to the general topic of patriotism, the discussions bringing out the intense reverence which Catholic schools generally have for preserving the established order of government and home life.

Study of the American Constitution and American history are particularly stressed at the college and students were urged to compete for the prizes offered annually for the best essays on these subjects.

Other special conferences during the week were those held Wednesday on the place that should be given religion in the college curriculum, and Friday on the general topic of the Catholic college. Religious instruction, it was emphasized, plays an important influence on the morals of college youths, a question that is becoming vital in American colleges today.

Adviser to Freshman.

The Rev. Joseph S. Dinneen, student counselor at the college, it was pointed out, is available at all times as a friend and adviser to individual students who wish to talk over with him their plans for the future. In this way he has been able to accomplish a useful mission.

Enthusiastic support of the athletic association was manifested by the students at the law school last week as a result of meetings addressed by class presidents and the Rev. Vincent S. McDonough, faculty athletic adviser, and Austin Canfield of the alumni committee. George Shedan, president of the senior morning section, and Clergue C. Schilling, senior president of the afternoon section, presided at meetings of their classes.

As a result of the interest aroused, the morning section the following day assessed each member of the class $5 for the second semester as the class contribution to the general athletic fund. All the members pledged themselves to buy tickets to all games during the remainder of the year and recommended that similar action be taken by other classes.

Vote for $10 for Athletics

The most significant outgrowth of the athletic rally was a resolution adopted by the second year morning class which recommended that next year the faculty shall be asked to have each student in the school assessed $10 toward the support of athletics. Action on the resolution will be taken by the Association of Class Presidents as soon as all classes in the school have held elections, probably by November 22.

The Association of Class Presidents, a movement started by Dr. Hugh J. Fegan, assistant dean, has proved an important adjunct to student activities. Meeting each week with Dr. Fegan, the class presidents take up with him the problems and activities with which they are called upon to deal. Dr. Fegan, in this way, is able to keep in touch with student affairs and act as counselor.

Owing to the large size of the freshman class, the morning and afternoon sections have been divided into small groups for the purpose of meeting each week with some member of the faculty especially assigned to the various units. The faculty members to whom two groups each have been assigned are assisted by the following senior advisors: Prof. Fegan, with George C. Baldt and Henry P. Hughes; Prof. Tooke, with Clayton B. Fogel and Henry L. Walker; Prof. Price, with Joseph P. Spinnato and Florian J. Boland; Prof. De Sloovere, with John T. Thoma and Raymond J. Norton; Prof. Keigwin, with Carl J. Hartwig and Barron Fredericks; Prof. Maurer, with Joseph D. DiLeo and Raymond C. Cushwa.

Kappa Alpha Phi Smoker.

The first smoker held in the new home of Kappa Alpha Phi fraternity, school of foreign service, was enjoyed recently by a distinguished number of guests. Corhal Orescan, president of the fraternity, paid a tribute to the memory of Dr. Guilermo A. Sherwell, of the faculty, who died last summer. Dr. Farag Mikhail Moussa, third secretary of the Egyptian legation, told the fraternity members of his interest in the principles and ideals of the school.

Col. Alexander Greger, formerly minister of the Czar of Russia to various countries, impressed on the young men the opportunities of American youth.

Prize In Oratory Offered To American U. Students

Prize Will Be Presented at Lincoln Breakfast, February 12—Shakespeare Bulletin, Edited by Dr. Kaufman, Makes First Appearance.

The District of Columbia Society of the Dames of the Loyal Legion has offered a prize of $25 to the student at the college of liberal arts of American university for the best oration on Lincoln, and arrangements are being made for the contest, which probably will be held in February.

The winner of the contest will be presented with the prize at a special occasion, the Lincoln breakfast of the District of Columbia Society, Dames of the Loyal Legion, to be held at the Willard hotel, February 12. Mrs. Mary Logan Tucker is president of the organization, and is making arrangements for the function.

The first issue of the Shakespeare Association Bulletin, official organ of the Shakespeare Association of America, to be edited by Dr. Paul Kaufman, professor of English of American university, has come from the press here, and been distributed to members of the association, and libraries, not only of this country, but of Europe. It is the third issue of the publication, the first two having been published in New York city under the first editor, Harry M. Ayres.

"Because of Shakespeare's unique and commanding place in our Anglo-American culture," says Dr. Kaufman in an editorial, "the association's 'founding fathers' believed that some national body might render notable service in correlating the myriad interests that have gathered about the works of the myriad-minded poet, in creating a clearing house of information about the activities inspired by these interests, and in fostering a sound appreciatou of his genius. That this faith was well grounded is proved by the widespead and eager response which has come from every part of the country." In this issue appear an article on the new Shakespeare Memorial theater at Stratford, a bibliography, news of the association, the club forum, and the Shakespeare bookshelf.

The new History club of the college, to which are admitted only those students making a grade of B or higher, held its first meeting on Thursday night, under direction of Dr. B. B. James, professor of history.

Dr. J. W. Grazen, of Browning Settlement, London, will give an illustrated lecture at chapel tomorrow morning at 10:30 in Hurst hall on the campus, from the subject, "Browning."

Miss Elizabeth Drew, noted English lecturer, will deliver an address Thursday night in the women's residence hall on "Modern English Humor."

The monthly meeting of the Women's Guild of American university will be held Tuesday noon in the women's residence hall and will be addressed by Dean Woods.

Will Hutchins, professor of art appreciation and dramatics of the university, delivered a lecture Tuesday morning to the Washington club on "Washington as an Art Center."

Regulations by which athletes win their letter "A" in football have been adopted by the faculty and provide for award of the coveted emblem to men who participated in sixteen quarters during the eight games of the season.

The faculty also has provided for award of the university letter to women who comply with certain regulations winning 100 points. Among the scoring factors are participation in class games of hockey, "hikes" of 6 miles or more and observance of health regulations.

An enthusiastic mass meeting of students was held Friday prior to the game yesterday with Bridgewater closing the football season.

MINER NORMAL SENIOR CLASSES GIVE PLAYS

Kindergartens and fourth grades of Miner Normal school have been given a series of tests by Miss Irene Leake, of the department of research and measurements. Detroit tests were used for children of the kindergarten.

The Social Service club, sponsored by Miss Rudella Gordon, has presented a series of plays for entertainment of children of the Eighth Street Orphans' home. Miss Arneta Grinage presented the playlets on Thursday and Friday evenings.

Senior classes in history and civics, under Miss Marguerite Thomas, offered for entertainment of children of practice schools a series of one-act Halloween plays. Original plays were written by members of the class, from which five were selected for presentation. These included "The Spell," by Celestine Jefferson; "The Cat's Strike," by Evelyn Morris; "How Mildred Saw," by Helen Butler; "The Good Witch," by Arneta Grinage, and "Stealing Out," by Marie Holmes.

Officers of the senior class have been elected: Edward J. Edwards, president; Gursta Boyd, vice president; Gladys Sears, treasurer; Lucy Bailey, secretary. An executive committee has been selected, to include Raymond Glascoe, Hirman Jones and Miss R. E. Orme. Junior class officers are Meryl Jones, president; Miriam Hutchins, vice president; Muriel Miller, treasurer, and Mrs. Edith Boller, secretary.

Black Shoes Missing At Paris Exposition

(By the Associated Press.)

Mauve, rose, pale blue, gold and silver were the predominating colors in women's shoes seen at the exposition of the "Paris leather week." Black shoes were greatly in the minority.

The exposition represented firms from Germany, Scandinavia, Great Britain, France and the United States.

For street and afternoon wear two distinct trends were noticed—one toward very simple models in snakeskin, the other being strapless models in three and four pastel combinations with cubistic designs.

The shoes are solid built and unmarred by open work.

SHOW AT EASTERN HIGH TO CARRY SCHOOL BRAND

Several widely different departments of school activity are preparing the specialties of the fall show to be presented by the Eastern High School Dramatic association in the school auditorium, Friday and Saturday, November 20 and 22.

Despite the fact preparation for the show is employing many trades, it has not been necessary to go outside the school to find means.

The feature of the show is a romantic musical comedy in three acts, "The Gypsy Rover." The comedy will be interpolated with several special vaudeville numbers.

The stage settings for "The Gipsy Rover," the scenes of which are laid in England in the time of George III, are being manufactured in the wood-turning department of the school, under the direction of Ernest Rick.

The costumes are being made by the domestic science department, under the supervision of Miss Katherine Bell and Miss Elsie Krey.

The sword and tambourin dances of the colorful gipsy scenes are being directed by Isaac Simon and the stately dance of English ladies by Miss Caroline Reeze. The tickets are being printed in the school print shop, and are being distributed through the school bank.

DISARMAMENT TOPIC AT DUNBAR SCHOOL

Dunbar High school was represented Thursday at the dedication of Young monument in Arlington cemetery by officers of the cadet regiment and by presidents and vice presidents of other school organizations. Principal W. L. Smith and several members of the faculty accompanied the students.

Invitation to join the girl reserves in the Phyllis Wheatley Young Women's Christian association has been extended high school girls by Miss Irene Ruff, in charge of girls' work there. Mrs. Martha McAdoo has interested high school students in the campaign of the association for funds.

Opposing views of disarmament were presented by speakers during the past week. Mrs. Lucy Ames Mead, of the Association for Prevention of War, spoke against all international struggle in favor of arbitration. Dr. T. Edward Jones, officer in the medical corps, emphasized the need for military preparedness as a preventive of war. He gave personal reminiscences of Armistice day overseas in 1918.

National educational week was observed under auspices of the student council. Marjorie Baltimore, senior member of this organization, spoke on the value of education. Montrose Hunt, of section E-5, rendered in assembly last Monday two organ solos.

CHILD GETS SICK CROSS, FEVERISH IF CONSTIPATED

Look at tongue! Then give fruity laxative for stomach, liver, bowels

"California Fig Syrup" can't harm children and they love it

Mother! Your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign the little stomach, liver and bowels need a cleansing at once.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach ache, diarrhoea, remember, a gentle liver and bowel cleansing should always be the first treatment given.

Nothing equals "California Fig Syrup" for children's ills; give a teaspoonful, and in a few hours all the foul waste, sour bile and fermenting food which is clogged in the bowels passes out of the system, and you have a well and playful child again. All children love this harmless, delicious, "fruity laxative," and it never fails to effect a good "inside cleansing." Directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are plainly on the bottle.

Keep it handy in your home. A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup," then see that it is made by "The California Fig Syrup Company."

G. W. U. STUDENTS TO GIVE VAUDEVILLE SHOW NOVEMBER 23

First of Entertainments Will Run Two Nights in Gymnasium of School.

INSTALLATION FOR NEW ORDER TO BE THURSDAY

W. W. Cook, of Yale, to Present Charter to Association of the Coif.

The first of the representative student entertainments of George Washington university will be given November 23, when the fourth annual vodvil show will be presented in the university gymnasium. The affair will run two nights. Edward B. Moulton, manager; C. L. Parker, jr., and Ermyntrude Vaiden are in charge. The performance November 24 will not duplicate the events of the previous evening. The unusual development in dramatics at the university during the last three years has led to the growth of several groups of individuals under the Dramatic association.

On Thursday evening at the University club one of the most important honors will be conferred, not only on the institution, but on individual members, when the installation of the Order of the Coif is celebrated. Prof. Walter Wheeler Cook, of Yale university, will come from New Haven to present the charter.

The initiation ceremony will take place at the banquet. President William Mather Lewis will be a guest of honor. The charter members of the Order of the Coif are members of the George Washington university faculty, and include Dean William C. Van Vleck, Col. Walter C. Clephane, Edwin C. Brandenburg, John Paul Earnest, Justice Wendell P. Stafford, Judge John W. Latimer, Charles S. Collier, Hector G. Spaulding, Henry W. Edgerton, Alvin E. Evans, Earl C. Arnold, Walter Lewis Moll, Lloyd H. Sutton and William Fryer. The committee in charge of the banquet consists of Prof. Charles S. Collier, Helen Newman and Prof. Hector G. Spaulding.

Glover Is Elected.

The election of Charles C. Glover, jr., as vice chairman of the board of trustees last week was received with satisfaction in the university both by students and faculty. Mr. Glover takes the place of the late Col. Archibald C. Hopkins. He is a graduate of Yale and an alumnus of the George Washington university law school.

Mr. Glover formerly was chairman of the building and grounds committee, was instrumental in aiding the building program under President Lewis' regime and has worked with the administration and student representatives.

The cooperation of the students, alumni and friends of the university in the recent Walter Camp memorial day football game made possible a greater subscription to the Yale fund than the quota allotted to George Washington university.

President Lewis last week attended the annual meeting of the Urban University association, held in Providence under auspices of Brown university. He led in the discussion of "Undergraduate Instruction." President Lewis was accompanied by Prof. Henry Grattan Doyle.

Early last week Dr. Lewis attended an alumni luncheon in Rochester, N. Y., at which it was announced that a George Washington university alumni association would be formed in that city with the cooperation of Robert B. Healy, law, '21.

Armistice Day Observed.

Armistice day was observed at the university in chapel. Col. John P. Axton, chief of the army chaplains, led the exercises. Wednesday Mrs. Mitchell Carroll will give an illustrated lecture in Corcoran hall at 11 a. m. On Friday at chapel the Rev. Jason Noble Pierce will lead the devotional exercises.

The Duke University Press has issued a book by Prof. Charles E. Hill, professor of political science at George Washington university, under the title, "The Danish Sound Dues and the Command of the Baltic."

Prof. Dewitt C. Croissant recently attended the board of directors' meeting of the National League of Masonic Clubs in Philadelphia.

The football hop is scheduled for December 3.

DEERING TO ADDRESS K. OF C. BODY TUESDAY

Will Talk on Acting Before Catholic U. School; Student Committees Named.

Prof. Arthur Deering, of Catholic university, will speak on "Something of the Art of Acting," at the Knights of Columbus Evening school, at 8 o'clock Tuesday night. On the following Tuesday he will give a reading of Barrie's play, "The Old Lady Shows Her Medals."

The student council held a meeting last Monday night. President Hugh C. McKenney appointed the following committees: Welfare, Carroll Flynn, chairman; Mrs. Barbara O'Brien and Miss Mary A. Warren; dramatic, Miss Mary E. Skinner, Miss Louise Kelly and Patrek Caton; entertainment, Eugene Luckett, Louis Welsh and George O'Neill, and publication, Miss Anna O'Brien, Charles B. Jones, John P. Scott and Daniel Hefferman.

Hugh C. McKenny, Carroll Flynn, Thomas McQueeney and Miss Louise Kelly and Miss Mary Eike are members of the executive committee. The Santa Maria club will meet Tuesday night.

ARMISTICE DAY HELD BY RANDALL JUNIOR

A special assembly was held at Randall Junior High school Thursday morning in celebration of Armistice day. The program was conducted by Capt. Peter L. Robinson and Lieut. R. E. Contee, who spoke on the significance of the armistice in the history of the world. Special lessons to be drawn from the celebration were outlined by Principal G. Smith Wormley. A tribute to Col. Charles Young was paid by E. H. Lawson.

A playet, "The Evolution of Clothing," was presented in Wednesday assembly by class 7-4, sponsored by Miss S. R. Quander, assisted by five boys from section 7-2. The characterization included Margaret Young, prologue; Viola Jones, herald; Thelma Barnes, queen clothing; Frances Strother, Elizabeth McCall, skins; Carrie Rice, furs; Evelyn Carter, wool; Beulah Johnson, silk; Daisy Brown, leather; Carrie Pinckney and Eleanor Bell, cotton; Doris Butler, linen; Nellie Butler, rubber; Owen Curtis, king; Harrison Dozier, story teller; Henry Chappelle, Theodore Hall, Clifton Smith, servants.

At the meeting of the Randall Parent-Teacher association Tuesday, Miss Lillian Robinson, president, appointed special committees. Representatives pledged to attend the Shaw conference on social hygiene.

SINGLE VOTE GIVES RACE TO CENTRAL BRUNETTES

Outcome of the Contest Conducted on Question by High School Bulletin.

GIRLS JOIN CHESS CLUB

Centralites prefer brunettes, if any significance may be attached to a contest on the question conducted last week by the Central High School Bulletin. The brunettes won over the blondes by the margin of a single vote.

Seven Central students, led by Soloman Alpher, colonel in the High School Cadet corps, are on the staff of the Adjutant, official organ of the corps. Alpher is assisted by Lieut. Col. Albert Small, assistant literary editor; Douglas Wilson and Rodney Hatcher, contributing editors; Maj. Luther Gray, business manager; Maj. Robert Troth, photographic manager, and Maj. Abraham Levin, advertising manager.

Five girls have entered the Chess club of Central, thereby transforming it into a coed organization. In practice games, however, the boys have shown a decided advantage over the girls. Carl Hesse, one of the members, is among the five best players in Washington. Virginia Riggles recently was chosen president of the Girl Reserves of Washington, the honor going to Central for the second time in as many years.

With a representative program of speeches and sketches, Miss Clem Orr, of the Central English department, entertained guests in her second hour oral English class November 5. As a foundation for a newspaper career, J. Hugh Taylor, news editor of the Bulletin, has written and sold his third feature article. The business staff of the Bulletin will launch an advertising campaign this week.

Armstrong Observes Father and Son Day

Students at Armstrong High school were addressed by George E. Charlmes Hayes at the weekly assembly on the "father and son" movement now being conducted in the colored high schools. He urged boys to carry their problems to their fathers to procure sympathetic and helpful consideration.

Armistice day was observed with appropriate ceremonies. Capt. Cicero Simms, of the Twenty-fourth regiment, recited "In Flanders Fields." The principal address was delivered by Lieut. Col. West A. Hamilton. He urged a fuller participation in the government's military program. "Taps" was blown by Sergt. Willis H. Grant, bugler of the 372d infantry.

LAW SCHOOL SENIOR DANCE OF NATIONAL WILL BE HELD DEC. 4

First Entertainment Given by University Chapter of Disabled American Veterans.

JUNIORS TO BE HOSTS TO FRESHMEN NOV. 27

Pergler Addresses Business Women's Y. W. C. A.; War College Smoker Jan. 15.

Preparations for the senior dance, one of the important social events of the year at the National university law school, are well under way.

At a meeting of the social committees of the senior, junior and freshman classes held Thursday, December 4 was set as the date for the affair. The dance will be held at the Salon des Nations in the Washington hotel.

The National university chapter of the Disabled American Veterans gave its first dance last night. Through the courtesy of Brig. Gen. Samuel Rockenbach, commander of the Third corps area, music was furnished by the Army Band orchestra. One of the features of the evening was the entertainment offered by Kin Carroll and his troupe, well known to Washington radio audiences. In addition to Mr. Carroll, Erma Calvert and Glyer Phillips participated.

Debut as Soloist.

Another feature of the program was a vocal suite by William A. Creveling, basso of the National University Glee club. This was Mr. Creveling's first appearance as a soloist at a school function.

Members of the junior class of the law school will be hosts to the freshmen at a dance at the university November 27.

Miss Zoe M. Wyatt, a graduate of the National law school in the class of 1924, has been elected prosecuting attorney of Jay county, Ind. She was prominent in law school activities for several years and ranked high in scholarship.

Dean Charles Pergler, of the school of economics and government, addressed the Y. W. C. A. organization of business women Tuesday.

The National university "War College" smoker will be held January 15.

Graduating Class At Western Elects

Joseph Greenwood has been unanimously elected president of the 1927 graduating class of Western High school, it was announced yesterday. Ruth Molyneaux carried the vice presidency by a large majority, while Helen Whitwell was chosen for secretary, and William Park, treasurer.

Mr. Greenwood has taken part in nearly all important activities at the school in the last year. He went in for dramatics and became major of the third batallion of the institution. He is a member of the football team. Miss Molyneaux is president of the Dramatic association.

Hotel Training Class To Receive Diplomas

Members of class 23 of the Lewis Hotel Training schools will receive their diplomas Wednesday, entitling them to recognition for the hotel fraternity, it was announced last night. More than 30 men and women will be present at the graduation exercises.

Fay Thomas, zone manager of the American Hotel association, will give the principal address. Various members of the faculty are expected to make speeches.

Bringing up Children

"MY sisters, my sister-in-law and myself all have families, and for years we have all given our children Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. We have recommended it hundreds of times and think it just wonderful, not only to bring up children but for ourselves. At the slightest sign of stomach trouble, colds, constipation and when out of sorts, a dose or two is all they need. Truly, it is a family medicine and the stitch in time that saves nine." (Name and address sent on request.)

Constipation, Colds, Coughs, Fevers and Other Perils of Childhood

One dose and mother's anxiety is lifted. The sickest stomach craves the taste of Syrup Pepsin. From infancy to old age the result is certain. Droopy, listless, feverish children respond as if to magic. Headache, stomachache, biliousness, coated tongue, constipation—these are the daily perils for which a host of mothers say Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the safeguard. Sold and recommended by all druggists.

For a free trial bottle send name and address to Pepsin Syrup Company, Monticello, Illinois.

Makes Hair Behave But Doesn't Show!

There's a way to keep your hair just-so, without any of that objectionable, "plastered-down" look. Just use a few drops of Danderine—comb it through hair, or use a Danderine-dampened towel—you'll be amazed at the way your hair then behaves, and its beautiful luster! Any permanent wave or water wave lasts much longer and looks much nicer when Danderine is used instead of water to "set" the wave.

Of course, you know what Danderine does to dandruff. Dissolves every bit of it. Puts scalp in the pink of condition. Invigorates hair and hair-roots. Why use anything else?

Ask Your Druggist

Get a bottle of Danderine and start its benefits today. Every drug store in America has it, for only 35c. For the finest dressing you could find, and the best aid to hair health yet discovered, just try—

AUTOMOTIVE NEWS AND GOSSIP

RESPECT THE RIGHTS OF THE PEDESTRIAN

POWER SMOOTHNESS THROUGH ANY SPEED MARKS NEW DODGE

More Rapid Acceleration and Greater Power Explained by Raphael Semmes.

VARIOUS MECHANICAL IMPROVEMENTS SHOWN

Five-Bearing Crankshaft Reduces Vibration and Aids Silence and Elasticity.

Much interest has been aroused by the invitation, "Now Drive the Car" extended by Dodge Bros. dealers from coast to coast to all owners of motor cars. Every one who owns or has driven one of the improved cars, according to Raphael Semmes, local dealer, has noticed immediately the increased quietness, more rapid acceleration and greater power and speed. All express surprise at the remarkable smoothness of power throughout the entire range of engine speed.

"Conforming to policies established twelve years ago," Mr. Semmes states, "the maker has worked quietly and unceasingly for the betterment of his product. Each suggested improvement has undergone most thorough tests over long periods both in the laboratory and on the road before its adoption to demonstrate clearly that the change would result in a better Dodge Bros. motor car.

"Dodge Bros., Inc., announced important basic improvements recently incorporated in their motor cars in their characteristic conservative manner. Their advertising contained no extravagant or spectacular claims. No undue emphasis, no use of superlatives was resorted to for the purpose of focusing attention onto first one and then another of the improvements. The natural result of this sound policy has been interest everywhere in the exact nature of the changes made to better Dodge Bros. motor car.

Five-Bearing Crankshaft

"The new five-bearing crankshaft, replacing the three-bearing type, by reducing vibration to a minimum gives impressive new silence, smoothness and elasticity. The firmer support afforded by the extra bearings and the stiffer crankcase insure longer life with less need for any mechanical attention. The crankshaft bearing area, in fact, is now over one-third larger and the weight of the crankshaft has been materially increased.

"The new shaft is forged from a 3-inch bar of chrome-vanadium steel, machined all over and then carefully balanced. Although this new crankshaft is much more costly than the previous type its adoption is amply justified by the improved engine performance.

"The new electrical equipment with independent units for starting and for generating affords many advantages. The change from twelve to six volts reduces the cost of bulbs or of the battery when, after long service, replacement becomes necessary. With proper care the battery should give longer life, as each cell is constructed with thirteen plates, compared with seven in each cell of the former type.

"The new generator itself requires less driving power than the single unit it replaces and a further saving in power results from elimination of the starting chain.

"The new starting motor affords greater cranking ability under severe conditions than did the old single unit which earned so enviable a reputation for prompt starting even in the coldest weather.

"The redesigned steering gear provides greater conveniences, increased steering ease and improved appearance. Worm and sector have replaced the former worm and wheel and in the new construction the ratio has been increased from 8.1 to 10.1. A steel tube of larger diameter replaces the former solid steering shaft, affording greater strength and greater stiffness to resist the turning effort applied by the wheel.

"The change to tubular steering shaft permits removal of the spark and throttle control rods from their former location to within the column and the placing of the spark and throttle levers above the wheel. The new levers are of the short conventional type. The appearance of the horn button has also been improved and the construction simplified.

"The importance of protecting the pistons, rings, bearings and other moving parts within the engine from dust and grit is more apparent when it is known that the engine breathes from 50 to 100 times as much air as the driver or passenger. It is evident that removal of dust and grit from the air before it enters the engine will greatly prolong the life of the moving parts.

"The adoption of the improved air cleaner necessitated design of a new manifold. The new manifold and cleaner can, however, be installed easily on any previous Dodge Bros. power plant.

"Although I have watched a constant succession of improvements and refinements in Dodge Bros. product for the last twelve years," Mr. Semmes continued, "I confess that I had no conception of the surprising change that these major advances could make in the operation of the car."

Mother of 16 Wins French Legion Cross

Paris, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Mme. Catherine Pierron of Vieu, in the famous chicken region, mother of sixteen robust children, has been awarded the cross of the Legion of Honor. She received the coveted red ribbon, not merely because she has had sixteen children, but rather that she has reared them correctly and at the same time run a large farm.

And there are others, for the tradition of large families has not altogether died out in the French country districts. There is Mme. Jeanne Poitrimoilt, of Tillay-le-Peneux in Normandy. She, too, has raised sixteen children and led a comfortable existence in doing it. She has just bought a bicycle, so as to keep in touch with those of her children who have married and live away from the village.

Men Desert Football To Try for Choir

Northfield, Minn., Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Ability to "make" the famous St. Olaf college choir ranks prowess at football or baseball and many promising gridiron stars have been lost through the choir's appeal.

The St. Olaf choir, under direction of Dr. F. Melius Christianson, is the college's outstanding institution. From the student body 60 voices are chosen, while constantly there is in training a second choir as a "feeder" for the first.

Five or six times a week the choir drills, primarily in preparation for the annual spring tour, which this year will take the group to Eastern cities. Last year they visited the Pacific coast.

46 Miles an Hour Is Fast Speed for Bird

Berlin, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Scientific measurements of the speed of a bird's flight show some of the feathered fliers capable of approaching a mile a minute.

Prof. August Thienemann, at his bird observatory at Rossitten, East Prussia, has added considerably to the knowledge of bird speed. Tests showed the carrier's speed, to be nearly equaled by that of the starling, which he measured as 46.05 miles per hour. Other speeds were: The jackdaw, 38.22 miles; the parrot finch, 37 miles; the finch and the rook, 32.58 miles, and hooded crows and gray gulls, 31.05 miles per hour.

The slowest of the birds under observation was the sparrow hawk, which made only 25.70 miles per hour. The tests were made in calm airs.

Women Tire Less In Talking, Is View

Brussels, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Talking fatigues women less than it does men, a Flemish scientist says in a dry objective way, without entering into the controversy as to whether the female is more talkative than the male.

The scientist explains his statement by two facts: first, that the greater the length of the vocal cords the more energy is required to produce a sound; second, that the vocal cords of women are shorter than those of men.

Moleskin "Pull-On" Hats for Mayfair

(By the Associated Press.)

Moleskin hats are the big autumn mode in Mayfair. Almost every other woman is seen wearing what is casually referred to as a "pull-on" hat, with a tiny brim and full tammy crown, all made from the finest fur. Many of them wear moleskin coats to match the hats.

NOISE ELIMINATION SOUGHT IN APPEAL SENT OUT BY A.A.A.

Adjustment Is Asked on Poorly Arranged Muffler and Exhaust Equipment.

EXCESSIVE USE OF HORN BLAMED IN STATEMENT

Responsible for Hundreds of Races Along Highways With Fatal Results.

Elimination of needless noises is sought in an appeal to motorists issued today by the American Automobile association, which points out that the motor car has brought "an approximation of bedlam" in hundreds of communities throughout the country.

"It is inevitable that the use of signal devices on automobiles will produce some noise," says the statement of the A. A. A., "but there is much that is raucous in motordom that can be eliminated to the advantage of everyone. Signals must be given on the streets and highways, but there is an intelligent standard in signaling that every motorist should try to attain."

While the giving of signals produces the greatest volume and variety of sound from America's 20,000,000 automobiles, officials of the A. A. A. point out that other noises are issuing from cars that well might be eliminated. Among these are listed those produced by defective and poorly adjusted muffler and exhaust equipment and the dozens of rattles and jangling sounds issuing from parts of the machine that could be eliminated by the mere tightening of a few screws and bolts.

Horn Is Required.

"Some cities," the statement says, "require the use of the horn at every street intersection. In these places bedlam is the result during rush hours."

Excessive use of the horn is the reason for many traffic accidents, A. A. A. officials believe. Citing the case of the driver who uses his horn too much when attempting to pass another vehicle, the statement declares:

"Many drivers are not content with a warning blast or two when they want to pass another car. They blow the horn so excessively that, too often, the man in the car ahead regards it as a challenge and refuses to grant a fair share of the road. Hundreds of races on the highway that have been attended by fatal or near-fatal results have been started this way.

"Probably the form of horn misuse that has given motorists more of a bad name than any other is at crosswalks.

"Although the pedestrian has the right of way at the intersection, thousands of motorists will dash up to the corner and count on a horn signal frightening the pedestrian out of his legal rights."

Legislation May Come.

The motorist must start solving this problem for himself or it will be undertaken by legislative agencies, municipal or otherwise, the A. A. A. declares. It suggests as a first step that each car owner determine for himself whether his signal device has a quality of mellowness that makes it pleasant rather than an annoyance to all who hear it.

"Intelligent use of the horn is imperative. Thoughtless use of it may be dealt with by other agencies unless the motorist himself tackles the problem," the statement concludes.

NO CAR RUNS LONG WITHOUT SERVICE, EXPERT DECLARES

Performance Depends on Care That Auto Receives, Says Nicholas Dreystadt.

BUYING MOTOR IS LIKE REGISTERING AT HOTEL

Driver Selects Automobile as Traveler Picks Hostelry, He Asserts.

That motor cars of all classes must be kept on the road, furnishing dependable transportation, and that quality cars must furnish their owners both with dependable and luxurious transportation are today the challenges of car owners to manufacturer and distributor alike, in the opinion of Nicholas Dreystadt, general service manager of the Cadillac Motor Car Co.

Dreystadt, recently appointed to his present post, was for 10 years with the Chicago branch of the Cadillac Co., the last four of which he was service manager there. For seven months prior to taking his present position, he had been with the factory organization as special representative of H. M. Stephens, Cadillac general sales manager, studying service methods among Cadillac distributors and dealers throughout the United States.

In Dreystadt's opinion, a motor-wise public is selecting its car much as the experienced traveler selects his hotel—because of the service and the associations it represents. When the owner buys his car, he expects it to be as fine as engineering skill and manufacturing ability can make it. But he expects also that his car shall be kept rolling and delivering transportation in keeping with its reputation.

Car Needs Service.

This is the unwritten part of the sales contract, and to the owner is the most important. The thoroughness with which it is carried out depends upon the character of the service organization.

"No car," Dreystadt states, "can run long without service. Satisfactory performance, provided the mechanism is right at the beginning, depends entirely upon the regularity and intelligence of the service which the car receives. An owner buys a new car occasionally. His contacts with the organization through service are constant. It is like the registration of a guest at a hotel. It is not the personality of the clerk, but the service which he gets afterward which determines whether or not he will register there again.

"In the Cadillac organization the large majority of new cars are sold to former Cadillac owners. In recognition of the constant contacts which are made with them through service our service always has been an integral part of our sales division, and on account of the high type of motorcar users represented by Cadillac owners, our service demands the highest type of executives for these continuous contacts with the Cadillac clientele."

News Heads Rhyme In a Dakota Paper

Webster, S. D., Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—There is an editor in Webster who has connived with the muses. Will A. Wells, of the Journal, writes his heads in rhyme.

When the owner of an illicitly operated still was arrested, the Journal said: "A great big still and a hot gin mill were found the other day—Sam and Sol made quite a haul, and put the man away." At the beginning of school: "The class of 1939, a bonny bunch of kiddies fine—They start to school, which is the rule; you ought to see their faces shine!"

HUMAN FRAILTIES THE LARGEST CAUSE OF AUTO ACCIDENTS

Unrecognized Defect of the Nerves or Vision Play Part in Crashes.

MODERN CARS ARE MADE TO MEET EMERGENCIES

Drivers Must Be Brought Up to Same Standard, Eyesight Specialist Says.

By DR. EDWIN H. SILVER.
Chairman Motor Vision Commission, American Optometric Association, and President Columbia Optical Co.

Frailties of the human organization constitute the largest single factor in causing motor vehicle accidents today.

The automobile manufacturer has done his part. The modern car is as nearly "fool proof" as it is possible to make it. Handled properly, it offers no menace to driver or passenger because the weaknesses that caused accidents and trouble in the old days have all been eliminated by scientific engineering.

But the human element remains. True, the increasing strictness of examinations by traffic officials in all parts of the country are making it harder and harder for the incompetent to get driving permits. Many of the unfit are being kept away from behind the wheels of cars in every city in the United States.

The big trouble is that many who appear otherwise capable are liable to have defects which unfit them for driving and of which they are entirely unaware.

Eyesight Important.

Eyesight plays an important part in driving a car.

Thousands of dollars are spent to induce the public to use the proper kind of glass in windshield or closed body because of the danger from distortion of an object by an inferior quality.

Thousands of people who pay an increased price for such glass do not realize that their own eyes are out of focus sufficiently to cause an object to be distorted just the same as would a defective glass, and they drive on, taking a chance every time they pass another car, for the present speed rates do not give much time for change of direction between approaching cars.

There are people whose nervous systems unfit them for driving.

I do not mean by this that all nervous people are unfitted, for a nervous temperament often reacts to danger in a manner that makes that person more safe as a driver than one of a phlegmatic disposition.

Who Should Drive.

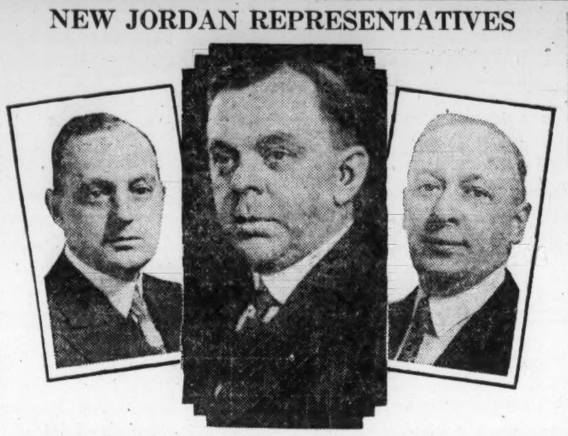
However, there are those who should not drive, and in most cases their defects should be apparent to the traffic officer who instructs them.

Traffic instructors, as a rule, are selected, intelligent men, and while laymen, in the strict sense of the word, they are able to detect defects in eyesight or nervous temperament that unfit the subject for driving. This they accomplish by constant association with all sorts of people in the course of a day and by failure of the driver to register up to certain standards.

Eyesight troubles are easily remedied. The American Optometric association, including its Washington branch, is cooperating with traffic authorities by making examinations of any case in which the eyesight is in doubt. Other disorders, of course, call for the care of an expert in those lines.

These are the things that must be eliminated in order to decrease the number of accidents in traffic. The authorities can take care of the reckless or drunken driver, but the man who is in the least physically defective must take care of himself.

NEW JORDAN REPRESENTATIVES



Neumeyer Motor Co., who will in the future represent the Jordan line eight in this territory in addition to continuing their representation of Hudson and Essex as a metropolitan dealer. This firm is one of the pioneer motorcar dealers of the city, dating their representation in the field back to the days when the four-cylinder automobile was just beginning to displace the two-cylinder type of machine.

E. H. Neumeyer, center, president of the firm, dates his transportation experience back to the days of the horse and wagon, for long before the automobile was even thought of as something other than a plaything he was in the farm and implement business and one of the lines he handled was buggies and farm wagons. His brother, William, left, vice president, has been connected with the firm since its inception, and Frank Baum, right, secretary and treasurer, started in as a boy in the implement store and has worked his way up to a membership in the firm.

Speaking of the new connection Mr. Edwin Neumeyer, head of the company, said: "For some little time we have felt that we would like to place ourselves in the position of being able to extend our sales possibilities. We considered several lines of cars that might have been available, but decided upon the Jordan for one reason very largely, namely, the satisfaction that present owners of the car in Washington were obtaining from their automobile. Directly and indirectly we obtained expressions of opinion from users of both late and early models of the car and found with one accord that owner satisfaction was well nigh universal. Our experience has shown us that owner satisfaction is the greatest sales asset possible and it is our aim not only to preserve this feeling of loyalty toward the product, but to increase it, if possible. It is not our intention to give up the Hudson and Essex lines because we feel that there is no conflict of merchandise."

NEW JEWETT MADE WITH ADJUSTMENTS FOR AID TO DRIVERS

Motorists May Change Clutch, Brake Pedal and Seat for Comfort.

CAN NOT CONTROL CAR IN CRAMPED POSITION

Brougham Offers Example of Progress Made in Lower-Priced Automobiles.

Making automobiles that are adjustable to the individual driver, instead of compelling the driver to adjust himself to an uncomfortable position in the car, is one of the newer trends in motor car construction, both in America and Europe.

More than comfort is involved in a correct position. Sitting in proper relation to steering wheel, clutch pedal, brake pedal and controls, means freedom from fatigue and, even more important, safety in driving—for only when the driver is in proper position can he operate the controls quickly and efficiently.

Means of effecting a comfortable driving position formerly was available only in the costlier cars. Now the new Jewett brougham offers an example of what has been done in the lower price class.

A total variation of 5 inches in the position of the driver is provided by adjustments in the clutch and brake pedal and also in the front seats. The rubber pedal pads are mounted on substantial bars that are clamped into the clutch and brake levers proper, and these clamps permit a variation of the pedal position totaling 2 inches.

3-Inch Adjustment.

The adjustability of the front seat, in a fore and aft direction, totals 3 inches. The two adjustments, in combination, thus permit a total change amounting to 5 inches. The driver having unusually long legs can drop the pedals 2 inches and move the seat all the way back, and have 5 inches more room than a man of opposite build, who will raise the pedals all the way and adjust the seat in its extreme forward position.

A combination of adjustments can be made to suit the stout driver. He can move the seat back to give him ample space between steering wheel and cushion, and raise the pedals to keep them in easy reach.

When the brake pedal is depressed, the driver's leg should not be extended to the utmost—there should be additional thrusting power in reserve, to exert greater pedal pressure if required.

"Up From Slavery" Printed in Turkish

Tuskegee Institute, Ala., Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Translation into Turkish of "Up From Slavery," the autobiography of the late Booker T. Washington, founder of Tuskegee, has been made by Lee Vrooman, of the International college at Smyrna.

The book, which tells the story of the emancipation of the negro race, already has been translated into the major European languages, the Braille system for the blind, Arabian and three East Indian tongues.

UNIVERSAL JOINT HELD DEVICE OF 13TH CENTURY

Writer Says It Was Used to Transmit Power Around an Angle.

DRY MECHANISM SOUGHT

The universal joint is a peculiar mechanism essential to the motor car, but whose use for transmitting power mechanically around an angle has been traced back to a thirteenth century architect, writes C. W. Spicer, of Philadelphia, in the November issue of the Journal of the Society of Automotive Engineers.

Its peculiarity lies in the fact that as the angle between the two shafts that it unites increases beyond a few degrees the joint imparts to the driven shaft a nonuniform rotating speed, and this becomes very erratic as the angle approaches 90 degrees or a right angle. The driven shaft then suddenly jumps ahead of the driving shaft for about half a revolution and then stands almost still waiting for the driving shaft to catch up, after which it makes another jump.

In motor cars it is seldom necessary to use universal joints at great angles, and by using a pair of joints and an intermediate shaft the erratic action of one joint is made to compensate that of the other, so that the shafts rotate at nearly uniform speed.

Much inventive effort has been expended upon the designing of satisfactory universal joints for automobiles, and the ideal sought by engineers, says Spicer, is a joint that will work satisfactorily with no lubrication or other attention and last as long as the vehicle in which it is installed.

The essential working elements of the usual joint are two yokes disposed at right angles to each other and united by a four-arm cross. There are many modifications of this arrangement. Rolling steel balls held between the faces of the yoke ends or arms and the faces of the cross arms add a supplemental principle, while live rubber balls instead of steel balls give a cushion effect that is highly desirable in some applications, such as in gasoline-electric drive. Flexible disc joints are in a class by themselves and have been greatly improved by special construction of the fabric and rubber discs and the method of holding them to the spiders on the shaft ends.

DELIVERIES BY BUICK EXCEED ALL OF 1925

Although retail deliveries for the last three months of 1926 are yet to be compiled, the Buick Motor Co. already has sold more cars this year than were delivered to owners during 1925. This record for any calendar year was made known through an announcement by E. T. Strong, Buick general sales manager. Mr. Strong stated that the total retail deliveries from January to September, inclusive, amounted to 202,368 cars. The record for the entire year 1925 was 200,041 cars.

Still more remarkable, however, is Mr. Strong's announcement that this nine months' record exceeds by 57,416 cars the record of January 1 to September 30, 1925. It shows a gain for 1926 far in excess of the gain registered by the industry as a whole. Buick has beaten its sales record for the corresponding month of the previous year for the last 14 months in succession. The company has averaged 22,485 retail deliveries each month for the last 9 months.

Mr. Strong predicts a new all-time 12-month record by the end of December as a result of the heavy demand for the present model. The best previous 12 months was the period ended July 31, 1926, on which date the 1927 Buick was introduced. In this time over 240,000 cars were delivered to owners.

Way Auto Is Stopped Is Tire Wear Factor

The manner in which drivers stop their cars is a factor in tire wear that experts regard as probably greater than any other. The driver who starts to slow quite a distance from the obstruction will be buying tires much less frequently than the man who clamps on the brakes at the last moment.

Tire tread is ground off when the tire is slid. It is easy to see what constant repetition of this practice will bring.

Wash Engine, Is Advice.

Wash or spray the grease and oil from the engine and transmission occasionally. It will prevent fire in cases where the engine backfires through the carburetor, and when cleaning the parts a loose connection or bolt will be noticed, thus saving a repair bill and loss of time later.

COMMUNITY CENTERS

Special attention is being called by Miss Sibyl Baker, director of the community center department, to the opportunity offered in various centers for instruction in basketry. There is no fee charged for the weekly class instruction, pupils paying only for material. Classes now at work are making gifts for Christmas, and additional classes will be formed in centers where there is demand.

Columbia Heights center also offers classes in paper flowermaking, lamp shades and all handicraft work, with an afternoon class in basketry in process of organization. The basketry class meets every Friday from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m.

Southeast center has a basketry club meeting every Wednesday from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m., which offers a chance to members to make Christmas gifts at low cost, and also offers everything in reed work. Classes are being organized for Thursday from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m., at East Washington center.

Traces of Lost Race Found in Wyoming

Manville, Wyo., Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—An ancient civilization, which antedated and was further advanced than that of the American Indian, is claiming the scrutiny of archeologists in the "Spanish Diggings," 8 miles south of here. Excavations have revealed traces of inhabitants, who, scientists believe, were blotted out of existence by some cataclysm of nature.

Specimens of weapons and tools, made of jasper and agate, have been discovered, strewn in profusion about tepee circles, in which the "lost race" housed itself. Unlike the usual Indian relics finds, the agricultural tool and cooking utensil predominate over the weapons of battle and chase.

ILLITERATE SPANIARDS GET NEWS IN PICTURES

Illustrations Vital to Papers in Many Districts of the Iberian Kingdom.

MANY DAILIES IN MADRID

Most of the newspapers in this country carry illustrations, as they have discovered it is the only way to reach a people in many districts overwhelmingly illiterate, as for instance in Murcia, where 75 per cent can not read or write.

Madrid, like certain other foreign capitals, is well supplied with newspapers. With a population approximating 800,000, it once had 45 daily newspapers, 20 morning and 25 evening. Under the military directorate about half a dozen died. Barcelona, with a similar population has 23 dailies. A few of these newspapers are purely official reports.

Many of the newspapers were founded by political party groups. Some are now moribund, having fallen on lean times, owing to the cessation of subsidies.

In normal times the contents are mostly politics, local and national. But important sections are devoted to bullfighting and football. Crime figures prominently, columns being dedicated to gruesome details of murders.

The press generally is unable, owing to its financial straits, to keep the public informed of outside events, because of the burden of cable tolls. If the readers take any interest in non-Spanish affairs, they generally are obliged to content themselves with tardy translations from newspapers arriving in two or three days from Paris and London.

Ther eare some financially independent newspapers which appeal to the public, not only by the interesting nature of their articles from special correspondents abroad, but also by the excellence of their printing.

Advertising has not developed in Spain as in other countries. Therefore the papers find it necessary to rely on regular subscribers and whatever subsidies or support they are able to gather.

American Watches Run Slow in Britain

London, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—American visitors to England must set their watches ahead at least three minutes as soon as they land because of the effect of the enervating climate on the works. Many visitors find it necessary to adjust their watches at least twice a week.

Inquiry among watch makers disclosed that change of altitude was more likely to affect watches than change of temperature. "It is likely, however, that the watches of American visitors, used to a dry, crisp climate, find London a trifle enervating and react accordingly," one manufacturer said.

NASH

Leads the World in Motor Car Value

The illustration at the right shows how Nash encloses the entire front wheel brake mechanism thus excluding all water, ice, and dirt. Nash disc wheels are engineered with a concave inner side which makes it possible to set the front wheel brake mechanism into the wheel for further protection.

No Extra Cost Standard Equipment

New NASH Features

7-Bearing Crankshaft Motor.

Rubber Insulated Motor Supports—(standard Nash practice for some time).

New-type Crankcase "Breather" Preventing Crankcase Dilution.

Motor Heat Control by Thermostatic Water Regulator.

Double Beam Headlights with Control at Steering Wheel.

Oil Screen "Agitator" Preventing Oil Coagulation in Coldest Weather.

4 Wheel Brakes

This brake system is exclusive to Nash and was engineered to embody the finest features developed by foreign and American 4-wheel brake authorities as well as the superiorities worked out by Nash over an extended period of 4-wheel brake experience.

Among its chief advantages is its simplicity. Of all mechanical 4-wheel brake types the Nash has fewest parts and least points requiring lubrication.

Another advantage is the fact that the smoothly powerful performance of these brakes is never impaired by climatic changes. And being of the mechanical type they operate with invariable regularity at all temperatures.

A third superiority is the great size of the braking surfaces which enables the brakes to maintain continuous operative efficiency and gives them permanency of adjustment.

Thus Nash eliminates the possibility of the side-sway or skidding on wet or icy roads under rapid brake application which occurs with rear wheel brakes or partially-equalized 4-wheel brakes.

Come see the new Nash models—all powered with 7-bearing crankshaft motors—and examine, in particular, this Nash 4-wheel brake system.

The New TURNING POINT
IN MOTOR CAR DESIGN

The new, finer Chrysler "70" is a turning point in motor car body design—forecasting the new vogue in motoring for years to come.

Newer, more exquisitely graceful bodies of exclusive Chrysler design—newer, more distinctive silhouette with military front and cadet visor—newer luxury of comfort—newer, greater riding ease—newer richness of upholstery—newer, finer hardware and fittings—newer refinements in controls and lighting—newer, more attractive color blendings far in advance of current harmonies.

And with this newer appearance the new, finer Chrysler "70" offers the proved superiority of performance, dependability, economy, and long life which are Chrysler.

For it is basically the same famous Chrysler "70" chassis, save for valuable refinements, which we are eager to convince you by demonstration, is more emphatically than ever years ahead of contemporary achievement.

Prices of the New "70" Are Radically Lower

Notwithstanding the greater beauty and comfort of the new, finer Chrysler "70", and the advancements and refinements—resulting from Chrysler's unique plan of Quality Standardization—which greatly enhance the "70's" quality and value, prices have been radically lowered as follows:—

	New Prices	Old Prices	Savings
Roadster	$1495	$1525	$ 30
Brougham	1525	1745	220
Coupe	1545	1695	150
Royal Sedan	1595	1795	200
Crown Sedan	1795	1895	100
Phaeton, $1395	Sport Phaeton,		$1495

All prices f. o. b. Detroit, subject to current Federal excise tax.

MASONIC NOTES.

Benjamin B. French lodge, No. 15, has designated its communication tomorrow evening as home talent night, and the feature of the occasion will be a varied program of numbers by members of the lodge. Refreshments will be served and an enjoyable evening is promised. Visitors are always welcome, the master announces.

Albert Pike lodge, No. 36, will observe home coming and past masters' night tomorrow evening when Past Masters Engel, David, Morey, Weill, Koch, Boyden and Jones will put on the M. M. degree. Master Melvin A. Wertz's circular announces that there will be "eats and everything."

National lodge, No. 12, in addition to its grand visitation Tuesday evening, will have the F. C. degree.

La Fayette lodge, No. 19, has accepted an invitation to visit Corinthian lodge, No. 368, of Philadelphia, Tuesday evening. The invitation was extended through Corinthian lodge's official representative, Senior Warden William H. Sherwood. Members of La Fayette lodge intending to make the trip are requested to communicate with Junior Deacon Harry B. Pitts.

Dr. Stuart M. Angelo, master of St. John's lodge, No. 11, who has recently recovered from a long illness, presided at the communication of the lodge Friday evening. The business meeting of the lodge was followed by a program presented by the "Hill Billies" of the Blue Ridge mountains. Master Angelo announced that the grand visitation of the lodge would occur on November 26 and that he had made arrangements for a pleasing entertainment for that occasion. One of the speakers of the evening will be Past District Grand Master Harry K. Green, of Virginia.

Hope lodge, No. 20, will conduct the Thanksgiving service at the Masonic and Eastern Star home next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The Rev. Calvert E. Buck, rector of Christ Episcopal church, will preach.

ROYAL ARCH.

Petworth chapter, No. 16, will be host to the Masons of Petworth and their families tomorrow evening on the occasion of the third ladies night party and dance of the present capitular year. High Priest Charles L. Gable and the council promise a good time. A number of entertainment features will be presented and there will be music by the nomads.

Tuesday evening was past high priests night at Mount Horeb chapter when there were present Past High Priests John A. Tauberschmidt, F. F. Kimmel, E. W. Libbey, Richard M. Towson, James S. Briggs and Albert C. Shafer. The chapter was also honored by the presence of the grand high priest of the District of Columbia, Daniel G. Davis, who made an interesting address. The work of the evening consisted of the conferring of the degree of mark master by Paul R. Boesch, the chapter scribe. The ritualistic work was of an excellent character and at its conclusion many commendatory remarks were made. At the next convocation the royal arch degree will be conferred. The annual visitation by the grand officers will be held jointly with Washington chapter on January 25.

THE SHRINE

Sousa's band, under the direction of John Philip Sousa, will appear at the Washington auditorium Friday evening. Since Mr. Sousa is a member of Almas temple, Illustrious Potentate Charles D. Shackelford has arranged for a large delegation of Shriners to be present as a welcome from the local temple.

Almas temple will be entertained at a ceremonial on Monday, November 22, in the Washington auditorium. Illustrious Potentate Charles D. Shackelford says that the ritualistic section of the degree will be unique in that most of the members of the cast, which is composed of past potentates of Almas temple, have served with distinction in the Masonic bodies prerequisite to the Shrine. James C. Hoyle, chairman of the entertainment committee, will arrange for the details of entertainment apart from the initiation ceremony. The following are the assignments for the ritualistic section: Illustrious potentate, Past Potentate Harry Standiford; illustrious chief rabban, Past Potentate Fred G. Alexander; illustrious assistant rabban, Past Potentate James T. Gibbs; illustrious high priest and prophet, Past Potentate Francis A. Sebring; illustrious oriental guide, Past Potentate Roe Fulkerson; illustrious first ceremonial master, Past Potentate William S. The Best Costs Less

This old truth applies to the service and repair of your automobile as it does to everything else.

The service you get in the Washington-Cadillac's great, modern maintenance and repair establishment is the best you can buy, and it costs no more than haphazard or careless workmanship.

We service any make of car and can supply anything any car needs.

The first cost is the lowest possible—there is no second cost.

Cuts Gas Bills in Half

Low first cost is only part of your saving on an Overland Whippet.

Its outstanding economy of 30 miles on a gallon of gasoline—well over 1,000 miles on a gallon of oil . . . with the smallest tax rating of any car in America today, cuts present operating costs just about in half. And doubles the value of every dollar you now spend for upkeep.

In a recent economy driving test in Chicago 1308 contestants averaged 31.8 miles per gallon . . . the winner averaged 47.2 miles per gallon. And scores of Whippets were sold as the result of this demonstration.

In fairness to yourself, think of economy before buying any light car today.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS

Capital lodge, No. 24, conferred the esquire rank, Tuesday evening, on a large class of candidates, and will confer the knight rank Tuesday evening. The lodge was visited by a large delegation from Webster lodge at its last convention.

Cleveland Kennicutt, who has been charged with the responsibility of instituting the temple of the Princesses of Syracuse, expects to have the institution between Christmas and New Year's. This is an organization for boys ranging in age from 14 to 21 years. While it is under the guidance of the Knights of Pythias it is not confined exclusively to scions of that order, but is open to all boys of good moral character if recommended by a Pythian.

The visitation of the grand chancellor and his associate officers to Columbia lodge Wednesday evening was a notable occasion. The officers of the lodge were commended by the grand lodge officers for the showing they have made during the year and for their zeal and fidelity to the order.

Calanthe lodge, No. 11, will have work at its next convention. This is the home lodge of Grand Chancellor Lee B. Emory, and of Grand Prelate Israel Sommers, and of Grand Keeper of Records and Seal W. A. Kimmel. It is said to be in a flourishing condition and has a large number of candidates already elected to receive the ranks.

Washington company, No. 1, uniform rank, has increased its membership so rapidly during the past summer that arrangements are being made to hold the meetings Wednesday evening in the armory of the temple. Accessions are being received to the ranks every meeting and new uniforms have just been received.

The box party given by Friendship temple, No. 9, Pythian Sisters, Wednesday evening was an enjoyable affair.

Rathbone temple, No. 8, Pythian Sisters, gave a roast beef dinner at the temple Friday evening. This temple is scheduled to give a playlet at the temple on Monday evening, November 29, entitled "School Days." The sextet, composed of Ruth Malmquist, Freda Marks, Augusta Runge, Mary E. Hooper, Lillie Herfurth and Minnie Cherry, with Roberta Prescott, director, will assist.

The Past Chiefs association will be entertained Tuesday evening by Supreme Representative Mary E. Mitchell at her residence, 3310 Twenty-second street northeast.

Political Power vs. Constitution

Question as to Authority of U. S. Senate Over the Action of a Sovereign State to Be Definitely Brought to a Climax if the Senate, as Now Promised, Attempts to Prevent the Seating of Vare and Smith—Both Sides Girding for the Battle That Is Sure to Ensue.

By ALBERT W. FOX.

POLITICAL power vs. constitutional government! This appears to be an apt title for the spectacular and determined battle scheduled to begin shortly after the United States Senate convenes in December.

The first sparks will fly when the Senate takes steps to free itself from the restraints which the Supreme Court of the United States has begun to impose on the postwar senatorial quest for increased power. But the climax will come when the Senate solemnly undertakes, by one means or another, to nullify the action of the sovereign States of Pennsylvania and Illinois and unseat Senators-elect William S. Vare and Frank L. Smith.

All that the Senate has so far done toward usurpation of executive or judicial functions will fade into comparative insignificance, it is predicted, when contrasted with the step which senators declare they will take in the Vare and Smith cases.

Furthermore, it is hinted that the Senate will not even wait until Vare presents his credentials next year, but may take some action at the coming session to declare his seat vacant in advance. Or, some resolution will be adopted when Vare comes forward to take his oath, it is said. Senator Ashurst is credited with having such a resolution in readiness, in line with the popular belief that each house of Congress can determine its own rules of proceedings and that a rule can therefore be adopted which will make it impossible for Vare or Smith to take their seats when the time comes.

The Supreme Court has already decided that any such proceeding is violative of the Constitution, but this will probably not check the attempt to press the resolution to passage. The ruling of the highest tribunal reads:

"The Constitution empowers each house to determine times and rules of proceedings. It may not by its rules ignore constitutional restraints or violate fundamental rights, and there should be a reasonable relation between the mode and method of proceeding established by the rule and the result which is sought to be attained. (U. S. vs. Balin, 144 U. S. i)."

Admittedly it would be a Senate rule vs. the sovereign right of the State of Pennsylvania to elect a United States senator, which latter right is specifically provided for and guaranteed by the Constitution.

* * * *

BUT if the action of the State of Pennsylvania can not be nullified by direct attack it is to be subjected to indirect fire. In other words, the prediction that the Constitution of the United States could not last over 150 years may be fulfilled, it is stated, at least with respect to the rights of sovereign States, and the following fateful words of Washington's Farewell Address may turn out to be a prophecy instead of a warning:

"One method of assault may be to effect, in the forms of the Constitution, alterations which will impair the energy of the system, and thus to undermine what can not be directly overthrown."

But the assault, which legal authorities foresee in the offing, is not going to find the Constitution without defenders, outside as well as inside the Senate. First of these defenders is James M. Beck, recognized authority on constitutional law, formerly Assistant Attorney General of the United States, solicitor general of the United States from 1921 to 1925, and the lawyer who successfully argued before the Supreme Court the historic case which the highest tribunal decided last month when it denied to Congress the right to curb the President's power of removing Federal officers appointed by him by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

Disregarding whatever popular or political clamor may result from his action, Mr. Beck has come forward as a volunteer and is preparing for publication a book entitled "The Vanishing Rights of the States," in which he makes a feature of the Vare and Smith cases and in which he asserts:

"To nullify the action of these sovereign States, by reasons of the actions of irresponsible individuals over which the Federal government has no supervisory power, would, in effect, be a coup d'etat which would radically change our form of government and lead to deplorable and incalculable consequences."

Admittedly, Mr. Beck's defense of the Constitution will be challenged on the ground that his action may be inspired by the fact that he was born in Pennsylvania or that he has some prejudice or undefined reason to challenge the Senate's proposed action.

Yet the role which prejudice has played in the Senate and out of the Senate is admittedly striking by contrast. In the momentous Supreme Court decision on the President's power of removal, for example, the man who forced the question to an issue was Woodrow Wilson. He could have named a successor to Postmaster Myers, had the successor confirmed and thereby eliminated Myers without raising the question. But, for some reason, Woodrow Wilson desired to put the constitutional question to the test.

* * * *

CHIEF JUSTICE TAFT, who decided for Woodrow Wilson's contention, was the Republican candidate for President in 1912, the year that brought Woodrow Wilson's election.

Associate Justice McReynolds, who delivered the scathing minority opinion against Wilson's contention, served as Attorney General in Woodrow Wilson's cabinet. Associate Justice Brandeis, who also delivered a minority former solicitor general, who will conduct the battle for constitutional government in the Smith-Vare case.

JAMES M. BECK,

opinion against Wilson's contention, was appointed to the Supreme Court by Woodrow Wilson. Mr. Beck, who argued for the stand taken by Woodrow Wilson, was one of the outstanding anti-Wilson men throughout the League of Nations fight and is a Republican.

Thus, in Supreme Court circles, prejudices and friendships as well as popular and political clamor apparently all go by the boards.

But the question is asked "Can any one say as much for the Senate?"

Senators have prejudged the Vare case and announced their conclusions, and during the campaign, just closed, candidates were asked to say in advance whether they would pledge themselves to oust Vare and Smith. No senator, thus passing final judgment on the cases, could have the evidence, as the Reed committee has not even completed its probe and submitted a report. So that when the Senate, sitting in the role of jury, passes on the Reed committee report, there will be a great number of senators solemnly pledged to construe the evidence in conformity with preconceived prejudices, irrespective of what that evidence may be.

But Mr. Beck is not considering the question from the standpoint of expediency. He has interested himself in the broad-gauge constitutional question involved. It is not a question of whether a majority of the senators, representing other States of the Union, want Mr. Vare to be Pennsylvania's senator, he contends. It is a question of what the sovereign State of Pennsylvania wants.

"The sole question, therefore, is whether the State of Pennsylvania had the right to make this selection," Mr. Beck states, "or whether, having thus selected Mr. Vare, the Senate of the United States has the right to nullify the will of the people of Pennsylvania.

"When the Seventieth Congress convenes and proceeds to organize, it will thus be confronted with a problem of vital importance to our constitutional form of government. Few constitutional questions could be more far-reaching.

"It is reasonably certain that when the Senate proceeds to organize the senior senator from Pennsylvania will present the credentials of the Hon. William S. Vare as senator-elect from Pennsylvania. The credentials will be in due form and will certify by the signature of the governor of Pennsylvania, attested by the great seal of the State, that at a general election, held on November 2, 1926, the people of Pennsylvania, by a largely preponderating majority, elected Mr. Vare to the Senate of the United States.

"IT is not probable that any serious question will be raised as to the regularity of the election, and it will not be doubted that the people of Pennsylvania did select Mr. Vare as one of its two representatives in the Senate of the United States by a majority of over 180,000 votes. It will not be questioned that Mr. Vare possesses all the qualifications for a senator prescribed in the Constitution. It will be conceded that he has the requisite age, has been a citizen of the United States for the required period and that he is an inhabitant of the State of Pennsylvania, as prescribed in the Constitution.

"Notwithstanding these unquestioned facts, it is intimated by well-informed men, and even announced by some members of the Senate, who have not even examined the evidence collected by the Reed committee, who hereafter may be called upon to act judicially in the matter, that Mr. Vare's credentials will be rejected and that he will be denied his seat in the Senate.

"Others high in authority, including also some members of the Senate, have announced that while his credentials will be accepted, in accordance with the unbroken precedents of the Senate, he will be expelled after he has been seated. Should it come to pass that Mr. Vare is either denied his seat or seated and expelled, the deliberate action of the State of Pennsylvania will be unquestionably nullified."

After pointing out that the Senate was primarily created to preserve the rights and prestige of the States and serve as the last rampart of the powers of the States, Mr. Beck raises the question of how the powers of the States can be preserved if the final choice of senators is to be denied to the States.

"Should this principle become a part of our constitutional form of government," Mr. Beck adds, "then the membership of the Senate will be whatever a majority of the Senate desires it to be.

"Let no one underestimate the gravity of the issue. If, under the circumstances above assumed, either Mr. Vare or Mr. Smith shall be unseated by the Senate, not only their individual right to hold an office, to which they were clearly elected, will be denied, but a basic right of a sovereign State will be nullified. The question, therefore, rises infinitely higher than the personal political fortunes of either Mr. Vare or Mr. Smith. It is an attack upon the constituent States of the Union. It tends to destroy our dual form of government.

"If such a principle were once permanently established, the selection of senators would not be the action of the States—except primarily. The final selection would be by a majority of the Senate. If 49 senators can unseat two senators, they could unseat 47, and thus, in a grave crisis, when the waves of political passion were whipped up by party strife, it would be possible for a majority of the senators to unseat a minority, however large, or what is more probable, unseat enough to give to the majority the necessary two-thirds vote to ratify treaties."

Mr. Beck then touches on the vital importance which this fundamental question of States' rights might have to Southern senators, who are always more or less concerned about the race question. A Republican majority on the theory of Vare's opponents might at any time refuse to seat or seek to unseat Democratic senators from Southern States "on the ground that they had not been selected by a free and fair vote, either at the primaries or at the general election."

"Thoughtful men of all sections would deprecate any such recrudescence of the race question," Mr. Beck continues," for their attitude toward the question of white supremacy in the South is not unsympathetic. But such inference from a failure of a portion of the electorate to vote is no more unreasonable than the assumption that because large sums of money have been spent in a heated primary campaign in great and populous States like Pennsylvania and Illinois, that such sums were either corruptly collected or corruptly disbursed.

* * * *

"IT is not, however, important whether the inference in either case is or is not justified. The all important consideration is that under the Constitution the States reserved to themselves and the peoples thereof the right to select their own representatives in the Senate, and while the right of the Senate to determine whether an individual, who claims to be thus elected, has actually been elected at a general election, is clear, and while it also has the right to determine whether the men who have been selected as senators by the States actually possess the qualifications prescribed in the Constitution, yet the right of the Senate to sit in judgment upon the action of sovereign States goes no further."

Mr. Beck pays tribute to the Reed committee. "It is important that the people of the United States should be informed as to the manner in which primary campaigns for Federal office are conducted.

"In a country as rich as America," he adds, "it is important that the power of money shall not control the machinery of government. Whether a Federal law could or should be passed that arbitrarily fixes the amount of money to be spent in a given party campaign is another and very difficult problem. It takes no account of the difference in population in different States. It takes even less account of the fact that in some party campaigns very little money can be legitimately spent and that in other, and bitterly contested campaigns, either for nominations or elections, where great questions of public policy are involved, large sums of money can be legitimately spent to educate the voter. The apathy or ignorance of the voter is more to be feared in the successful work of our institutions than the corruption of the voter."

In denying the right of the Senate to nullify the action of the State of Pennsylvania in the Vare case, Mr. Beck stresses the two possibilities, namely, the refusal to seat Vare or the effort to expel him after he has been seated. In the latter case it would require a two-thirds vote, but even so the right of the Senate to expel a member for something which transpired before he became a member of that body is questioned by Mr. Beck.

The Constitution provides that each house shall be the judge of the elections, returns and qualifications of its own members and, in a separate paragraph, it is provided as follows:

"Each house may determine the rules of its proceedings, and punish its members for disorderly behavior, and, with the concurrence of two-thirds, expel a member."

* * * *

THE question arises as to whether the above reference to expulsion does not link itself with the preceding clause, "punish its members for disorderly behavior." It is conceded that a senator may be expelled by a two-thirds vote for some act of his after he becomes a member of the Senate. A member, for example, might refuse to abide by the rules or might make it virtually impossible for the Senate to function, or he might, for one reason or another, make it necessary for that body to rid itself of him for its own protection.

But the question of whether the Sen-

The Rajah's Treasure

□□□ □□□

By H. G. WELLS

Strange Story of How a Modern British Safe Caused a Number of Deaths in a State Ruled Over by a Petty Rajah, and the Ludicrous Awakening That Came When the Safe Was Finally Opened.

Between Johun and Bimabur, on the Himalayan slopes and between the jungles and the higher country where the pines and deodars are gathered together, ruled the petty rajah of whose wonderful treasure I am telling. Very great was the treasure, people said, for the rajah had prospered all his days. He had found Mindapore a village, and, behold! it was a city. Below his fort of unhewn stone the flat-roofed huts of mud had multiplied; and now there sprang up houses with upstairs rooms, and the place which had once boasted no more than one huniah man, engendered a bazaar in the midst of it, as a fat oyster secretes a pearl. And the holy place up the river prospered, and the road up the passes was made safe. Merchants and fakirs multiplied about the wells, men came and went, twice even white men from the plains on missions to the people over beyond the deodars, and the streets of the town were even denser with poultry and children, and little dogs dyed yellow, and with all the multitudinous rich odors of human increase. As at last, at the crown of his prosperity, this legend of his treasures began.

He was a portly, yellow-faced man, with a long black beard, now steadily growing gray, thick lips, and shifty eyes. He was pious, very pious in his daily routine, and swift and unaccountable in his actions. None dared withstand him to his face, even in little things. Golam Shah, his vizier, was but a servant, a carrier of orders; and Samud Singh, his master of horse, but a driller of soldiers. They were tools, he would tell them outright in his pride of power, staves in his hand that he could break at his will. He was childless. And his cousin, the youth Azim Khan, feared him, and only in the remotest recesses of his heart dared to wish the rajah would presently die and make a way for the cyons.

It would be hard to say when first the rumor spread that the rajah of little Mindapore was making a hoard. None knew how it began or where. Perhaps from merchants of whom he had bought. It began long before the days of the safe.

It was sajd that rubies had been bought and hidden away; and then not only rubies, but ornaments of gold, and then pearls, and diamonds from Golconda and all manner of precious stones. Even the deputy commissioner at Allapore heard of it. At last the story reentered the palace at Mindapore itself, and Azim Khan, who was the rajah's cousin and his heir, and nominally his commander-in-chief, and Golam Shah, the chief minister, talked it over one with another in a tentative way.

"He has something new," said Golam Shah, querulously: "he has something new, and he is keeping it from me."

Azim Khan watched him cunningly. "I have told you what I have heard," he said. "For my own part I know nothing."

"He goes to and fro musing and humming to himself," said Golam, meditatively, "as one who thinks of a pleasure."

"More rubies, they are saying," said Azim, dreamily, and repeated, as if for his own pleasure, "rubies." For Azim was the heir.

"Especially is it since that Englishman came," said Golam, "three months ago. A big, old man, not wrinkled as an old man should be, but red and with a tight skin and a big body sticking out before. So. An elephant of a man, a great, quivering mudbank of a man, who laughed mightily, so that the people stopped and listened in the street. He came, he laughed, and as he went away we heard them laugh together——"

"Well?"

"He was a diamond merchant, perhaps—or a dealer in rubies. Do Englishment deal in such things?"

"Would I had seen him!" said Azim.

"He took gold away," said Golam.

Both were silent for a space, and the purring noise of the wheel of the upper well, and the chatter of voices about it rising and falling, made a pleasant sound in the air. "Since the Englishman went," said Golam, "he has been different. He hides something from me—something in his robe. Rubies! What else can it be?"

"He has not buried it?" said Azim.

"He will. Then he will want to dig it up again and look at it," said Golam, for he was a man of experience. "I go softly. Sometimes almost I come upon him. Then he starts——"

"He grows old and nervous," said Azim, and there was a pause.

"Before the English came," said Golam, looking at the rings upon his fingers, as he recurred to his constant preoccupation; "there were no rajahs nervous and old."

That, I say, was even before the coming of the safe. It came in a packing case. Such a case it was as had never been seen before on all the slopes of the Himalayan mountains. It was as elephant's burden even on the plain. It was days drawing nearer and nearer. At Allapore crowds went to see it pass upon the railway. Afterwards elephants and then a great multitude of men dragging it up the hills. And this great case being opened in the hall of audience revealed within itself a monstrous iron box, like no other box that had ever come to the city. It had been made, so the story went, by necromancers in England expressly to the order of the rajah, that he might keep his treasure therein and sleep in peace. It was so hard that the hardest files powdered upon its corners and so strong that cannon fired point-blank at it would have produced no effect upon it. And it locked with a magic lock. There was a word, and none knew the word but the rajah. With that word, and a little key that hung about his neck, one could open the lock; but without it none could do so.

The rajah caused this safe to be built into the wall of his palace in a little room beyond the hall of audience. He superintended the building up of it with jealous eyes. And thereafter he would go thither day by day, once at least each day, coming back with brighter eyes. "He goes to count his treasure," said Golam Shah, standing beside the empty dais.

And in those days it was that the rajah began to change. He who had been cunning and subtle became choleric and outspoken. His judgment grew harsh, and a taint of avarice crept into his acts. Moreover, which inclined Golam Shah to hopefulness, he seemed to take a dislike to Azim Khan. Once indeed, he made a kind of speech in the hall of audience. Therein he declared many times over in a peculiarly husky voice, husky, yet full of conviction, that Azim Khan was not worth a half anna, not worth a half anna to any human soul.

In these latter days of the rajah's decline, moreover, when merchants came, he would go aside with them secretly into the little room, and speak low, so that those in the hall of audience, howsoever they strained their ears, could hear nothing of his speech. These things Golam Shah and Azim Khan and Samud Singh, who had joined their councils, treasured in their hearts.

"It is true about the treasure," said Azim, "they talked of it round the well of the travelers, even the merchants from Tibet had heard the tale, and had come this way with jewels of price, and afterward they went secretly, telling no one." And ever and again, it was said, came a negro mute from the plains, with secret parcels for the rajah. "Another stone," was the rumor that went the round of the city.

"The bee makes hoards," said Azim Khan, the rajah's heir, sitting in the upper chamber of Golam Shah. "Therefore, we will wait awhile." For Azim was more coward than traitor.

At last there were men in the Deccan even who could tell you particulars of the rubies and precious stones that the rajah had gathered together. But so circumspect was the rajah that Azim Khan and Golam Shah had never even set eyes on the glittering heaps that they knew were accumulating in the safe.

The rajah always went into the little room alone, and even then he locked the door of the little room—it had a couple of locks—before he went to the safe and used the magic word. How all the ministers and officers and guards listened and looked at one another as the door of the room behind the curtain closed!

The rajah changed indeed in these days, not only in the particulars of his rule, but in his appearance. "He is growing old. How fast he grows old! The time is almost ripe," whispered Samud Singh. The rajah's hand became tremulous, his step was now sometimes unsteady, and his memory curiously defective. He would come back out from the treasure room, and his hand would tighten fiercely on the curtain, and he would stumble on the steps of the dais. "His eyesight fails," said Golam. "See! His turban is askew. He is sleepy even in the forenoon before the heat of the day. His judgments are those of a child."

It was a painful sight to see a man so suddenly old and enfeebled still ruling men.

"He may go on yet a score of years," said Golam Shah.

"Should a ruler hoard riches," said Shere Ali, in the guardroom, "and have his soldiers unpaid?" That was the beginning of the end.

It was the thought of the treasure won over the soldiers, even as it did the mollahs and the eunuchs. Why had the rajah not buried it in some unthinkable place, as his father had done before him, and killed the diggers with his hand? "He has hoarded," said Samud, with a chuckle—for the old rajah had once pulled his beard—"only to pay for his own undoing. And in order to insure confidence, Golam Shah went beyond the truth perhaps, and gave a sketchy account of the treasures to this man and that, even as a casual eyewitness might do.

Then, suddenly and swiftly, the palace revolution was accomplished. When suddenly old rajah was killed, a shot was to be fired from the harem lattice, bugles were to be blown, and the sepoys were to turn out in the square before the palace and fire a volley in the air. The murder was done in the dark, save for a little red lamp that burned in the corner. Azim knelt on the body and held up the wet beard and cut the throat wide and deep to make sure. It sure was so easy! Why had he waited so long? And then, with his hands covered with warm blood, he sprang up eagerly—rajah at last!—and followed Golam and Samud and the eunuchs down the long, faintly moonlit passage, toward the hall of audience.

As they did so, the crack of a rifle sounded far away, and after a pause came the first awakening noises of the town. One of the eunuchs had an iron bar, and Samud carried a pistol in his hand. He fired into the locks of the treasure room and wrecked them, and the eunuch smashed the door in. Then they all rushed in together, none standing aside for Azim. It was dark, and the second eunuch went reluctantly to get a torch, in fear lest his fellow-murderers should open the safe in his absence.

But he need have no fear. The cardinal event of that night is the triumphant vindication of the advertised merits of a certain make of safes. The tumult that occurred between the Mindapore sepoys and the people loved not the new rajah—let that suffice. The conspirators got the key from around the dead rajah's neck, and tried a multitude of the magic words of the English that Samud Singh knew, even such words as "Kemup" and "Gorblimey"—in vain.

In the morning, the safe in the treasure room remained intact and defiant, the woodwork about it smashed to splinters, and great chunks of stone knocked out of the wall, dents abundantly scattered over its inpregnable door, and a dust of files below. And the shifty Golam had to explain the matter to the soldiers and mollahs as best he could. This was an extremely difficult thing to do, because in no kind of business is prompt cash so necessary as in the revolutionary line.

The state of affairs for the next few days in Mindapore was exceedingly strained. One fact stands out prominently—that Azim Khan was hopelessly feeble. The soldiers would not at first believe in the exemplary integrity of the safe, and a deputation insisted in the most Occidental manner, in verifying the new rajah's statements. Moreover, the populace clamored, and then by a naked man running came the alarming intelligence that the new deputy commissioner at Allapore was coming headlong and with soldiers to verify the account of the revolution Golam Shah and Samud Singh had sent him in the name of Azim.

The new deputy commissioner was a raw young man, partly obscured by a pith helmet, and chock full of zeal and the desire for distinction; and he had heard of the treasure. He was going, he said, to sift the matter thoroughly. On the arrival of this distressing intelligence there was a hasty and informal council of state (at which Azim was not present), a counter revolution was arranged, and all that Azim ever learned of it was the sound of a footfall behind him and the cold touch of a pistol barrel on the neck.

"More rubies, they are saying," said Azim, dreamily, and repeated, as if for his own pleasure, "rubies." For Azim was the heir.

When the commissioner arrived, that dexterous statesman, Golam Shah, and that honest soldier, Samud Singh, were ready to receive him, and they had two corpses, several witnesses, and a neat little story. In addition to Azim, they had shot an unpopular officer of the Mindapore sepoys. They told the commissioner how Azim had plotted against the rajah and raised a military revolt and how the people, who loved the old rajah, even as Golam Shah and Samud Singh loved him, had quelled the revolt, and how peace was restored again. And Golam explained how Azim had fought for life in the hall of audience, and how he, Golam, had been wounded in the struggle, and how Samud had shot Azim with his own hand.

And the deputy commissioner, being weak in his dialect, had swallowed it all. All round the deputy commissioner, in the minds of the people, the palace, and the city, hung the true story of the case, as it seemed to Golam Shah, like an avalanche ready to fall; and yet the deputy commissioner did not learn of it for four days. And Golam and Samud went to and fro, whispering and pacifying, promising to get at the treasure as soon as the deputy commissioner could be got out of the way. And as they went to and fro so also the report went to and fro—that Golam and Samud had opened the safe and hidden the treasure and closed and locked it again; and bright eyes watched them curiously and hungrily even as they had watched the rajah in the days that were gone.

"This city is no longer an abiding place for you and me," said Golam Shah in a moment of clear insight. "They are mad about this treasure. Golconda would not satisfy them."

The deputy commissioner, when he heard their story, did indeed make knowing inquiries (as knowing as the knowingness of the English goes) in order to show himself not too credulous; but he elicited nothing. He had heard tales of treasure, had the commissioner, and of a great box? So had Golam and Samud, but where it was they could not tell. They too had certainly heard tales of treasure—many tales indeed. Perhaps there was treasure.

Had the deputy commissioner had the scientific turn of mind, he would have observed that a strong smell of gun powder still hung about the audience chamber, more than was explained by the narrative told him; and had he explored the adjacent apartments, he would presently have discovered the small treasure room with its smashed locks and the ceiling now dependent ruins, and amid the ruins the safe, bulging perilously from the partly collapsed walls, but still unconquered, and with its treasures unexplored. Also, it is a fact that Golam Shah's bandaged hand was not the consequence of heroism in combat, but of certain private blasting operations too amateurishly prosecuted.

So you have the situation: Deputy commissioner installed in the palace, sending incorrect information to headquarters and awaiting instructions, the safe as safe as ever; assistant conspirators grumbling louder and louder, and Golam and Samud getting more and more desperate lest this voice should reach the deputy's ears.

Then came the night when the commissioner heard a filing and a tapping, and being a brave man, rose and went forthwith, alone and very quietly, across the hall of audience, pistol in hand, in search of the sound. Across the hall a light came from an open door that had been hidden in the day by a curtain. Stepping silently in the darkness of the outer apartment, he looked into the treasure room. And there stood Golam with his arm in a sling, holding a lantern, while Samud fumbled with pieces of wire and some little keys. They were without boots, but otherwise they were dressed ready for a journey.

The deputy commissioner was, for a government official, an exceedingly quickwitted man. He slipped back in the darkness again, and within five minutes Golam and Samud, still fumbling, heard footsteps hurrying across the hall of the audience and saw a flicker of light. Out went their lantern, with a groan because of a bandaged arm, but it was too late. In another moment Lieut. Earl, in pajamas and boots, but with a brace of revolvers and a couple of rifles behind him, stood in the doorway of the treasure room, and Golam and Samud were caught. Samud clicked his pistol and then threw it down, for it was three to one—Golam being not only a bandaged man, but fundamentally a man of peace.

When the intelligence of this treachery filtered from the palace into the town, there was an outbreak of popular feeling, and a dozen officious persons set out to tell the deputy commissioner the true connection betwen Golam, Samud, and the death of the rajah. The first to penetrate to the deputy commissioner's presence was an angry fakir from the colony that dwelt about the holy place. And after a patient hearing the deputy extracted the thread of the narrative from the fabric of curses in which the holy man presented it.

"This is most singular," said the deputy commissioner to the lieutenant, standing in the treasure room (which looked as though the palace had been bombarded), and regarding the battered but still inviolable safe. "Here we seem to have the key they haven't got."

"Curious mingling of the new and the old," said the deputy commissioner. "Patent safe—and a hoard."

"Send to Allapore and wire the safe makers, I suppose?" said the lieutenant.

The deputy commissioner signified that was his intention, and they set guards before and behind and all about the treasure room, until the proper instructions about the lock should come.

So it was that the Pax Britannica solemnly took possession of the rajah's hoard, and men in Simla heard the news, and envied that deputy commissioner his adventure with all their hearts. For his promptitude, and decision were a matter of praise, and they said that Mindapore would certainly be annexed and added to the district over which he ruled. Only a fat old man named MacTurk, living in Allapore, a big man with a noisy quivering laugh and a secret trade with certain native potentates, did not hear the news, excepting only the news of the murder of the rajah and the departure of the deputy commissioner, for several days. He heard nothing of the disposition of the treasure—an unfortunate thing, since, among other things, he had sold the rajah his safe, and may even have known the word by which the lock was opened.

The deputy commissioner had theatrical tastes. These he gratified under the excuse that display was above all things necessary in dealing with Orientals. He imprisoned his four malefactors theatrically, and when the instructions came from the safe people he had the safe lugged into the hall of audience in order to open it with more effect. The commissioner sat on the dais, while the engineer worked at the safe on the crimson steps.

In the central space was stretched a large white cloth. It reminded the deputy commissioner of a picture he had seen of Alexander at Damascus receiving the treasures of Darius.

"It is gold," said one bystander to another. "There was a sound of clinking as they brought the safe in. My brother was among those who hauled.

The engineer clicked the lock. Every eye in the hall of audience grew brighter and keener, excepting the eyes of the deputy commissioner. He felt the dignity of his responsibilities, and sat upon the dais looking as much like the Pax Britannica as possible.

"Holy smoke!" said the engineer. and slammed the safe again. A murmur of exclamations ran round the hall. Everyone was asking everyone else what they had seen.

"An asp!" said some one.

The deputy commissioner asked with imperturbability, "What is it?" he said, springing to his feet. The engineer leaned across the safe and whispered two words, something indistinct and with a blasphemous adjective in front.

"What?" said the deputy commissioner, sharply.

"Glass!" said the engineer, in a bitter whisper. "Broken bottles. 'Undreds!"

"Let me see!" said the deputy commissioner, losing all his dignity.

"Scotch, if I'm not mistaken," said the engineer, sniffing curiously.

"Curse it!" said the deputy commissioner, and looking up to meet a multitude of ironical eyes. "Er—

"The assembly is dismissed," said the deputy commissioner.

"What a fool he must have looked!" wheezed MacTurk, who did not like the deputy commissioner. "What a fool he must have looked!"

"Simple enough," said MacTurk, "when you know how it came about."

"But how did it come about?" asked the stationmaster.

"Secret drinking," said MacTurk. "Bourbon whisky. I taught him how to take it myself. But he didn't dare let on that he was doing it, poor old chap! Mindapore's one of the most fanatically Mahommedan states in the hills, you see. And he always was a secretive kind of chap, and given to doing things by himself. So he got that safe to hide it in, and keep the bottles. Broke 'em up to pack, I s'pose, when it got too full. Lord! I might ha' known. When people spoke of his treasure I never thought of putting that and the safe and the Bourbon together! But how plain it is! And what a sell for Parkinson. Pounded glass! The accumulation of years! Lord! I'd a given a couple of stone off my weight to see him open that safe!"

A Word to the Wise From Redfern

Every Woman Should Carefully Guard Her Individuality, Famous Designer of Women's Clothes Says

Paris, November 13.

THE higher-crowned hat will remain through the season. Its appearance at the beginning was somewhat sensational, and although many of the models were immediately sold to visitors from foreign countries, "la femme elegante" of Paris did not at once manifest enthusiasm for this new mode, which made American buyers uncomfortable, since they could not be sure whether it was a fad that would wear out in a few weeks or a definite style that would endure throughout the season. In Paris all new modes are fads until they have been approved by the well-dressed Parisienne, and now that it is she who is ordering high-crowned hats to wear on the Riviera a few weeks hence, no further fear exists for the duration of this fashion in millinery, and high crowns, now that the leaders have approved them, are being sold in thousands to well-dressed women from all countries.

Asked to explain why this high crown had won their favor, several Parisian women, far-famed for their elegance in dress, who had ordered them for Riviera wear, said: "There are two very good reasons why this style should endure through the winter season and, with variations, for several seasons to come. It encourages the much desired slender line, for one thing. Then, for another, it provides a background for trimmings of a new kind. The small hat, denied the variety of trimmings that accompanied the big hat, can achieve through this high crown something of what many women bemoaned with the passing of the wide brim. Then, too, if one wears one of the high soft crowns, one may, by rearranging it, effect numerous changes without the aid of trimming."

One observes more and more buttons on all woolen dresses for street wear. Great quantities of corozo and galalith buttons are being worn and they make a beautiful trimming. Galalith buckles also add a smart finishing touch to cloth or leather belts. A few of these are so artistically wrought that they are being used to grace evening frocks. On semievening dresses one sees a profusion of crystal, mother of pearl, china and gilt buttons. On the coats, where one or two very big buttons are used, the manufacturers have achieved real works of art, and such marvelously wrought buttons have never been seen before. They are so lovely and new that they bid fair to be popular throughout the winter season and into the spring.

MME. CHARLOTTE, directrice of Premet's, has completed her midseason collection, in which the shiny silks in black and navy blue show a tendency to return. She has also designed some very Parisian chiffon frocks that are being favored by smart women preparing to go South.

The most popular dressmaking establishment in Paris for the last few weeks has undoubtedly been Redfern's. No fewer than 71 people have ordered copies of all the gowns and coats which were made there for Queen Marie and Princess Ileana, and as most of the orders have come from America it follows that these models will continue to influence the trend of winter fashions in the United States. M. Edmond Courtot, director of Redfern's, is completing their midseason collection. He promises me there will be no drastic changes in the silhouette during the late winter season, but a few trial effects of which he will tell us in a week or two. The bolero effect continues to be in favor in silks as well as in light woolen materials. The dominating shades in this significant collection are green, navy and pink, and, of course, lots of black and white. M. Courtot is well known for his partiality for black and white and combinations of the two.

PARIS.

PEOPLE now look at an elegantly dressed woman and say: "How beautiful her dress is!" whereas some years ago they always said instead: "How beautifully she is dressed!" There is a big difference between those two compliments, for one is a tribute to the dress merely, while the other is a tribute to the woman and her taste.

I deplore the passing of the day when women dressed individually, instead of looking at a collection of models and selecting what they want to wear, without any consideration of themselves at all. Every woman has her personal individual physical features, and to choose dresses without taking them into consideration is as unjust to her appearance as it would be unjust to her appetite to select her food by numbers instead of actually choosing what she liked and passing by what she did not like.

If women continue to subordinate their own personalities to the creations that have been made without any reference to their own individuality, they might as well have another purchase their robes as to select them themselves. I have always gone in for individual dressmaking, and I know from long experience that it appeals to the highest classes. The woman who has an individuality to be proud of is not quickly disposed to sacrifice it by copying others.

Women Now Want What Others Have.

Formerly I would dress women from my library. When a woman came to me I would talk with her at some length and consider the personal features which she had to guard. Then, together, we would go through the many documents that from my comprehensive library of costumes and choose things that were in harmony with these qualities. Something in one costume might be pleasing, something in another and something in still another, and we would arrive after a while at something most appropriate.

In these days they wanted what only they themselves had, and now they want what others have. As I have already said, I rather deplore the passing of those days, but much is to be said for the styles of the present, for they are exceedingly resourceful.

The present styles are not only beautiful but they are highly practical. A thing that is not practical is not apt to have a long life, and the reason I think the present styles will remain more or less in vogue for some time is that they have given proof of being practical.

There has never previously been such a variety of materials, of colors, of textile art's astounding ability, for one thing, and, for another, the short skirt has been found to be more sanitary than the long one, and that is already much in its favor. The long skirt, though picturesque, picked up all the microbes as it dragged along like a mop. It was always catching in something, too, and pulling foreign matter along with it. Indeed, the long skirt was an excessively filthy institution. Annoying as it already was before the horse passed beyond the frontiers of style, it was found doubly—yea, triply—annoying after the advent of the automobile. Except in instances where women with a love of the picturesque hold to the period dress for evening wear, the long skirt is not likely to come into vogue again for many, many years.

Short Skirt Will Stay.

I am sure that the moderately short skirt will remain throughout the lifetime of all who are now living. It is graceful, it is youthful and it encourages the free out-of-door life that is essential to good health. Women used to be hindered on all sides by their dresses, and now, with the shortened skirt, which narrows considerably the gulf separating them from men, they have climbed to many important places which theretofore had been occupied only by the opposite sex. Hand in hand with this freedom of the new woman I have observed this advance mark of freedom in women's dresses. When the long skirt and the big hat were discarded women made a great stride in the direction of equality and independence.

A prominent American woman recently asked me: "What is your formula for a well-dressed woman?" I didn't have to think before answering, because it all seems so simple to me. "The well-dressed woman is a woman who is right in everything, and not just in spots. She must be right from her first undergarment all the way out to the jewelry and gloves and the numerous important little things that in the ensemble or sum total of dress are such extremely big things."

So many women are only half dressed. They may have on three times more, mind you, than a woman who is dressed very elegantly. They generally impress me as being overdressed rather than well dressed, but still they are only half dressed to my mind, because only half of what they wear is in harmony. The other half should be saved for another time and be worn separately.

Just as one false note can make the most beautiful symphony wrong, one false note in dress can throw the entire costume out of harmony and make it wrong. And by what little things women will ruin their appearance! How often have I been so offended by a wrong handkerchief or a wrong handbag that I felt like grabbing it contemptuously, and at the same time charitably, from the woman carrying it! And gloves, too, are often the false note in an ensemble that would otherwise be perfect.

Little Things Are Big Things.

As the really elegant note in woman's dress depends upon the details, one should remember that the little things are the big things. If your details are all in harmony, you are not apt to have trouble. Instead of purchasing all the details to go with the gown, reverse the order of things once, and buy the gown to go with the details. You will be agreeably surprised at the result. There is a growing tendency among women to do this, and I am sure that it will continue to be practiced for a long time.

Trimmings should be used in moderation, like all lovely things, if our pleasure in them is to endure. There is an old saying that "good things should be taken in small quantities," and this holds good here. The simplest trimming are often the most effective. What, for example, could be more lastingly impressive than the natural folds of the Greek costume? This Greek influence is one of the most wholesome that has been brought to bear on styles of our time. The artificial fold is ugly. Folds should be allowed to fall naturally and drape in their natural way. They may always be fixed in the place you want them in their natural folds.

A Well-Dressed Queen.

A few days ago I was asked by a literary man who knew that I had been couturier to all the queens of Europe: "Who do you think is the best-dressed queen you have ever seen?"

Here again I was able to answer without hesitation. "Incontestably it is Queen Marie of Roumania."

This is not because I have been Queen Marie's dressmaker for more than 20 years. It is because she deserves that distinction. She has perfect taste, and it is everywhere apparent in her dress. Most of her clothes are made for formal wear, and, naturally, she frowns on the ultra-short skirts, which are not so dignified for evening and state wear; but her infinite range of original and tasteful ideas has often been the object of my immense admiration. And, of course, she wears her dresses "like a king wears purple."

I could not dress Queen Victoria. It wasn't her fault that she couldn't be dressed, but it is, nevertheless, true. And Queen Alexandra, good though her will was, lived in a period when the styles were not beautiful, so she, consequently, was not what I call a "well-dressed queen." The present Queen of England I do not make dresses for—she prefers those long, trailing skirts, and, of course, if she wants them she may have them. There are now, however, several well-dressed queens in Europe, but the "best dressed" is assuredly Queen Marie of Roumania.

Wilson as a War President

How He Hit German Army's Morale —Why He Took in the Dollar-a-Day Men and the Morgan Crowd to Run the Business of War—House's Great Power Explained—How Pershing Was Chosen.

By JAMES KERNEY,

Editor and publisher of the Trenton Times newspapers and one of Woodrow Wilson's most intimate friends and advisers throughout his ten years of public career.

POLITICAL and business exigencies produce wars for spiritual leaders and young men to fight.

Instead of abating, after the 1916 election, in which Wilson had been reelected as the President who "kept us out of war," the demands of the jingos increased. American political life was filled with an intense bitterness. On December 18, 1916, after the transmission of Germany's offer to negotiate peace, Wilson considerably irritated the allies by frankly asking all the parties to the war, including Germany, to give the world their view of a proper basis for peace. In this note he declared that "neither side had stated the object for which the war had been started." He was in the driftway once more. And it was a hard fight he made with himself before accepting the methods of force.

But preach as he would American business had become so involved and the propaganda had worked so well that war was inevitable—that has always been said since the days of Hannibal.

Allied Propaganda.

"The allied propaganda," says Bertrand Russell, "through British control of the cables, secured wider publicity than that of Germany, and achieved a notable success in winning the sympathy and ultimately the cooperation of the United States." In spite of the virtuous professions to the contrary, a state of war, as England's leading organ of liberal thought, the Manchester Guardian, has frankly pointed out, is a license to lie as well as to kill; and the most effective war propaganda, for its immediate war purpose, may be that which is most widely false and which will be remembered with the most shame in after years by the nation which got the good of it at the time.

In the United States national security and defense leagues, amply financed, as well as numerous complaceat agencies, including a large part of the pulpit and press, joined the hue and cry raised by clamorous politicians, university professors, and legal and literary hacks in the service of the patrioteers. The country was thoroughly inoculated with the virus of hate and of war. Passion was the only test of patriotism.

The stampede was irresistible. Wilson was much like the outstanding religious leaders of the world, none of whom was able to breast the onrushing tide. As the hysteria increased, the mystical Wilson, despising war, began to feel that the country was for it. Like the Maid of Orleans, he had a habit of hearing voices—the voices of the people—at critical junctures. The stupid German submarine policy furnished as good a popular excuse as any for our going in. Historians may successfully locate some other influencing and determining factor.

When Germany announced, near the close of January, 1917, that she was going to begin on February 1 unrestricted submarine warfare around the British Isles, and undertook to specify the route which a limited number of American ships might take through this zone, Wilson ceased to drift. Diplomatic relations were severed on February 4, and Germany, having proceeded with her attacks at sea, the President on April 2 delivered his address, which resulted on April 6 in the Congress declaring that a state of war existed with Germany.

"The right is more precious than peace," Wilson declared in his memorable address, "and we shall fight for the things we have always carried nearest our hearts, for democracy, for the right of those who submit to authority to have a voice in their own government, for the rights and liberties of small nations, for a universal dominion of right by such a concert of free peoples as shall bring peace and safety to all nations and make the world itself at last free."

Von Ludendorff, who at the grand headquarters of the German army viewed the war from the attack on Liege to the signing of the armistice, has told of the shattering of Austrian and German morale by the idealistic phrases of Wilson. The catchy "right of self-determination" made a strong appeal in Austria-Hungary, as did the promise of a peace of understanding that would end all war and make the world safe for democracy. Ludendorff said that while the German army was always victorious on the battlefield Germany failed in the fight of the intellects against the enemy peoples. That genius for telling phrases, scoffed at so much in America, may ultimately prove to have been Wilson's greatest contribution to the victory.

Once Wilson had taken the country into war he became the most ardent friend of the allies. There was no further hesitation or halt. Ambassador Page, who had been pressing Wilson hard, has shown that the British government owed $400,000,000 to the bankers of the United States and that the first loan of $200,000,000 advanced by the United States was immediately turned over to the Morgan house on account. The British, who were the ablest diplomatists and propagandists, dispatched the Balfour mission, which arrived on April 23 and conferred with Wilson the next day. Balfour dined informally with Wilson and did good work for the allies. At the same time the French mission, with Marshal Joffre and Viviani at the front, arrived in Washington and the White House was at fever heat thenceforward.

While, of course, many Republican politicians, like Roosevelt, assailed Wilson throughout the war time, the better Republican thought of the country backed him heartily. Joseph H. Choate, who had been sneering at Wilson as a minority President, completely changed his tune from carping political criticisms to paeans of the highest praise.

Wilson took personal command of the United States government. He isolated himself still further, remaining much in his private apartments and seeing few people. He was playing for the verdict of history. He had no objection to Tumulty's making use of the newspapers to help create sentiment, although he did not have a very high regard for the press. When the agitation was under way for a coalition cabinet he sent a note from his private White House apartments to Tumulty in the executive office expressing his disapproval of the plan and adding, significantly:

"You will know how to create the impression on the minds of the newspaper men that I regard it as merely a partisan effort to hamper and embarrass the administration."

With the change in domestic surroundings there naturally had come a considerable change in the family friendships. The first Mrs. Wilson was an idealist and dreamer, whose tastes for a lifetime had been developed much like those of her distinguished husband. The second Mrs. Wilson was of a more mature and practical turn of mind. As the wife of a rich and successful Washington merchant, to whose jewelry business she had succeeded at his death, she had a keen insight in the affairs of the National Capital. Each brought to Wilson the fullest measure of devotion and adoration.

Wall Street Tolerated.

Knights-errant of big business are not shrinking violets and, as the war developed, kings and near kings of finance and industry were found more and more in the picture. Wall street no longer was anathema.

Wilson early recognized that the stupendous business side of war called for the highest caliber of business experts. It was idle to speculate as to the economic sources that had generated the spark in the powder magazine. The thing to do was to win. In times of crisis the rigid axioms of the reformer are often flexed by the cold facts of life.

Charles M. Schwab and James J. Farrell, of the great steel corporations, were pressed into service to help Edward N. Hurley rush the shipping program. Henry P. Davison of J. P. Morgan & Co., who had come back from England in 1915 with authority to make all American purchases for the allies, was placed at the head of the Red Cross, with its unrestricted spending of hundreds of millions of dollars abroad.

Edward R. Stettinius, another Morgan partner, already in charge of the allied purchases, was made an Assistant Secretary of War, after the Morgan house had successfully recommended that allied and American purchases be consolidated. Stettinius became surveyor general for war supplies, the most powerful business job in the war.

Dwight Morrow and Thomas W. Lamont, other Morgan partners, were among the ablest in having treasury associates like Angus McLean and Russell C. Leangwell, whose vast business experiences and ripe judgments were much depended upon by Wilson in the war financing.

Wilson also relied greatly upon the counsel of Bernard M. Baruch and Edward N. Hurley and Frank L. Polk and Norman Davis of the State Department. Throughout most of the war period House, with his voluminous programs for secretly setting the world right, continued to be the trusted personal friend and adviser of the President. He superseded cabinet officers and ambassadors and had the Wilson confidence to a greater extent than any one else.

Choosing Pershing.

When Wilson was elected President he had little acquaintance with military affairs or military men. Gen. Hugh L. Scott, who later served as chief of staff and for a time as Secretary of War ad interim—the only soldier to sit with the cabinet since Sherman—was one of the few army officers known personally to Wilson. Scott was of an old Princeton family. Wilson didn't know whether Scott was a Republican or Democrat—nor did he care. In the turbulent years that followed, Scott's judgment in military affairs weighed big with the President and he had much to do with the selection of Gen. Pershing as commander-in-chief of the American expeditionary forces.

Wilson was determined that the fighting Americans who went to Europe should be under the direction of an experienced, practical soldier. His implicit confidence in Pershing's capacity and his unswerving support of the commander of the A. E. F. were among the biggest things of Wilson's career. Secretary Baker also, despite his honest hatred of war, was equally insistent on having the fighting directed by trained soldiers, and he upheld Pershing at every turn.

At the time of Wilson's inauguration Gen. Wood was chief of staff and was known to have his eye on the White House. Protege and favorite of Roosevelt, Wood, although everywhere recognized as a fine soldier, was obsessed with the idea that he was a great politician, and bent on becoming President. He was naturally under suspicion most of the time. Professional heroes and warrior politicians are always a problem in a democracy, and Wilson, like most wise statesmen, was definitely opposed to having the government fall into the hands of the military power.

Although Wood was a harsh critic of Wilson, he was permitted to serve out his term as chief of staff. Scott might have had the post at any time after Wilson came in, but he was happier with Indians and along the border than in Washington. Scott had served as chief of staff for Wood when the latter was governor general in Cuba. He entertained a strong personal friendship for Wood and had a very high regard for his ability. Many were his kindly warnings to Wood against the latter's aggressive political methods. But Wood, in association with Roosevelt, never lost a chance to pound the Wilson administration.

Plattsburg is always spoken of as the initial step in the movement for preparedness. Wood is given the sole credit for establishing the training camp there. He is rightly entitled to much of the credit, but it must be apparent to every sensible person that without the cordial support of the President, the Secretary of War and the chief of staff there could have been no Plattsburg camp, because the men and the means were supplied by the government under Wilson's authority at Washington. Had this been withheld, Wood, a subordinate commander, could have done nothing.

When it was decided to invade Mexico in 1916 Scott strongly urged that Wood, as the ranking major general, be given command of the entire force. But Wood and Roosevelt had kept up their political bombardment, and Wood had taken Roosevelt to the Plattsburg training camp, under Wood's command, to picture the defenselessness of the United States. It was August 25, 1915, a few days after the sinking of the Arabic, and while Lusitania negotiations were still pending. At the close of his formal address Roosevelt had given the newspaper reporters a prepared statement containing the following diatribe against Wilson:

"To treat elocution as a substitute for action, to rely upon high sounding words unbacked by deeds, is proof of a mind that dwells only in the realm of shadow and of shame."

Wood was publicly rebuked for the incident, but Roosevelt continued to hammer away at the administration and at Wilson, employing his most rancorous invective, and Wood naturally suffered in his desire for advancement. No executive could be expected to place a subordinate, so entirely out of sympathy with his projects, in charge of a great policy. It is neither good business, nor is it human nature, to promote savage political enemies. Wilson directed that Scott should command the Mexican expedition himself.

Pershing, who had been jumped over 700 officers, including Scott, by President Roosevelt, was given command of a smaller Mexican expedition. Pershing stood out in the Mexican expedition and Scott took the view that under all the circumstances he was the best man the army had to command overseas. As chief of staff and as the friend of Wilson and Baker, Scott was able to build up the Pershing case, and Pershing was finally selected and ordered to Washington from El Paso.

Pershing's Leadership.

In view of the enormous scale of subsequent operations, when obscure soldiers came to have not only limousines but private trains in France, a request that Pershing, after his selection as commander of the A. E. F., addressed to Scott, as chief of staff, is rather amusing.

"Do you believe I could get a Cadillac machine for my own use in France?" asked Pershing.

"You go out and buy ten," was Scott's reply.

There were intrigues against Pershing both at home and abroad. Clemenceau, then premier, had gone so far, in January, 1918, as to cable, over the head of Pershing, direct to Washington to urge that American regimental units be attached to French divisions, which request was turned back to Pershing with full power to act. The politicians of both France and England, each seeking to head off a separate American army and to force the splitting up of our units and amalgamating them into their armies, sought to replace and save their own soldiers with ours.

Pershing was given absolute control of the American army in Europe, and no matter what political or other pressure was brought to bear there was no interference from Washington. Wilson and Baker had conceived and put over the national draft. It was their sacred purpose to keep faith with America by having the fighting men given the best of care.

Wilson's splendid loyalty to Pershing was never marred nor disturbed by the political gossips at home. Grant had reached the White House solely on his civil war record. Roosevelt's Spanish-American war venture was equally efficacious. And within a few months after the landing of American forces in France there began to be persistent whisperings in Washington that Pershing was a presidential candidate. Wilson knew the possibilities that war afforded for the hero with political friends. But he never let rumors interfere in his support of Pershing. There were plenty of politically ambitious American warriors in France, but I quickly discovered that Pershing was not of them.

When Wilson Refused Roosevelt.

After the declaration of war Roosevelt rushed in person to Washington to urge acceptance of his offer to raise four divisions to lead himself. Wilson received him at the White House on April 11 and patiently listened to his plea, agreeing to make the

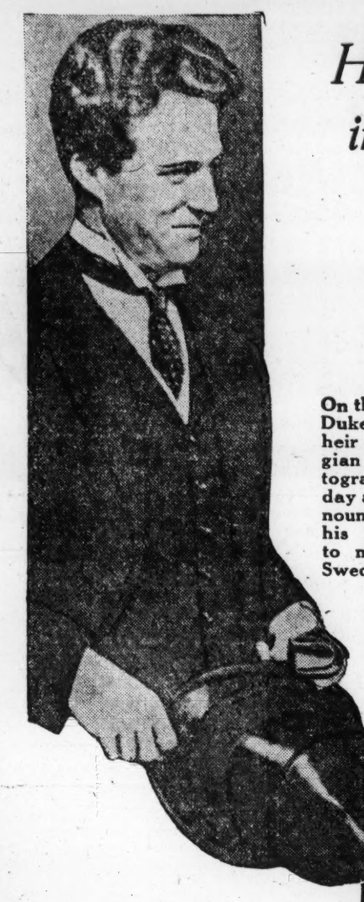
Won His Royal Bride in the Palace Kitchen

How the Future King of the Belgians and Sweden's Charming Princess Astrid Plighted Their Troth Over the Bowl of Salad Dressing She Was Mixing to Tempt the Young Duke's Appetite



On the left—The Duke of Brabant, heir to the Belgian throne, photographed on the day after the announcement of his engagement to marry the Swedish Princess Beautiful Princess Astrid, niece of the King of Sweden, who is soon to marry the Crown Prince of Belgium.

THE marriage of the Duke of Brabant, the future king of the Belgians, and the lovely Princess Astrid of Sweden, marks the end of the first chapter of a royal romance that is as unique as it is charming.

In the history of royal love affairs we find now and then a crown prince who went outside of royalty for his bride and actually wooed the girl of his choice in the kitchen of her humble cottage home. But until now nobody can recall a royal prince who wooed and won a royal bride in the kitchen of a royal palace.

According to the stories that are being told in European court circles, this unique distinction belongs to Crown Prince Leopold. He and Princess Astrid are said to have murmured "I love you" to each other in the kitchen of the palace of her uncle, the King of Sweden, and their troth is believed to have been actually plighted over the bowl of salad dressing Astrid was mixing to tempt the appetite of the young duke from Belgium.

Was there ever a royal romance more delightfully unusual than this and more like the ones you read about in the story books?

Very probably Leopold and Astrid would in any event have some day married, but the fondness of the Swedish princess for going down into the kitchen and preparing with her own dainty hands all sorts of delicious things to eat undoubtedly hurried along the love match. The engagement might have been long delayed but for that fateful day when Leopold on a tour of inspection of the palace in Stockholm discovered her in the kitchen.

There she sat, wearing a big housewifely apron and busily engaged in mixing another of the salad dressings like those which had already so tickled Leopold's palate.

If there had been any doubt about this royal marriage being a real love match it would be dispelled by what is now being told about the romantic way Astrid's heart was wooed and won. It is one of those rare marriage alliances of two nations that serve the interests of the statesmen and diplomats as well as those of the young people involved.

When the Belgian crown prince reached his twenty-fourth birthday not long ago his parents thought it high time for him to be thinking about marriage and began casting their eyes over the available princesses to see which of them was most to be desired as the future queen of the Belgians. A survey of the courts of Europe at once showed them that their field of choice was pretty limited.

There were two daughters of the King and Queen of Spain, Beatrice and Marie Christina, but both of them were rather too young to be thinking of matrimony. The same drawback existed in the case of Princess Ileana of Roumania. She is only 17 years old and her mother, Queen Marie, has let it be known that she will not take a husband for several years.

Then Princess Giovanna, Italy's royal family, supplied a royal daughter who was old enough and charming enough to qualify as the crown prince's bride. But there were reasons of state why a marriage alliance between Italy and Belgium was not considered desirable just then.

The eyes of the matchmaking parents turned toward the North. Unfortunately, the royal family neither of Norway nor of Sweden nor of Denmark contained a princess. But the King of Sweden had a niece whose beauty and charm arrested the attention of the Belgian rulers and made them think very favorably of her as a possible daughter-in-law. Her name was Princess Astrid and she was the daughter of Prince Carl, a younger brother of King Gustaf of Sweden. She was just 20 years old and was already famous all over Europe both for her beauty and her fine womanly qualities.

King Albert and Queen Elizabeth had no intention or desire to force their son into a loveless marriage. Rather than that, both they and the young man would have preferred seeing him condemned to a bachelorhood like that of the Prince of Wales. Leopold, however, was quite willing to look over the matrimonial field, and he was especially eager to become better acquainted with the Princess Astrid, of whom he had long heard such glowing reports.

So it was arranged for him to accept an invitation to visit the Swedish court—and to Stockholm he went early this fall. The idea was for him to call on Princess Astrid just as any unwitted young man might call upon a pretty girl. If she stirred love in his heart he was prepared to extend his stay in Sweden and actively press his suit. If not he would cut his visit short and hurry home.

Leopold was delighted with the cordial welcome he received from the Swedish royal family. Everything was done to make him feel at home, and he could not detect the slightest evidence of any match-making efforts to force Astrid upon his attention. In fact, he had been in Stockholm a day or two before he saw her.

When he did see her, just before dinner one evening, he instantly felt that the pictures of her which had been drawn for him were not in the least exaggerated. She looked so charming in her simple little evening dress and she put him so completely at his ease with her friendly smile and warm handclasp.

When the dinner that night reached the salad course, Leopold was struck with the delicious flavor of the dressing. It struck him as the most delicious thing of the kind he had ever tasted. If he had not been the most punctilious of young gentlemen he would have been tempted to smack his lips over it and call for a second helping. Instead he made bold to compliment his host on the dressing, saying: "I must express my admiration for the skill of the chef who prepared this endive salad dressing. He is a true artist. You must let me take the recipe back to Brussels."

What an odd setting for a royal love match—the kitchen of the Swedish royal palace in Stockholm with Princess Astrid in a housewifely apron and busily mixing a great bowl of salad dressing!

Princess Astrid and her sister, Princess Martha, at the cooking school where they learned to make the salad dressings which the Duke of Brabant found so delicious

As he spoke he noticed that all eyes were smilingly turned on Princess Astrid, and as she met their gaze her cheeks were mantled by a blush that made her look more adorably beautiful than ever. Leopold was much mystified. He could not understand why his remark about the dressing should turn everybody's attention to the princess or why she should blush as she did. He wondered if he had broken some law of Swedish etiquette by speaking like that.

The mystery was not cleared up for several days—not until after the crown prince had rolled his tongue over many salads as delicious as the one that had first stirred his admiration.

Late one afternoon he was being shown through the palace under the guidance of a high official of the court. As they passed through one of the lower floors his escort said:

"Perhaps your highness would like to see our kitchen. Here in Sweden we are exceedingly fond of good things to eat and we pride ourselves on the achievements of our chefs. Our women, no matter how highly born, are proud to know the art of cookery."

The door of the kitchen was swung open and as the crown prince looked into the room he saw the explanation of the Princess Astrid's pretty blushes. As she smilingly admitted after the first greetings were over, she was the "chef" who had concocted all the salad dressings that had so pleased the Belgian prince. And at the moment of his unexpected entrance into the kitchen she was busily mixing another dressing which she hoped and believed he would find even more delicious.

The young Duke of Brabant lost his interest in continuing his inspection of the palace. He was loth to leave the charming princess. He suddenly discovered that he had many things to say to her. The court officials who were escorting him and the chefs who had been helping the princess tactfully understood the situation and left the young couple alone in that corner of the great kitchen.

And there, it is said, over the bowl of salad dressing the Duke of Brabant and the Princess Astrid became engaged.

Princess Astrid's interest in cooking is no passing girlish fad. She enjoys it as much as she does riding, skiing and the other outdoor sports at which she is expert. She and her sister, Princess Martha, attended cooking school for several years. And they are both capable of preparing anything from a simple breakfast to an elaborate full-course dinner.

Everybody expects that Princess Astrid will continue her cooking activities after she is installed in the royal palace at Brussels. The Belgian royal family may expect to be introduced to many of the toothsome dainties for which Sweden is famous.

A dish of stewed crabtails with white sauce is a very popular dish in Sweden. To make this the crabs are boiled and the meat taken out. Then a spoonful of butter and a handful of flour is put in a pan and diluted with cream while beating. Add the yolks of three eggs and as much sweet cream, a little sugar and nutmeg. When this sauce has been blended the crabtails are added and it is heated up without boiling. It is served with a garnish or pastry.

The endive salad which Princess Astrid made for Leopold is a popular salad with the Swedish. The dressing is well seasoned and adds to the tang of the endive.

The yolks of three hard boiled eggs are crushed like crumbs. To this are added three tablespoons of fine olive oil, the same quantity of vinegar, some cayenne pepper, salt and sugar. The endive is placed on a large platter and the dressing is poured over it and thoroughly mixed in.

The cooks in Sweden never use substitutes for butter or eggs and other dairy products as they do in some countries. Many of the dishes are rich.

"EUTHENICS BEST," SAYS TAFT'S DAUGHTER

"I am somewhat skeptical about the possibilities of giving girls of school and college age anything resembling a professional training as a future wife and mother," says Helen Taft Manning, dean of Bryn Mawr college and daughter of former President Taft, in the November McCall's.

Writing on "Homemaking as a Science," Dean Manning says:

"The latest attempt at a scientific solution for some of our troubles is being made at Vassar college, where a department of 'euthenics' has just been inaugurated. Freely translated, euthenics means simply 'good living,' but I believe that the department so described will deal primarily with the problems of the parent and home-maker.

"The instruction is to go on in summer as well as in winter, and a group of Vassar alumnae arrived with their families early this July to profit by the instruction offered by the new department.

"Some practical information with regard to cooking and the care of babies can doubtless be inculcated in girls of school age, but the dry details of arranging the family budget and selecting the best cut of beef do not become interesting until they are of vital importance to one's immediate comfort. Probably the best time to study seriously domestic science in a broad sense of the term is after one has already begun to undertake domestic responsibilities, and for that reason I am more interested in the summer school at Vassar than in the winter courses.

"Homemaking as an occupation deserves more dignified treatment than it has received in the past. Nor is such study any less the affair of the men than of the women."

SIX-FOOT GORILLA FIGHTS LIKE A MAN

After thrilling adventures and hairbreadth escapes in the heart of Africa, Ben Burbridge, noted American big game hunter, has furnished to scientists the first real opportunity to study the mentality of the gorilla—the beast which, both structurally and in reasoning powers, resembles man most closely. Mr. Burbridge, in his two latest expeditions to Africa, not only obtained the only motion pictures of the gorilla ever made in its native haunts, but captured more live gorillas than have ever fallen prey to any other naturalist, eight in all. He succeeded in bringing three back to Europe and America alive, one of which, Miss Congo, a female about 6 years old, has lived and thrived since the fall of 1925 in Florida. She is the only living gorilla today outside of the African forests.

Some of the experiences in capturing these remarkable man beasts with the aid of pygmy warriors are related by Mr. Burbridge to Frank Parker Stockbridge in the December Popular Science Monthly.

"What I was after was live, young gorillas," he says. "Our method was to watch for a family of gorillas passing through the forest, the old male leading and the young ones straggling along behind, and to pick up the straggling infants.

"One day we caught two young gorillas in this way. We thought the rest had gone on, and had begun our march campward, when I heard the roar of a gorilla behind me. I know of nothing more terrifying than the roar of a gorilla when heard the first time. It rivals the roar of a lion in volume, but has a more threatening tone. It is punctuated, moreover, by the beating of the beast's arms against his chest, producing a booming, echo-noise like a big drum.

"The crackling of the underbrush told me that the whole band was after us. Hearing them, the young gorillas we had caught began to squeal, just as I was assembling my motion picture camera in the hope of getting a sensational strip of film. I had three natives with me this time. To one, the gun bearer, I turned over the crank of the camera with instructions to keep turning until I told him to stop. Flanked by the other two, each carrying a squirming gorilla infant, I advanced toward the place where the shaking of the shrubbery and the roaring of the beasts told me the band was assembled. The racket finally became so threatening that my two natives bolted with the captives. And that, it seemed, was what the 'old man' gorilla had been waiting for. I was alone.

"He crashed toward me through the underbrush, a huge, hairy, towering bulk, walking erect, almost like a man, with his great arms hanging to his knees. I fired once. He was so close that I could not miss. He fell dead, almost at my feet, and the rest of his family fled into the forest.

"As he lay there I measured him. Six feet tall he had stood in life. His foot was 12 inches long; his fist when closed would have filled a gallon measure. I estimated his weight at 450 pounds. His muscles stood out in great knots, indicating his tremendous strength. He seemed so human, like some prehistoric ancestor of our own race, that if I had gone into the gorilla country for the sport of killing them I believe I would have abandoned my expedition then and there."

The Married Life of Helen and Warren

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

Helen's Revolt at a Stifling Stateroom Leads to Swift Disaster

A MIST-BLURRED night. The deck wet and slippery. Even the arm of her steamer chair stickily moist.

The salt tang against her face. Helen lay back in rug-wrapped warmth. Most of the other chairs deserted. Stacked up for the night. A steward taking in the rugs.

Two Englishmen still promenading. Wind-flapped mackintoshes over their dinner coats.

Music and slits of light from the lounge. A feeble festivity against that wave-lashed blackness.

Almost twelve. Time to go down. And yet she lingered.

Always she loved the deck at night. Nearer the sea somehow. None of the disturbing chatter of the day.

Just to lie there and dream. London—Paris—Berlin. Her favorite haunts. And perhaps a glimpse of new countries—Poland, Czechoslovakia. The thrill of exploring. Adventuring!

The steward folding the last chair. Plainly waiting for hers.

Reluctantly she slipped out of the sheathing rug. Her evening wrap rumpled. Her hair wind-blown. Conscious of her disheveled ment, she scurried past the lounge to a less conspicuous entrance.

Down the white corridor to their stateroom.

Suffocating. The porthole closed! Why? Open all day and no rougher now.

The third day out. Now in the Gulf Stream with its oppressive warmth. The need for air imperative.

The elderly night steward answered her ring.

"Sorry, Miss, but I had orders to close all portholes on this side."

"But why?" hanging up her wrap. "Is it going to be rough?"

"I don't know, Miss. Them's the orders from the bridge."

"Hello, Kitten," Warren strode in as the steward withdrew. "Thought you were coming up for a drink."

"Oh, I was all blown to pieces. Look, they've shut the porthole. We'll smother in here tonight."

* * * * *

"NO, you don't—they're never any good. Dear, that's the only thing that makes me sick—when I can't get air. You don't care! You stay in that stuffy old smoking room—"

"Where's a hanger? You swiped 'em all?" opening the wardrobe filled with her gowns.

"Here's one," hastily clearing a hanger for his dinner coat. "They never have enough. I should've brought some of those folding ones."

"Forgot to set my watch," winding it. "What'd they put us ahead today? Forty minutes, wasn't it?"

The ship's time with its daily variation always annoying.

"Dear, there's one thing I'm going to get in Paris—if I don't get anything else. A traveling clock—one of those thin ones that don't take up any room."

"Huh, you say that every trip," hanging his watch in the pocket by his berth.

"I know, but they're so expensive. Thirty dollars for a good one. Oh, it's so close in here. Dear, I can't stand it. Why can't we have a fan?"

"Now don't start anything this time of night. Always kicking 'bout air. Here, put my shoes out," slumping into bed.

"I'm going to ask anyway. He can take out that bulb and attach it there."

After midnight now. Several moments before the steward answered her ring.

"Sorry, Miss, but I couldn't get a fan tonight. Everything's locked up. And the fans are only for the inside rooms. But tomorrow you can ask the purser—maybe he'll give you one."

"Now stop chewin' the rag and get to bed," grunted Warren as the door closed.

* * * * *

BUT it was another twenty minutes, punctuated by his impatient growls, before she switched out the lights.

No air! In bed the closeness more oppressive. That cloying, ship-rolling oppression.

She would be ill. A good sailor only with plenty of air. Fresh, cold air. But this swaying warmth!

And the ship smell! Closed up, even a luxurious Deck B stateroom oozed that faint but sickening odor.

If only she could open the porthole—just a little. Warren already asleep. Audibly. Lack of air never troubled him.

A deeper roll. The creaking of the ship. The nauseous choking heat. She couldn't stand it. She wouldn't! Warren would be furious—but he needn't know.

Lest the light arouse him, she threw her silk slip over the bedside lamp before she turned it on.

The porthole screwed down tight. The wrench! She knew where the steward kept it. In the corridor cupboard.

Softly she stole out. The droning of a fan from an inside stateroom.

A fumbling search in the cupboard by the dim corridor light. Soiled towels, a dustpan and brush, bottles—yes, the iron wrench.

Back to their porthole. Standing on the couch beneath, she struggled with the salt-rusted screw. Both hands—all her strength. At last it moved—the rest was easy. Slowly the heavy brass-bound glass swung open Air! Clean, moist air. Eagerly she drank it in.

Leaning out, she peered down at the black, frothing waves. Even the highest did not reach the portholes two decks below. Surely no danger.

* * * * *

BUT it might rain. The sky cloud-choked, starless. Noiselessly she spread Warren's mackintosh over the tapestried couch. Protection if it should rain.

Was that why the portholes had been ordered closed? Some passengers so careless. A glow of complacency at her own meticulous care.

Back in bed, she lay in pleasurable, relaxed relief. Air! Air! Did any one ever love it so? She thought shudderingly of the horrors of suffocation. Surely any other death would be preferable.

The rushing charge of the sea. A swishing roar like the wind through a mighty forest. A murmurous, somniferous sound.

Now soon asleep. Fanned by the fresh breeze from the open porthole. A deep oblivion.

* * * * *

A shot! A deafening blast.

Dazed, terrified, Helen sprang up. Collisions—icebergs—a sinking ship—lifeboats—chaotic, sleep-hazed pictures.

Before she could cry out Warren had flashed on the lights.

An explosive oath as he sprang to the porthole. But not in time. Another vicious wave shot through—almost knocking him over.

Drenched, spluttering, he forced shut and screwed down the heavy glass.

"Who opened that porthole?" he thundered, whirling on her.

But for the next few moments she was deaf to his tirade.

Wiping, mopping, wringing out. Frantic efforts to minimize the damage of the deluge.

Her bed had escaped. But his had been in line with the wave. While he profanely struggled into dry pajamas, she worked with feverish speed.

The raincoat spread over the couch had caught much of the water. But now running down—a dark pool on the carpet. With the mat from the bathroom she wiped it up.

The private bath that had seemed an extravagance. How grateful she was for it now! Warren's fumings she scarcely heard, as snatching the covers from his bed she spread them out over the tub.

Fortunately he had thrown off the satin comforter—but the blanket and sheets were wet. Even the mattress—that new flowered ticking.

"Dear, get in my bed. You can't help—you're only in the way," hanging up his drenched pajamas.

"Some stunt every trip," he stormed on. "Air—air! Got to have air if you sink the ship. Next time—just look at that," pouring the water out of a dress shoe. "Told you to put these out."

"I thought you meant your brown ones. Oh, I didn't dream it would come in——No, turn them up—they'll dry quicker. It wasn't rough at all——"

"You know more'n the captain, eh? Orders from the bridge mean nothing to you. Go right ahead and open up. Not the first time you've flooded the place, but by golly, it's the last. Next time—Look at thta!" snatching up his cap. "Sopping!"

"Dear, do get in bed," hanging the dripping cap over the wash basin. "You'll catch cold."

"Heluva lot you'd care. Just so you have air. Air—Air!" he fumed. "Always kicking like a steer about air. Second time you've pulled this irrigation act—but I'll take darn good care it don't happen again. Next time——"

Everything on that rack soaked—magazines, her scarf—that new book the Daltons sent them, "Trimming Tourists in Paris." She tore off the wet paper jacket.

Warren, now in her bed, viewed her activities with caustic comments.

"Where you goin' to sleep? In the bath tub? Punch the bell—have him make up that couch."

"No, no. I can fix it," shrinking from the steward's disapproval. "These big bath towels will do for sheets—and your comforter's dry. No, I don't need a pillow. Oh, this chair—the back's all wet," hastily wiping it off.

Did salt water dry out quickly? After 1 now. Breakfast in their room at 9—about eight hours. Would it all be dry by then?

Their accommodating day steward. She could not bear him to know. Part of her inferiority complex—to dread the disapproval of servants.

Warren still growling invectives.

"Dear, it'll be all dry in the morning," hopefully. "I'm sure it will," with forced self-conviction. "You won't know it happened."

"I won't, eh? Darn lucky if I don't get triple pneumonia. A soaking like that in the middle of the night! Well, coming back we take an inside room. Savvy? No more portholes for you to pry open. Last chance you'll have to stage a washout. Air—air!" he snorted. "You've about worn out that record. Now turn off that light," with a savage dig at his pillow. "Heluva lot of rest I get on this voyage!"

POLICE CHIEF WANTS TO ABOLISH CLUBS

Police clubs and strong-arm tactics are antiquated means of decreasing crime, according to Col. George Warburton Lewis, chief of insular police, of Porto Rico, in an article in Adventure magazine.

"Though I am a policeman of some experience," he says, "I am very firmly convinced that police clubs are the most ineffective weapons with which to fight crime waves. Crime waves, when all is said and done, must be met with waves of education, waves of health, waves of reform, of conductive efficiency, of reasonable tolerance between groups and individuals alike, and the simple elements that make for equally distributed prosperity and community contentment."

That Col. Lewis is correct in his theory is the belief of Arthur Sullivant Hoffman, editor of Adventure magazine, who expresses the opinion that "however much you may theorize and practice as to forms of government, no government will be good unless the citizens who make, operate and are the government and the nation are good citizens, and that the only practical means of getting better citizens is systematic, organized education in civic morality."

Mr. Hoffman believes that the present crime waves and disorders will continue until Americans are really awakened to the practical need of good citizenship as the one solid hope of good government and a good nation.

Tales of Real Dogs

Mustapha, the Canine Cannoneer

This is a true story, and its climax is attested to by many witnesses. Indeed that climax was once included in the archives of the British war office; and its hero was nicknamed "the Canine Cannoneer."

But it is almost certain that his great achievement was a mere accident and that he did not think out what he did. Judge for yourselves when you read this story of his.

His name was Mustapha. He was a poodle. He belonged to a captain of artillery, in the British army. The dog and his master had lived together for years; Mustapha always sleeping in the doorway of the captain's tent or room.

When the artillery regiment was ordered across the channel to play its part in the fighting done by the British armies in the long-drawn-out "War of the Austrian Succession" Mustapha accompanied his master as usual; trotting at his side when the officer was afoot; galloping beside his charger; sometimes riding with expert safety on a rocking and jouncing gun-carriage.

It was great fun for the little dog. The soldiers looked on him as a mascot. He was as famous as he was popular. He shared battle and siege and endless marches and countermarches with the captain; and sat gayly wagging his tail close alongside the noisiest of the battery's cannon.

Then came the historic battle of Fontenoy, on May 11, 1745; one of the greatest conflicts in the world's record of warfare; a battle of which it has been said: "It delayed the French revolution for nearly a half century."

The French were beginning to tire of dissolute and extravagant royalty; and they were murmuring for reforms. Then their king (or rather his marshal, Maurice Saxe, by the help of the Irish volunteers) won a mighty victory at Fontenoy; and national triumph silenced for a while the people's discontent.

At Fontenoy Mustapha's regiment of artillery bore much of the battle's brunt. Its guns formed the major part of a battery ranged on a hill, overlooking and raking the French line on the plain below. From thence the British artillery fire poured down a withering blast on the French.

Naturally, it became necessary for the French to silence that fire from above; unless they wanted a goodly part of their nearer forces wiped out by the merciless fire from the hilltop. So, on every side the French batteries opened in force upon the devastating enemy.

For a time a ferocious artillery duel raged. Mustapha was delighted. He rushed to and fro at his master's heels, barking uproariously and thoroughly enjoying the deafening fusillade.

Then, the French fire concentrated on the guns manned by the captain's own company. Nearly every man in the company was mowed down by the irresistible blast of shot and shell. The captain was one of the first to fall. He was killed instantly by the exploding of a shell.

Gone was Mustapha's frantic joy in the excitement around him. The little dog stared bewilderedly at his dead master, as if he could not understand what had happened. Then he crouched close beside the captain's body; to guard it from further harm.

The company being destroyed, a French column swept up the hill to seize their big guns before the cannon could be rescued by the British or the gap filled. Except from wounded or dying artillerymen, the charge met with only one item of opposition in their headlong attack.

That one exception was little Mustapha. He saw the enemy scrambling uphill at full speed toward the adored dead master whom he was guarding. Then it was that the dog did something which has made him immortal. Undoubtedly he did it by mere accident and not through any knowledge of the effect of his action.

The battery's biggest gun had been all ready to fire, by the pulling out of its pin, at the moment its gun crew had been killed by the French fire. Mustapha sprang forward to oppose the charging Frenchmen. As he passed beside this cannon, he leaped up and, with his teeth, yanked out the firing pin.

There was a roar as the mighty gun went of. It was fired point-blank at the mass of climbing French soldiers. Seventy of them were killed or more or less badly injured by the unexpected explosion.

Truly, the valiant little dog had avenged his slain master! It may be that the captain or some of the gunners, as a trick, had taught Mustapha to pull out the firing pin when the gun was unloaded. A poodle, rightly taught, learns with bewildering quickness. Or it may have been mere accident. In either case, it did its work.

After he had pulled out the pin and British reinforcements drove back the charging assailants of the battery, Mustapha trotted to where his master lay. He stood above the dead captain; once more on guard there.

And there a handful of British soldiers found him, a day later. For 24 hours, Mustapha had guarded his master; and even now he would not let any one come near the body. He was overpowered, by kindly hands, and taken to brigade headquarters.

Later, Mustapha went back to England with his regiment. King George II heard the story of his prowess, and was so keenly interested in the loyal little dog that he took him to the palace as his own pet. There, with his royal master, Mustapha lived out a long and honored life, dying many years later.

The Beautiful Days of Dread.

The hunting season is at its height. The so-called "game" is being harried from cover to cover. Wherever game runs or flies, the man with the gun is abroad. It is the open season—a joyous season for the hunter, but a season of terror for the hunted.

It is an amazing thing to me that certain species of game, both animals and birds, can hold their own, and do hold their own, in the face of the relentless pursuit. Every year sees an increase in the number of guns in the forests and in the haunts of the wild fowl. That anything can survive is amazing. It is to me one of the miracles of nature that certain of her children in feathers and fur have so far been able to adjust themselves to the changed conditions brought about by man and to his relentless pursuit of them, that they still people our fields and woods. Thus, there are more deer in the thickly settled State of Massachusetts than in several of the thinly settled Western States combined. Thus the black bear is still the comedian of Eastern forests and the raccoon still washes his food in the brooks on the very edge of civilization.

That this is so is largely due to the marvelous adaptability of these creatures. But I wonder how long they can maintain themselves in the face of the constant development of killing apparatus. If every hunter who goes into the woods and fields were a true sportsman there would be little cause for worry over the safety of any particular species. Hunters are divided into two classes—sportsmen and killers. Unfortunately the latter class predominates heavily. Its members go afield for one purpose—to kill. The hunt means nothing to them. They are actuated solely by the blood lust. Sportsmen, on the other hand, find their pleasure in the hunt rather than in the kill. The kill is merely the incidental reward for the patience and skill of the hunt.

The Foreign Killer.

The other day I heard of a bird net being taken within a very short distance of my home. Of course bird netting is illegal everywhere, and of course this net was the property of a foreigner, one who had come to this country from southern Europe. I have reason to believe that the snare and the net are being used constantly in America, particularly in those sections where there is a considerable foreign element; and that this illegal taking of our songbirds is carried on to a greater extent than is generally recognized. Whoever finds such snares or nets should leave them untouched, but at once notify the nearest game warden, that he may possibly catch the lawbreaker red-handed. Our wild life, particularly our so-called "game," has all it can do to hold its own against the legal hunter in these days of the murderous pump and automatic shotguns. Nothing short of jail sentences should be meted out to those convicted of using the snare and the net.

An Eagle's Mental Aberration.

Apparently mental aberration, or absent-mindedness, occurs with the Green Forest and Green Meadow people just as it does with us humans. One day this fall a bald eagle alighted in a tree in a yard in Princeton, Mass. It was mistaken for a hawk and shot. Now that eagle must have been absent-minded. The dooryard of a house is the last place in the world one would look to find the king of the air.

That eagle was shot by a woman. Imagine that! Her explanation to the game warden was that she thought it was a big hawk. In killing that bird she violated the game laws of the State of Massachusetts, for there the eagle is protected by law at all times. I don't know which to pity most, the absent-minded eagle, who so foolishly presented himself as a target, or the slayer of the king, who knew so little about birds that she could not distinguish between an eagle, the living national emblem, and a hawk. Such a killing has no excuse whatsoever, for no one has any business to kill even a hawk unless the hawk is caught red-handed in mischief. Will people never learn that hawks are not to be condemned just because they are hawks? A few days after the killing of the eagle another, apparently its mate, alighted in the same tree. Eagles, you know, mate for life. Probably this one was looking for its lost mate.

A Grouse Who Also Was Absent-Minded.

Here is an interesting incident from Elton J. Prescott, of New Hampshire. "I was driving," says Mr. Prescott, "through a wooded road when on the wall beside the road I saw a female partridge, or ruffed grouse. I stopped my car, got out, and walked over almost near enough to her to put my hand on her. She then hopped down on the other side of the wall. I followed her into the bushes for three or four rods, sometimes almost near enough to pick her up. Finally she flew away and I supposed that the incident was closed. The following day, however, I was driving over the same road with my wife and called her attention to the place where I had seen the partridge. 'Why, there she is now!' exclaimed Mrs. Prescott. Sure enough, sitting in almost identically the same spot was the bird. This time I took off my hat and coat and made a business of following her. Finally I caught her in my hands and brought her out to the road to show my wife. Then I tossed Mrs. Partridge into the air, thinking that if she came down helpless I would take her home and see what could be done for her. But there was nothing the matter with her. She whirred off over the trees as if nothing had happened. I have been unable to find any explanation of this behavior. Can you offer any?"

None, save the aforesaid mental aberration. Last winter, at Wellesley, Mass., there was a grouse with apparently no fear whatever of human beings. It would come when called by the chopping of wood, or by the clapping of two sticks together, and would feed from the hand. Yet no attempt had ever been made to tame this bird. I have heard of one or two other similar instances. There is no satisfactory explanation.

Out of the Jaws of Death.

"I intend to be a good Nature league member, true to the purpose of the league, but really I just can't abide too many snakes in my garden," writes Mrs. Sadie B. Knox. "I like my toads, but it gets on my nerves to see snakes too often. One day when looking at the roses I noticed seven or eight inches of the tail of a snake perfectly still, the rest of the body being out of sight in the soft dirt. A good swat with a sharp hoe was followed by several convulsions down in the earth, and out jumped a toad which looked as if its head and shoulders had been dipped into glue and then into dirt. The remainder of the body was clean. Not until then did I guess what that snake had been doing. It didn't seem possible that so small a snake could swallow so large a toad."

While I deplore the indiscriminate killing of snakes, I am not unreasonable in the matter. When it comes to a choice between toads and snakes in the garden, and the two are not likely to live there in amity, my vote is cast for the toads every time. In all this subject of the treatment of wild life reason must prevail. There are times when almost any form of life may become obnoxious and a pest. If it comes to a choice between two forms of life, one of which is distinctly more desirable than the other, the latter must go. However, one must be sure that there is such a choice. It is wisest to remove only those creatures actually caught in serious mischief. All too often these little wild creatures are sadly misjudged.

The incident of the toad being swallowed by the snake reminds me that I one time wrote of a similar incident and was promptly brought to task because I had the toad being swallowed head first. Evidently the toad Mrs. Knox saw was being swallowed head first. While it is perhaps customary for snakes to swallow toads and frogs by engulfing the hind legs first, they do on occasion reverse matters. The toad I saw and the toad that Mrs. Knox saw may perhaps be merely exceptions to prove the rule. But certainly they were going down into the jaws of death head first.

A Naturalist's Question Box.

Mrs. E. A. Fletcher, of Massachusetts, wonders if I can and will identify for her a little snake found in the grass. She says it was six to seven inches long, about as large around as an old-fashioned slate pencil, had a black back, yellow underneath, and had a yellow band around its neck.

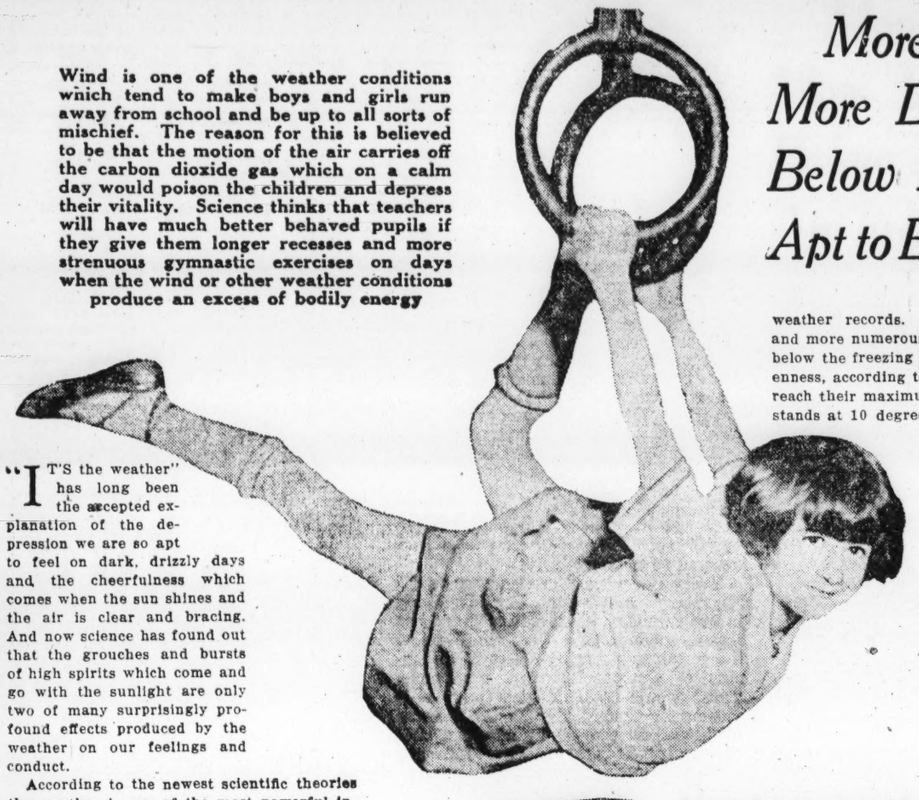
It was a harmless little serpent known as the ring-neck snake. It crawls about at night and during the day is usually found hiding under flat stones, pieces of bark, or in similar places. Fully grown, it rarely attains a length of more than fifteen to eighteen inches. It is a beautiful little serpent and should not be killed.

Florence N. Jones says that her children want to know what the humming bird builds its nest of, where it builds, and if the webbing on the nest is of spider silk.

It is Mrs. Humming Bird who builds the nest. Mr. Humming Bird, I regret to say, is too fine a gentleman to actively participate in household matters. He neither helps in building the nest nor in the care of the young. The nest is built of plant down, frequently the cottony substance found on the stem of ferns. The outside is covered with lichens picked from the bark of trees. These are fastened on with spider webs, caterpillar webs, or very fine plant fibers. When completed the tiny nest looks like a lichen-covered knot on the branch to which it is saddled. I am speaking of the nest of the ruby-throat, which is the only humming bird we have in the East. In one season I found a humming bird's nest in an apple tree, another in an elm overhanging a village street and a third in a pine tree.

Surprising Effects Weather Has On Our Conduct

Wind is one of the weather conditions which tend to make boys and girls run away from school and be up to all sorts of mischief. The reason for this is believed to be that the motion of the air carries off the carbon dioxide gas which on a calm day would poison the children and depress their vitality. Science thinks that teachers will have much better behaved pupils if they give them longer recesses and more strenuous gymnastic exercises on days when the wind or other weather conditions produce an excess of bodily energy



More Suicides and Cases of Assault When It's Hot, More Drunkenness as the Mercury Falls Below Freezing and Why Children Are Apt to Be Full of Mischief on Windy Days

"IT'S the weather" has long been the accepted explanation of the depression we are so apt to feel on dark, drizzly days and the cheerfulness which comes when the sun shines and the air is clear and bracing. And now science has found out that the grouches and bursts of high spirits which come and go with the sunlight are only two of many surprisingly profound effects produced by the weather on our feelings and conduct.

According to the newest scientific theories the weather is one of the most powerful influences that continually play on our lives and make us the kind of people we are. Not only sunlight or the lack of it but the fluctuations of the thermometer and the barometer, the degree of humidity and the amount of rain or snowfall are all factors—and often the controlling ones—in swaying human behavior.

Even the velocity of the wind on a certain day has the power to change the whole course of a person's life. Little or no wind may be the cause of boys and girls failing to pass their examination and becoming so discouraged that they leave school long before they should. On the other hand, a moderate or high wind may supply the deciding influence that sends a boy to the reformatory and starts him on a life of crime.

The weather, it is now believed, is inextricably bound up with the destiny of every human being, sometimes helping him to success and joy, sometimes driving him to failure and sorrow. Certain weather conditions can make men and women potential murderers. Others can so aggravate their despondency and disgust with life that they kill themselves. The weather probably has a great deal more to do with making people drink to excess than bootleggers or bartenders, prohibition or license, or any other one influence.

Have you ever become so angry that you felt like slapping somebody's face or perhaps knocking some one down with a blow from your fist?

Science finds that you are more likely to feel and obey the impulse to inflict physical punishment on one of your fellowmen on days when the temperature averages 85 degrees. It is on such days that husbands most frequently raise their hands against their wives, women hurl rolling pins at their husbands, neighbors pull each other's hair across the backyard fence and underworld thugs settle their grudges with blackjacks or brass knuckles.

The tendency of a temperature of 85 degrees to encourage physical violence is pretty well established by a comparison of the police records and the weather conditions in New York day by day over a long period of years. This shows that the arrests for assault and battery reach their maximum on days having a mean temperature of 85 degrees.

The study of these records revealed another surprising fact—that when the mercury rises above the 85 mark the arrests for assault and battery take a sudden and pronounced drop. Why should this be so? Is it because people's anger cools as it grows hotter?

Science thinks not. On the contrary, it is probable that tempers grow more and more irritable as the temperature rises to 86 degrees and above. But while the greater heat makes the anger boil more hotly it also exerts an enervating effect that makes the average person disinclined for the strenuous activity of pulling hair or a fist fight. So most of the physical violence that would have kept the police on the jump if the mercury had continued at the 85 mark is postponed until it's cooler.

What kind of weather is marked by the most drunkenness? One might think it would be when the mercury is soaring in the 90's, not only because the heat makes throats parched and thirsty but also because it would seem likely to be harder for a person to "carry" a heavy cargo of alcohol on a scorching day.

But just the reverse is found to be the case from a study of New York's police and weather records. "Drunks" become more and more numerous as the temperature falls below the freezing point. Arrests for drunkenness, according to the New York statistics, reach their maximum when the thermometer stands at 10 degrees above zero.

Several reasons are advanced to explain the increase of drunkenness in cold weather. One is that there is better opportunity for convivial "parties" in winter than in summer when the evenings are short. Another much stronger one is that many people feel the need of alcohol to counteract the cold's lowering effect on their vitality and a large percentage of them refuse to be satisfied with one or two bracers.

Arrests for assault and battery reach their maximum on days when the temperature averages between 80 and 85 degrees, but show a sudden decrease above that temperature

These new theories go a long way to explain why on certain days ordinarily well behaved children suddenly become full of mischief, playing truant, being listless at their studies and up to all sorts of unruly pranks.

It is believed that the amount of wind has an important effect on the behavior of boys and girls. In large cities a perfect calm or very little air in motion means that the carbon dioxide that is being constantly poured into the atmosphere is not being carried off as it otherwise would be. This deadly gas poisons the system and lowers the vitality so that children who are naturally weak are often unable to attend school. It slows up the production of body energy in the more vigorous youngsters, giving them no vitality to spare and making them more likely to be well behaved than they would be on windy days.

It is when there is enough wind to carry off the excess of carbon dioxide that the spirits of city children run highest and they become truants and mischief makers. On such days it is urged that boys and girls be given longer recesses and more strenuous gymnastic exercises as an outlet for their super-abundant vitality.

The fact that the suicide rate in New York shows a marked increase when the thermometer is at 90 degrees and when the wind is excessively high is not hard to understand. In all other respects, however, the relation between self-destruction and weather conditions is very puzzling.

More men and women kill themselves in the usually delightful month of May than at any other time. There are more suicides on bright, sunshiny days than on stormy or cloudy ones.

Why is this? The most reasonable explanation yet advanced is that suicides are seldom committed on the spur of the moment but are usually long premeditated. Through a succession of cold, dreary days these poor victims of circumstances or their own folly hope against hope that when the sun shines again they will be able to find a way out of their difficulties. But when the warm sunlit day comes and their troubles are still just as burdensome as ever they are so crushed with disappointment that they promptly carry out the grim plan they have so long had in mind.

These interesting new theories concerning the weather's influence on us are the result of a painstaking investigation recently made by Dr. Edwin G. Dexter of the United States veterans' bureau. He presents some of the more important of his discoveries in an article on "The Influence of the Weather on Human Conduct" in the Scientific Monthly.

Dr. Dexter's interest in the subject was aroused some years ago by a teacher who asked him why it was that during some kinds of weather the children "cut up" so. He advanced a number of possible reasons but none of them was acceptable to the teacher.

Dr. Dexter proceeded to look into the matter. Right at the start he discovered that although whole libraries have been written by scientists about the climate's effects on us nobody has ever said anything about the weather's effects except the poets and novelists. Shakespeare, Dickens and other famous authors have a great deal to say about them.

To get at the truth of the matter Dr. Dexter began a study of the weather records for New York city for the past twelve years. With the day-by-day records of the weather he compared for the same period the police records of arrests for assault and battery, drunkenness and other offenses; the number of cases of insanity; the records of school attendance; the records of the behavior of prisoners in jails and penitentiaries; the records of hospitals and other institutions which might throw light on the mental and physical state of people.

As to the weather, he took into consideration not only rain and shine and heat and cold but also the velocity of the wind, the humidity and the barometric pressure. He describes the simple mathematical processes by which he arrived at his conclusions as follows:

"If one-seventh of all the days have a mean temperature between 60 and 65 degrees, one-seventh of everything that occurs should occur on days when the temperature is between 60 and 65 degrees unless there is something peculiar to that temperature which makes them occur otherwise. If that be true for the temperature group of 60 and 65 degrees, it is also true for every other temperature group and for every other one of the 50 or more weather groups arbitrarily chosen.

"In other words, the percentage of occurrences of a weather condition gives the percentage of expectancy for any peculiarity of human conduct under that condition."

The result of Dr. Dexter's study conclusively shows that his teacher friend was right in thinking it might be the weather that made ordinarily well behaved children so mischievious and unruly on certain days.

How do the varying weather conditions influence us to such a remarkable degree? Dr. Dexter thinks it is probably through the direct effect which they have upon the processes of bodily life. Women and children, he found, are seemingly more susceptible to the weather's influence than men.

"We can not change the weather," says Dr. Dexter, "but we can perhaps adapt our activities somewhat more to its decrees, if only the latter be known."

By doing this he thinks that the behavior of school children might be improved, the amount of drunkenness reduced and human life made better in countless other ways.

SUICIDES show an enormous increase, particularly in the case of women, at a temperature of 90 degrees. Arrests for ASSAULT AND BATTERY are most numerous when the temperature averages between 80 and 85 degrees. If the mercury rises above the latter figure, however, there is a great decrease in the number of these arrests, not because the greater heat makes people any less quarrelsome or eager for crime but because it's too hot for them to want to exert themselves in physical attacks on their fellowmen. Even a healthful, moderate temperature of 65 degrees cannot lessen the tendency of SCHOOL CHILDREN to be unruly on windy days. The wind by blowing away the poisonous carbon dioxide produces an excess of energy that spends itself in mischief unless provided with another outlet. The most DRUNKENNESS is found at 10 degrees above zero. At this temperature many men and women think they must have alcohol to counteract the lowering effect of the cold on their vitality

FOREIGN LIBRARIANS THANK SMITHSONIAN

Librarians from Moscow, from Tokyo, from England, France, Belgium, Holland, Denmark and Germany have called recently at the Smithsonian institution to express thanks for the services of the institution to science, education and general culture in their countries. They declared the libraries of their countries to be dependent for essential records of many advances in science upon the Smithsonian's unique policy of free distribution of its publications to scientific bodies, and on its international exchange service.

The occasion of the librarians' visit to the United States was the recent fiftieth anniversary conference of the American Library association. Those who called at the Smithsonian subsequently included Dr. Henry Guffy, president of the British Library association; Dr. K. Matasumoto, director of the Imperial Library of Japan; Mme. L. Haffkin Hamburger, representative of the Commissar of Education, Moscow; M. Eugene Morel, chief of the Legal Deposit of the Bibliotheque Nationale, Paris; M. Camille Gaspar, keeper of manuscripts in the Bibliotheque Royale, Brussels; Dr. Oscar Thyregod, president of the Special Libraries association, Copenhagen; Dr. Jacob ter Meulen, librarian of the Palace of Peace, The Hague; Dr. Hugo Kruss, general director of the State Library, Berlin; Dr. Adolf Jurgens, business manager of the government exchange bureau, Berlin, and Dr. K. O. Bertling, director of the Amerika-Institut, Berlin.

The debt of the countries represented by these librarians to the Smithsonian dates back to the institution's beginnings in 1847, when its first secretary established the policy of free distribution to learned societies throughout the world of Smithsonian publications, as one means of insuring "the diffusion of knowledge among men." Carried out on such a scale, this was a new step, and its service in the advance of science has been of immeasurable benefit. In consequence of it, in whatever corner of the earth—in Borneo, in Siam—groups of thinkers are organized, the traveler finds the green covers and golden torch of the various Smithsonian series holding the place of honor on the library shelves. Lack of funds has greatly decreased the number of publications issued and distributed by the Smithsonian in recent years, however.

The international exchange service was the Smithsonian's second contribution to further the interchange of new ideas and discoveries. It soon became the channel for the distribution of American scientific writings abroad and foreign scientific writings in America. Governments at length recognized this idea as so sound that they adopted it and enlisted the organization as a medium of exchange for their official publications.

The Smithsonian still administers this government bureau. In 1924 it sent and received a total of 460,658 packages of scientific and governmental literature. The shipments abroad went to 80 distributing agencies in 54 different countries, including Tasmania and Iceland, Liberia and Latvia. In that same year this Smithsonian service acted as the receiving agency for the restocking of libraries destroyed in the Tokyo earthquake. Dr. Matasumoto on his recent visit expressed especially Japan's gratitude for this aid.

POWER OF WINDS

At any one instant the enormous energy stored in the winds of the world is equal to a hundred million horsepower hours, enough to run all the factories of the United States for more than 400 years, if it could be harnessed and drawn upon as needed. Today this vast power is almost wholly unused by men.

The astonishing calculations recently were made by Edgar W. Woolard and announced by the United States weather bureau.

The power of the winds, Mr. Woolard says in Popular Science Monthly, is being used up continually by the friction of the masses of air against each other and against the surface of the earth. These losses, he calculates, are about one-thirtieth of the total power each hour. If the supply of energy were not renewed, naturally the wind would cease to blow. It is renewed by the heat and light of the sun, absorbed by the atmosphere.

The winds are described as a great heat engine, absorbing solar power and using it at a rate of some 3,000,000 horsepower. If some practical wind motor could be devised to use even one-hundredth of 1 per cent of the enormous wind energy, it would give us enough power to replace all the engines and dynamos in the world.

I WISH I could have lived my whole life and drank out of a Goard instead of a Paper Envelope. I just looked at those old fellows that day in wonder. Here they were 70 and 80 years old, lots of them straight and fine. They had trailed herds of cattle by the thousands from the Pecos to the Platte. They had done it year after year with not even a toothbrush in the outfit, six and eight months at a time without a Manicure. Not even individual soap. They all had to use the same piece. There was old grizzled gentlemen come to eat at that Barbecue that was 85 years old and never even had a face massage in their lives. How they ever lived and existed under such unsanitary conditions I will never be able to know. They swam rivers for 20 years without even a bath towel. Some of them didn't even know a "Putter" from a "branding iron." I was raised up in the Cherokkee Nation and the names that was at that barbecue used to stock our country every year, and ship out in the fall to market. Their names were to me like you would look on Presidents. I had heard all my life of such families as the Pierces, the Slaughters, the Pryors, Wagners, Burnetts, "Windy" Scotts, Russells, McFadden, Saunders, Blockers, Mavericks. Every business has its aristocracy. If you are in the Automobile business why Ford, Irskine, Willys and a few of those are your ideal of that business. But these men that I have named above handled thousands and thousands of cattle, from one State to another before the days of convenient railroads.

* * * *

JOHNNY BLOCKER sent 82 thousand Steers up the trail in one year in '85. He was one of the greatest Ropers that Texas ever produced, and when I say Texas ever produced why I mean the World for they have turned out more Ropers than any State. He was originator of the "Blocker loop." That's a big loop, and you go up side of the steer and turn it over as you throw it, and it goes down over the Steer's shoulder and picks up both front feet. He picked up a rope there the other day and showed me just how he used to throw it. He is about 75, and I bet he can spread it on one yet. He was Judge of the first Roping Contest I ever was in in Texas in San Antonio in 1901. I was just an old Cuckoo Kid and had a little Pony and got it jerked down so many times they wanted me to tie the Horse's feet instead of the Steers. He even remembered it the other day and the color of the Pony. Met one old Fellow there that drove the only herd of Buffalo that ever was trailed from one place to another. There is a nice job on a dark rainy night when they start to run. Met one of the Mavericks. The name Maverick on an unbranded cow brute started with that family. They brought a bunch of cattle and didn't brand 'em, just turned them loose and everybody seeing one unbranded or unmarked called it "Mavericks." So that's how the name got started. If he could have always held the unbranded ones, boy, he would have had some stock today! Then they after got to calling them "slick and ears" when they had never been marked. There is a wonderful Book they presented me with, "The Trail Drivers of Texas," published by the Cokesbury Press of Nashville, Tenn. It was published under the direction of George W. Saunders, president and organizer of the "Old Trail Drivers Association."

That's a fine job for a dark night.

IT'S not a story; it's just a collection of of experiences written by the men themselves, over three hundred of them, of their different experiences in going up the trail. Get it, it's the most unique thing ever published. It shows these old timers pictures. Some of them millionaires today, and own Thousands of acres and hundreds of oil wells, while others are poorer than when they worked on the trail for wages. But in that group together they are all the same. Johnny Blocker who sent up 82 thousand in one year, why "Lady Luck" hasn't dealt any too kind with him. He wasn't lucky enough to get in on the oil. But when he is with these boys he is just as welcome as Ike Pryor or Dan Waggonner. They are trying to raise money to erect a monument in San Antonio, to the Old Trail Drivers. It's a beautiful thing. The model is there now. It is being made by Gutzon Borglum, the originator of the Stone Mountain one. It would be a great thing to have and San Antonio would be the logical place to have it. I certainly hope they get it. There is monuments to pretty near everybody that was ever drafted to kill somebody.

Every Governor that was ever paid a big salary by each State for just living in the Mansion. But not a thing has anyone ever done to perpetuate something commemorating what a Ranchman or Cowpuncher has ever done. Texas would be in Mexico today if it wasent for them. Right after the war cattle was all they had, and no market or no railroad for them. These old Boys drove 'em north till they found markets and buyers, and it was through their efforts that the whole Northwest was stocked with cattle. The only revenue that come into this whole country for years was just what was brought back by these old "Waddies."

Now I don't know what kind of cooperation they are getting from all the rest of the Southwest, but it certainly ought to be plentiful, for Lord help you silk garter boys of today that are setting mighty pretty down here now, if it hadent been for these old Timers. You know sometimes in our satisfied ease and prosperity why we forget to sorter remember somebody that is going on kinder over the brow of the hill. We say "Oh, those old timers, let 'em rave!" Well there is one thing about an Old Timers raving, he has gone through something to rave over. The sad thing is going to be the coming generations listening to us. We will be raving with nothing to rave over. Our most thrilling experiences will be how we run to catch a street car and missed it, one cold day, or how we lost four good golf balls in one game. Build this monument now! These old Boys ain't going to be with you long. Let them see it finished while they are alive. If it's a bore to you to listen to their old time ways, why you won't have to listen to them long. Make them happy for their last years. They have made it possible to make you happy for many, many years. You can certainly give 'em that much happiness. It will be to the glory of your State forever. They will live longer in legend and story than the first herd of Fords that was ever driven North. The Old Trail Drivers Association has a purpose; they are not just organized to eat lunch away from home once a week.

It's getting kinder late in the afternoon for a lot of these old Boys, and they will be a-drifting them in one some nice high, dry, divide, to bed 'em down for the night. They will be a-catching their night horses for the last time. They will be rolling their old "tarp" out and crawling into their old "Sougans" and "Parka's," and when they are waked up with a kick to go on guard by a Golden Slipper, instead of a shop-made boot, why they will roll out of there and face their new Range Boss, and when he asks them "Boys are you ready to go with me?" they will look him right in the face and never bat an eye and say, "We are ready to go with anybody that is right."

ate can dig back in a member's past life and then endeavor to expel him for something that transpired before the sovereign State sent him here, is another matter. This question has never been put to the test, but Mr. Beck inclines to the view that the constitutional reference to expulsion applies only to acts after a member has taken his seat.

Otherwise, a situation might arise where the Senate would say to the State of Virginia, "We have discovered that one of your senators was mixed up in a divorce scandal a few years ago or that he shot a negro and we don't like his company and are expelling him." And the State of Virginia or North Carolina might aptly reply, "We don't care whether you like his company or not, we have sent him there to represent our sovereign State and it is for us to say whether he remains as our representative."

With respect to the proposed effort to deny Vare his seat, the question immediately arises as to whether or not he was elected by the State of Pennsylvania. The Senate, under the Constitution, is the judge of the elections and qualifications of its members, but this does not in reality give much latitude, as the certificate of election attested by the seal of the State will definitely certify Vare's election and the preponderance of his majority defies any challenge that he has not been chosen. There may be some who believe that the phrase "qualifications of its members" means that the Senate can sit in judgment as to the intellectual attainments, polished manners, personal charm or appearance of a senator, but it is generally known that the only qualifications which the Senate has to consider are those specified in the Constitution which are as follows:

"No person shall be a senator who shall not have attained to the age of 30 years, and been nine years a citizen of the United States, and who shall not, when elected, be an inhabitant of that State for which he shall be chosen."

There is no provision whereby the Senate can say, "He does not qualify because he wears spats or doesn't speak English or spent a lot of money or is deaf and dumb."

Consequently, the only point that could be raised to deny Vare his seat would be that he has not been legally elected, despite the certificate from the governor of Pennsylvania.

* * * *

THE fact that Mr. Vare spent about a third of the amount expended by his competitor in the primaries, Mr. Pepper, would admittedly be of no importance in the light of preconceived plans to throw Vare out. It might also be asserted that if no money whatever had been spent in the primaries by any of the candidates, the nomination of Mr. Vare would have been assured because he got the nomination despite the fact that his nearest opponent spent three times as much as he did. But the great obstacle which will be encountered by those who seek to eliminate Vare will be the Supreme Court's decision in the Newberry case.

This decision states that no power has been given to the Federal government to regulate or supervise State primaries. It was argued prior to the decision by the government that there was an implied power in the Federal government to regulate any activity of the citizen, which had reference to the election of Federal officers and that consequently the corrupt practices act of 1911, under which Newberry was indicted, was constitutional.

The Supreme Court decided otherwise, a majority of the court holding that there was a clear distinction between the election, which is a fixed and formal governmental process, and the activities of citizens in respect to such elections, such as the primary elections to select candidates, &c.

This wipes out any contention that the Senate has supervisory power over the Pennsylvania primaries or, in other words, that the Senate has any vestige of rights to challenge the sovereign State of Pennsylvania's action in electing Vare. But some senators, bent on their determined purpose to make a political issue out of the Vare case, say they will interpret the decision of that highest tribunal in their own way. They will take refuge behind the view Justice McKenna expressed when he concurred in the majority decision, but reserved the question as to whether Congress under the Seventeenth Amendment might enact a law giving supervisory powers over primaries.

Senator Borah, who has sought to analyze the constitutional question without allowing his judgment to be warped by prejudice, supports the view taken by four members of the Supreme Court in the Newberry case and has reached the conclusion that the Congress has the power to enact legislation regulating primaries. He bases his conclusion partly on the fact that the Seventeenth Amendment to the Constitution was not in force when the Corrupt Practices Act of 1911 was declared unconstitutional in its application to primary elections. Thus Borah's contention is that the Congress could pass a law regulating primaries.

But the Congress has made no attempt to enact such a law since the Newberry case. An attempt to pass such a resolution may now be made when Congress convenes, but then it can hardly apply to the Vare case without being retroactive, and in any event the finality of the Supreme Court decision will confront those senators who endeavor to challenge Vare's election.

However, the Senate may be so swayed by political considerations that leaders of the radical element will force a disregard for all constitutional considerations and vote not to seat Vare. The consensus is that nothing of this sort is to be expected, but with the presidential campaign year in the offing and with marked lack of restraint on the part of more than a few senators, anything is possible. But it is by no means certain that the Senate could dispose of the matter even by disregarding the Supreme Court and the Constitution and voting that Vare had never been elected. The sovereign State of Pennsylvania would still have to be reckoned with.

No method of wriggling can be devised which will circumvent the Constitution of the United States in the Vare case. The State of Pennsylvania exercised its constitutional right of electing the man of its choice for senator. It elected William S. Vare. He will be seated and will serve as senator from Pennsylvania.

DAVID A. REED,
Senator from Pennsylvania.

* * * *

THUS if the Senate aligns itself in such manner as to nullify the will of the State of Pennsylvania and declare that Vare can not legally take his seat, the next move of the State of Pennsylvania must be awaited before the decision to oust Vare can be made final. What will happen, it is suggested, if the Senate votes that Vare was not legally elected and the governor of Pennsylvania when called upon to name a senator, names William S. Vare? What could the Senate do under such circumstances, it is asked, to challenge Vare's right to take his seat.

This brings to mind the famous John Wilkes case in English history, and it may not be amiss to recall the fact that the prosperous Pennsylvania city of Wilkes-Barre is named in honor of Wilkes' successful battle to be admitted to parliament in the teeth of repeated votes by a majority in the British parliament to expel him.

Mr. Beck in his forthcoming book makes telling use of the Wilkes case and regards it as of great influence in the constitutional convention.

John Wilkes was the son of an English tradesman. He represented Middlesex in the house of commons during that time when George III was asserting his power and when a majority of the British parliament were making full use of sanctity, purity and high morality as slogans to further their own ends. Lord Bute, as prime minister, established a ministerial newspaper which he called the Briton, and Wilkes set up a rival paper, The North Briton, in order to wage his campaign against the holier-than-thous and to expose the real inner workings of George III and his puppets. Wilkes made no pretext of being a plaster saint or having a spotless record, but he had a vitriolic pen and called a spade a spade.

Finally he went so far as to criticize the king's speech in his now famous "No. 45" of the North Briton and word went forth that he must be crushed. Wilkes was first arrested on a general warrant of seizure, the same kind of instrument which James Otis was challenging in Boston. He pleaded his privilege from arrest as a member of parliament and he challenged the validity of the general warrant. The courts sustained him.

George III then decided that the majority must expel him from parliament. It was found that Wilkes had imprudently printed, for private distribution among twelve of his intimate friends, an "Essay on Woman," an obscene parody on Pope's "Essay on Man." Here was the opportunity for the holier-than-thous in parliament to make an issue. Parliament met on November 15, 1763, to take up Wilkes' case and he was charged with printing a scandalous libel and after a deluge of clap-trap about sedition and treason, the motion to expel Wilkes was put to a vote and carried, 273 to 111.

In the house of lords, Lord Sandwich, an old rake, led the fight against Wilkes for printing the "Essay on Woman." Passages were read and the most conspicuous of the libertines professed to be shocked beyond measure. The essay was characterized as a "scandalous, obscene and impious libel" and the motion against Wilkes was carried.

Hoping to see him suffer from the humiliation imposed upon him, both houses of parliament ordered Wilkes to attend, but he had been wounded in a duel with a member of parliament and had gone to Paris to recuperate. He was expelled from the house of commons on January 20, 1763.

* * * *

BUT this turned out to be the beginning and not the end of Wilkes' battle for constitutional liberty. Although he was tried and convicted by the courts for libel and declared an outlaw, he again became the candidate for the county of Middlesex and was overwhelmingly elected. The determination of a majority in parliament to nullify the right of Middlesex to send its own representative to the house of commons became an issue of world-wide importance. South Carolina, through her legislature, contributed £1,500 for Wilkes' campaign and it was then that citizens of Pennsylvania named their infant city Wilkes-Barre. "Wilkes and Liberty" became a British slogan.

In his description of the scenes that followed, Mr. Beck, says:

"Wilkes was overwhelmingly elected and, as the voters returned through the West End of London, every house was compelled to illuminate its windows in honor of the people's victory. Every carriage in the street was marked with No. 45, and all who would not shout Wilkes and liberty were beaten and insulted. Some of the voters invaded Berkeley square and broke the glass in Lord Bute's stately residence, &c."

The government made no attempt to enforce either Wilkes' conviction for libel or outlawry, but he was sentenced to 22 months in prison for printing "North Briton No. 45" and the "Essay on Woman." The important thing for the majority in parliament and for the king was to again expel Wilkes. Otherwise, the principle that Middlesex had the right to choose its own representative, irrespective of the majority, would be established. And Wilkes was again expelled.

But the great principle at stake had begun to attract great minds and friends of liberty, including Edmund Burke, whose support of the far-off American colonies was at that time making itself felt. Burke asked scornfully how the alleged offense of libel could deprive Wilkes of his right of being elected to parliament, and the question was continually raised as to the right to nullify the expressed will of the people of Middlesex in choosing their representative.

Wilkes, from his prison at St. Georges fields, reassured his supporters and sent this message to his constituents:

"If ministers can usurp the power of declaring who shall not be your representative, the next step is very easy, and will follow speedily. It is that of telling you whom you shall send to parliament, and then the boasted constitution of England will be entirely torn up by the roots.

"Change the word 'ministers' to 'senators,' 'parliament' to 'congress' and 'England' to the 'United States' and his words will fit as a glove the coming crisis in the Senate," says Mr. Beck.

* * * *

WILKES was sent back a fourth time and expelled, but in the end the people of Middlesex triumphed and this became the great constitutional landmark of the eighteenth century. It determined for all time the right of the people of England to be represented in parliament by people of their own choice.

"There is no essential difference," says Mr. Beck, "between the John Wilkes case and the William S. Vare case, except that in the case of Wilkes, the fate of a scurrilous rascal was involved, who had offended the laws of England and who was charged with having traduced the ministers of the crown by libelous pamphlets."

In the case of Mr. Vare, we have a citizen of Pennsylvania, who has served for many years with credit in the House of Representatives, and against whom there is no charge except that in a heated contest for primary nomination, he had expended in educating the voters the sum of $75,000 and that a far larger sum had been spent in his behalf by his friends. It is not charged that Mr. Vare violated any law of the State of Pennsylvania or of the United States. If he did he could be indicted, and if found guilty, punished under the laws of the State. In that event he would have a fair trial under the rules of law.

"The expulsion of Vare, to please the clamorous minority who demand it, would be a fatal backward step in our history. It would indubitably show that the people of the United States in 1926 were not as capable of constitutional government as were the people of England in 1769, when against the power of the crown and a corrupt majority of the house of commons the brave electors of Middlesex successfully maintained their right to select their own representative in parliament."

Wilson as War President

matter the subject of discussion with the Secretary of War and the general staff. Clemenceau, not yet premier, in an open letter urged Wilson to give Roosevelt a command in the American army in France. The political maneuverings to get the glory of the war were on in full swing.

It was Wilson's idea that in a war so terrible with its enormous cost of lives the full responsibility for the actual fighting should be put upon the shoulders of a trained soldier, rather than a political warrior. Out of the Roosevelt ambition there came an unpleasant partisan scramble in Congress involving the selective draft law, the Senate adopting an amendment that would have permitted Roosevelt to raise four divisions. War preparations were paralyzed for two weeks, and then a compromise was reached making it optional with the President to accept the Roosevelt volunteer division. After consulting with the allied military authorities Wilson met the issue squarely, deciding not to let personal or political considerations interfere with the conduct of the war by the general staff. Despite the ungenerous attacks that Roosevelt had made on Wilson during 1915 and 1916 the President had an admiration for Teddy's grit.

Gen. Wood, protege of Roosevelt, also failed to get to France, because neither Gen. Pershing nor the general staff requested that he be sent there. Roosevelt, longing for a return to power, was not only a great politician, but a great hater when his passions were roused. The vials of his wrath were frequently turned on Wilson. In the war time, however, most of the country's Republican leaders followed the course of Choate and supported Wilson until, as the war was ending in the fall of 1918, he issued the unfortunate call for the election of a Democratic Congress.

How Europe Handled Wilson.

The shrewd politicians of Europe saw to it that the President of the United States had a great joy ride when he came to put the finishing touches on his vision of everlasting peace. Wilson's disgust with Republicans made it impossible to have Elihu Root or any other outstanding man of that party accompany him, and his attempt to name only those whose "minds went along" with his own served to feed the opposition flames.

It was but human that he should be carried away by the applause that the whole civilized world showered on him. There had never been any such wholesale worship of any mere man. In the fullness of his glory and power he would show Europe that he could walk with kings and keep his head. His rebuke by the home folks when the electorate turned down his appeal for a Democratic Congress was brushed aside, as were the crackling warnings of Roosevelt.

And so Europe took on this confident idealist, and while the common people cheered and bowed and worshiped, the seasoned political warriors delayed and juggled and wore him down. A great palace was provided in Paris; precious gifts were heaped upon the household, and the Wilson entourage lived in regal style. Wilson personally wearied of the royal entertaining, but he never found a way to get around the schemes devised by clever Old World rulers to block his peace plans.

COMING ALONG WITH THE REST.

There was a flirtatious wife in the neighborhood. It was a long while before the husband's jealous suspicion became aroused, and then only through some gossiping neighbor. However, once he became convinced that Mrs. Blank's love of admiration was carrying her too far, he proceeded to act.

He sat down and wrote this note to the good-looking bachelor, young Mr. Dash, who lived across the street, and sent it over by special messenger: "Sir—I shall expect you to appear at my office this afternoon at 3 o'clock to explain why you have been flirting with my wife. Yours truly,

"JOHN BLANK."

Promptly the messenger returned with an answer which read as follows:

"Dear Mr. Blank—Your circular form letter of even date received and contents noted. Thanks for the invitation. I shall be very glad to attend the caucus. Sincerely,

"BERNARD DASH."

The Bunny Tots

The Gingerbread Man.

Written and Illustrated by Edward McCandlish.

I suppose you have all seen the "Gingerbread Man" who stands at the street corner, rain or shine, and sells little cakes of gingerbread cut in shapes to the school children as they pass by on their way to school.

Well, one morning the Gingerbread Man was standing at his usual corner, blowing into his hands, for it was quite a cold, frosty morning, and wondering just how many children and copper pennies would probably come his way that morning when, happening to glance down the street he saw a little group of Bunny Tots with enormous pennies in their arms, coming to buy gingerbread at the corner stand.

The Bunny Tots—who are always such shy little folks—had watched their chance to slip down the lane while the children were at school and the street was clear of traffic, and that is how it was that nobody but the Gingerbread Man saw the Bunny Tots that morning.

The Bunny Tots had a whole cap full of jingling pennies which they soon exchanged for ginger cakes that were cut out in shapes like ducks and geese and chickens and rabbits. Then away they went with the gingercakes tucked under their arms. One cake was so big that it took three or four of the little folks to carry it; and pretty soon they disappeared around the corner of the lane that has no turning, while the Gingerbread Man returned to his regular trade of blowing his hands and whistling for customers.

That very evening the little folks held a kind of a party at Good Luck Cottage. At least nothing much was eaten for supper except gingerbread cakes and a bowl of milk; and when all were in bed and asleep that night, a very queer thing happened, for each Bunny Tot dreamed the very same, exact, identical dream, and this is how it was.

It seemed to each Bunny Tot that he had turned into a gingerbread cake—or was about to do so—for the Gingerbread Man was mixing them up in a large wooden bowl, and when the dough was mixed he laid it on a wooden table and began kneading and pounding it with his hands, bringing it down on the table now and then with a thud that made the Bunny Tots gasp for breath. When the kneading was done he took a tin shaper and cut them all out and laid them in a row in a big tin bread pan which he shoved into an oven.

My! How hot it was in that oven! The Bunny Tots got warmer and warmer, until pretty soon they were baked to a crisp, and then the oven door was opened and the Bunny Tots were taken out and set in the pantry window to cool. My, what a relief it was to get cool again, after the heat of that suffocating oven; the Bunny Tots tried to rise up and stretch themselves, but they soon found that their legs and arms were baked hard and fast in the shape of the mold in the tin cutter. But while they were lying there cooling off, the Baker's boy came whistling along and saw the pan of ginger cakes right there in the window.

Danny's Adventure.

(Winner of $1 Prize.)

Danny Field was walking home from school one afternoon in early October. It was just the right kind of a day to make one feel happy, but this feeling of happiness was not in Danny.

His mind was occupied wondering how he could manage to care for his invalid mother.

He had read in books how some boys became rich. No such opportunity had ever reached Danny, nor did he believe one ever would.

As he reached the railroad tracks just around from his house, he heard the sound of an oncoming train. Ahead of him was Tommy, who did not like Danny because he studied hard and tried to help his poor mother. Danny was "the man of the house," as his mother called him, since his father had died.

Tommy, however, was not conscious of the train that was fastly speeding onward. Would Danny let the train rush upon Tommy? Upon the boy who called him a "sissy?" No, even though he was unkind to him.

At top speed he ran on, dashed ahead of the train and, grabbing Tommy by the coat sleeve, dragged him across the tracks—just in time for the train to pass over where he was a moment ago.

Tommy was excited. How near to being killed he was! He owed the saving of his life to Danny Field, to whom he had been so unkind. But from now on, Tommy resolved to be Danny's best friend.

The boys could not understand how Danny and Tommy became such good friends.

On reaching home, Mrs. Field was waiting for Danny at her door.

Her face was all smiles. "Danny," she said, "a man is here to see you." The man whom Danny met was Mr. Jacobs, the president of the railroad company.

"My boy," he said, "I saw the heroic deed you performed yesterday. I saw the house you entered and I am here today to repay you." He put his hand in his pocket and drew forth from his wallet a check for one thousand dollars.

Never did Danny have so much money. Mr. Jacobs came again and promised Danny a job when he finished school. A position that would enable him to support his mother.

In Danny's home town there was not a prouder mother than Mrs. Field on that day.

Winter Is Near.

(Honorable Mention.)

Everything is different now
Than it was a month ago;
It isn't as warm as it was,
It is nearly cold enough for snow.
Winter is near.

The leaves are turning red
And falling to the ground;
Bonfires are being made
Of the leaves all around.
Winter is near.

The birds are going South
As they know the winter's near;
The flowers are all dying,
Because Jack Frost is here.
Winter is near.

Autumn Rains.

(Winner of $1 Prize.)

The chilly winds are blowing,
For hoary winter nears.
The dismal rain is falling;
It must be nature's tears.
Her painted leaves are drooping
With pearly crystal drops,
And soon they'll be whirling 'round,
With sudden, frequent stops.

The trees are sad and gloomy
Because the time is here
When they must leave till springtime
Their foliage so dear.
Although the winter's coming
Is making nature drear,
We all await, rejoicing,
Thanksgiving day, so near.

A Real Thanksgiving.

(Honorable Mention.)

Years ago there lived a very wealthy family, four children and their parents. Two of the children were called Dick and Sue.

These children had once had a quarrel and they had agreed to part, each to a different part of the country, and never meet again.

The parents were now growing old and were anxious to have the children make up, so they decided to have a real old-fashioned Thanksgiving, for it was nearing Thanksgiving.

They wrote all of the children invitations and received letters saying they would come. The old parents were very happy.

In a different part of the country where Sue lived she was very sad; although she wanted to go home badly, she remembered she was not to see Dick again. She was so very sad she thought she would tell her husband. After she had had a long talk with her husband her heart felt lighter, for he had told her to go and to trust that everything would be all right.

In another part of the country Dick was still angry. He said "Yes, I intend to go, for I know I shall have a good time, but I do not intend to speak to Sue." He packed his traveling bag and, with his wife, he started in his car. He went driving along at a reckless speed, and he did not know the road at all and it was dark, when all of a sudden the car went over a bank. They were fastened under the car. He was so frightened that he began to pray aloud to be saved so he could ask forgiveness of Sue, and his prayer was answered, for another car came along and saw that they were over the bank and stopped to pick them up and took them to their old home.

She was at her old home and when she saw Dick coming she ran to him and embraced him tenderly, and to her great surprise he returned her embrace.

When they had all eaten their dinner the old parents took the children to the parlor and asked each one to tell something that they were most thankful for and whom do you suppose had the greatest to be thankful for? It was Dick and Sue, of course. The parents were so happy they made the children kneel down and thank God.

The Noblest Act.

A man feeling that the end of his life was near called his three sons to him and showed them a precious jewel. He told them that he would give it to the one who would perform the noblest act. Shortly after the oldest boy came to his father and said:

"Father, a person entrusted me with a large sum of money. I gave him no receipt for it and I might have kept it all, but when he claimed it I returned it, refusing a reward."

"Yours was but an act of justice," remarked the father.

The second son said: "I was walking beside a lake when I heard the screams of a little child. At the risk of drowning I jumped into the cold water and brought the child safely to its mother."

"Yours was but an act of human kindness," said the father.

"What did you do, son?" he asked, turning to the youngest.

"One dark night I found my mortal enemy asleep on the edge of a precipice. The slightest move on waking would have plunged him down to his death. I took care to raise him with proper caution and led him to a place of safety."

"My dearest son," said the father, embracing him, "the jewel is yours."

Capt. Henry Hudson.

(Honorable Mention.)

In 1607 he sailed in search of a short way to China and India by way of the northern ocean. He was stopped by the ice off the coast of Greenland.

The Indians of that part of the country called the stream he had explored the "River of the Mountains." Today it is called the Hudson. But he and his men suffered terribly from want of food and started (1611) to return home. But the men put Hudson and seven others in an open boat and turned them adrift. Nothing was ever heard of them after that.

THANKSGIVING PRIZES WILL BE ANNOUNCED

Dear Post Boys and Girls:

Why will you be thankful on Thanksgiving day?

Surely, there are many, many reasons why you should be grateful on this national holiday and, in fact, all the year around.

One very great reason for thankfulness is because you live in such a beautiful city, the Capital of the land of the free.

Think of all the reasons you have to be grateful and then write 300 words about it. Send it to The Post Boys and Girls Editor and the best letter received will get a prize of $2. All entries must be received by The Post Boys and Girls Editor not later than November 22.

The announcement of the winner of the Thanksgiving special prize of $5 which is the grand prize for November will be in next Sunday's Post on the Boys and Girls Page.

Many boys and girls have competed in this prize contest and a high standard of excellence has been maintained. Through the interest of these members of The Post Boys and Girls Page we will have a splendid Thanksgiving day page, one of which all will have cause to be proud.

Tomorrow The Post Junior Writers club will be three years old, and I am glad to be able to tell you that we now have more than 1,000 active members. Many of our members are in cities outside of Washington and a number in other countries.

The best thing about our club is that nobody can belong to it unless he or she earns the right by having a story, poem or drawing published on this page or sending in work which is suitable for publication which enrolls your name on the honorable mention list but which for lack of space we are not always able to print.

Let's all get together for a 2,000 membership by November 15, 1927. It can be done if every boy and girl reader of this page tries to interest friends in the page.

EDITOR POST BOYS AND GIRLS PAGE.

In the Night.

Our carriage rumbled along the old cobblestone road. The sky was black except for occasional flashes of lightning, and a steady rain added to our discomfort. My friend and I sat for long periods at a time without making a sound or saying a word. It was the kind of night that affects the individual in a way that can not be put into words, and that lends a sense of weirdness and mystery to the surrounding landscape.

Suddenly the lightning flashed and I saw, walking beside the carriage, a woman clothed in a somber, long, black dress, with a black covering on her head. The sight of her walking there, so silent, awful and sinister-looking caused my back to tingle with apprehension lest she were foreboding some evil. Every time the lightning flashed there was that same woman, still walking beside the carriage. I couldn't understand how she could walk as swiftly as we were traveling. I thought no more of the incident until some years later, when I was traveling to a distant city, and I began talking to some people on the train. We were discussing weird experiences we had had, and I told mine, thinking to amuse them. Immediately when I had finished one of the men began laughing. Upon my asking what the joke was he gave the following explanation: In that section of the country where I was traveling there is a peculiar religious sect of women who all dress as I had described the woman I saw. They had held one of their meetings that evening, and were then on their way home. They always walk one by one some distance apart, and every time the lightning flashed I saw a different woman!

Thanksgiving Day.

Thanksgiving day owes its origin to the Pilgrim Fathers, who first set apart a day in America in 1621, at Plymouth, Mass., to give thanks to God for the mercies of the year, or harvest thanksgiving.

We are thankful for the Indians, who taught us more about fishing and raising corn, the desire for peace and friendship, and many other things. The Indians were invited to that first Thanksgiving feast in America. When the Pilgrims fired their guns in celebration of the feast, the Indians were very frightened at the sound, jumped over the tables and ran into the woods.

Since 1863, the last Thursday in November has been adopted throughout the United States as Thanksgiving day, a public acknowledgment of divine goodness and mercy.

We have many reasons to be thankful for, such as freedom, food, clothing, health, friends, and many other things.

The following is a true story of how the Indians say "Thank you:" In an Indian church in Oklahoma, an Indian member was asked what Jesus had done for him. As an answer he went outdoors and got some dry leaves, which he laid in a circle. Then he placed a worm in the center and set the leaves on fire. The flames kept burning up the leaves until they were ready to burn up the worm, then the Indian lifted the worm out of the fire and said, "This is the way Jesus saved me!"

The Winter-tex Overcoat

SOLD BY GOOD CLOTHIERS IN EVERY TOWN

THE Winter-tex Overcoat differs from any winter overcoat you have ever worn. It is guaranteed for 2 years.

Winter-tex cloth is smart in appearance. It has the rich, soft finish and the beautiful colorings that you are accustomed to see in imported overcoatings. The linings are of Skinner's satin.

In every city and town in the United States there is a good clothing store that has this Winter-tex picture in its window.

That store will show you Winter-tex overcoats in smart new shades of light and medium grey, dark oxford-grey, blue, blue-grey, fawn, polo, brown, autumn brown, tan, sage, mode and heather mixtures.

But the Winter-tex label must be in the coat. Otherwise it is not made of genuine, guaranteed Winter-tex cloth.

OH, GRANDMA, WHAT BIG EYES YOU HAVE -

AFTER ESCAPING FROM THE CAVE OF DARKNESS THE THREE FRIENDS WANDER THROUGH THE MOUNTAIN WILDERNESS - WHILE UNCLE BIM UPON FINDING CHESTER'S NOTE STATING THEY ARE ABOUT TO PENETRATE THE INTERIOR OF THE MIGHTY CAVERN HASTENS TO FORM A SEARCHING PARTY TO RESCUE THE LOST ADVENTURERS -

SIDNEY SMITH

THE CAVERN PENETRATES THE MOUNTAINS FOR AN IMMENSE DISTANCE-UNTIL THE BLOODHOUNDS ARRIVE IT IS USELESS TO BEGIN OUR SEARCH FOR CHESTER AND HIS BRAVE COMPANIONS-

I KNOW YOUR PLAN IS WISE - BUT I AM BURNING WITH ANXIETY-I SEEM TO HEAR CHESTER'S VOICE CALLING ME TO HELP HIM-

THE NATIVE TRACKERS HAVE ARRIVED WITH THE BLOODHOUNDS-

THANK HEAVEN, WE CAN NOW BEGIN THE SEARCH FOR THE LOST BOY-

I SHALL USE ALL THE RESOURCES OF MODERN ELECTRIC LIGHTING EQUIPMENT TO LIGHT OUR PATHWAY THROUGH THAT DARK CAVE -

ONCE THEY GET THE SCENT THEY WILL FOLLOW IT UNTIL THEY DROP EXHAUSTED -

I BELIEVE THIS DOG UNDERSTANDS WHAT WE EXPECT OF HIM AND IS EAGER TO BE ON THE TRAIL -

I SHUDDER TO THINK OF CHESTER SURROUNDED BY THE DANGERS AND HARDSHIPS OF THIS AWFUL CAVERN -

THE NATIVES SAY THIS PIT IS BOTTOMLESS-

IT APPEARS TO BE THE CRATER OF AN EXTINCT VOLCANO -

NO, THANK YOU - I REFUSE TO THINK OF FOOD UNTIL THE BOY IS FOUND - REMEMBER EVERY MOMENT IS PRECIOUS -

IN THE MEANTIME THE THREE FRIENDS CONTINUE THEIR FLIGHT THROUGH THE MOUNTAINS WITHOUT FINDING A TRACE OF CIVILIZATION -

THIS COMMONPLACE PERSON'S HEART OVER-FLOWS WITH THANKS FOR THIS NEVER-TO-BE FORGOTTEN ENOUGH SPRING -

SOONER OR LATER WE MUST FIND SOMEONE WHO WILL GUIDE US BACK TO UNCLE BIM -

GOLLY, I'M GLAD SAM BROUGHT THAT FLINT AND STEEL ALONG - NOW, WE CAN COOK THE BIRD CHING TRAPPED -

IF WE DON'T MEET THE WOLF AND HIS BEGGARLY BAND OF BLACK PIRATES WE'LL SOON REACH PORT AND YOU MAY LAY TO THAT -

OH, BOY! THIS DRUM-STICK TASTES SWELL -

ADVERTISEMENTS

PERSONAL

WARDEN

I HOPE MY POOR LOST SHEEP SEES THAT

OH ZAT SO! WELL, NOT UNLESS I CAN KEEP MY GOLDFISH IN MY BOUDOIR

IT'S CERTAINLY MYSTERIOUS WHERE THAT PRISONER GOT TO. HE BEANED THREE GUARDS AND ESCAPED OVER THE WALL. THEN, ALTHOUGH WE STARTED IMMEDIATE PURSUIT, HE VANISHED COMPLETELY

AND WHAT'S MORE, I'M AFRAID YOU'LL NEVER SEE HIM AGAIN. IF I CAN'T FIND HIM NOBODY CAN.

WANTED! $5000 REWARD!

RUDY THE GYP ESCAPED

WANTED

SNIFFEN SNOOP, THE GREAT SLEUTH—

I HAVE AN IDEA!

I'VE SCOURED THE WHOLE COUNTRYSIDE FOR HIM WITHOUT FINDING A CLUE. IT'S MY OPINION THAT HE ESCAPED IN AN AIRSHIP AND IS NOW IN FOREIGN PARTS, WARDEN.

GOOD GRIEF! HE'S THE SECOND PRISONER I'VE LOST IN TWENTY YEARS AND IF HE'S NOT FOUND I'LL LOSE MY JOB —AT THE END OF HIS RESOURCES.

HAW! HAW! DON'T MAKE ME LAUGH!

I WILL HAVE YOUR PRISONER BACK HERE IN TWO HOURS, WARDEN!

WHAT, YOU? BUT HOW?

OUR HERO, THE CUB DETECTIVE.

I'LL FOLLOW THIS YOUNG PRUNE. HE MIGHT STUMBLE ON A CLUE THAT MAY BE USEFUL TO ME

PRISON

HA! HA! THE POOR BOOB HAS STUBBED HIS TOE ALREADY

SAY, YOU AMATEUR-ER-DEFECTIVE, WHAT'S THE IDEA WASTING TIME PILING ROCKS ON THAT SLAB OF STONE YOU STUMBLED OVER?

THAT'S SO NO OTHER-ER-DEFECTIVE STUMBLES ON IT

IT'S GETTING DARK NOW SO I'LL TURN BACK

HAW! HAW! HE'S GIVING UP. I GUESS HE'S LICKED.

IT'S JUST AS I TOLD YOU, WARDEN. IN 1½ HOURS THIS SAP HAS ACCOMPLISHED ABSOLUTELY NOTHING AND HE'S COME BACK TO CONFESS HIMSELF A MEDDLING FOOL

THE ONE THAT ESCAPED 20 YEARS AGO WAS NEVER HEARD OF AGAIN, EITHER, ONLY WE NEVER DID FIND OUT HOW HE ESCAPED

TAKE IT FROM ME, YOUR CONVICT IS WELL ON HIS WAY TO AUSTRALIA AND YOU'LL NEVER SEE HIM AGAIN

I MIGHT AS WELL RESIGN BEFORE THE GOVERNOR FIRES ME

ON THE CONTRARY—

HUH?

—I'M EXPECTING YOUR MAN RIGHT HERE IN THE PRISON COURT-YARD ALMOST ANY MINUTE!

—IN FACT, I THINK HE'S KNOCKING TO GET IN NOW!

THUMP THUMP THUMP

WELCOME BACK!

AS I SUSPECTED, MR. RASSENDALE, ALIAS RUDY THE GYP, WHEN I STUMBLED ON YOUR HIDING PLACE AND BLOCKED YOUR EXIT, YOU HAD TO GROPE YOUR WAY TO THE OTHER END OF THE TUNNEL. BUT YOU DID NOT KNOW THAT IT LED BACK HERE TO THE PRISON

TRAPPED!

YOU SEE, WARDEN, THAT'S THE SECRET TUNNEL THROUGH WHICH YOUR OTHER PRISONER ESCAPED 20 YEARS AGO, AND THIS CROOK WHEN HE ESCAPED OVER THE WALL, FOUND THE OUTER END OF IT AND HID HIMSELF IN IT, WAITING FOR A DARK NIGHT TO MAKE HIS GETAWAY. MY BLOCKING HIS ESCAPE FORCED HIM BACK HERE

THAT CLEARS BOTH MYSTERIES

AND TO-NIGHT I'D HAVE MADE MY GETAWAY CLEAN

BAH!

ELLA CINDERS

by BILL CONSELMAN and CHARLIE PLUMB

HILLSIDE AVE.

SWAMP MANOR LOTS AND LOTS

SOLD TO MISS ELLA CINDERS

I'VE DECIDED TO GET A JOB AND LEAVE MY STEP-MOTHER! SHE'S LIKE A FLIVVER—NOT LAZY, JUST SHIFTLESS!

JUST WHAT I WANT! 'OUR MEN AND WOMEN ARE MAKING $100.00 A WEEK—U CAN 2. APPLY 817 BLINK BLDG.'

ALL YOU HAVE TO DO IS TO DEPOSIT THE PRICE OF THESE SAMPLES AND THEN ASK PEOPLE TO BUY OUR COMBINATION POTATO PEELER, PENCIL SHARPENER, AND MANICURE SCISSORS. YOU GET TEN CENTS OUT OF EVERY DOLLAR OR SO, AND IT'S POSSIBLE TO MAKE $100.00 A WEEK—SOME WEEKS.

I'M AFRAID I'M THE KIND OF SALESMAN WHO'LL MAKE $100.00 A WEEK REGULARLY ONCE A YEAR, BUT AS THE PULLEY SAID TO THE ROPE, 'I'LL TACKLE ANYTHING!'

MADAM, WOULD YOU—

I WOULD NOT!

WOULD YOU—

NO!

BANG!

I'D LIKE TO SELL YOU ONE OF THE GREATEST MODERN INVENTIONS EVER PERPETRATED—

GLAD TO SEE YOU, SISTER! COME RIGHT IN!

NO ONE SHOULD BE WITHOUT THIS USEFUL LITTLE IMPLEMENT, GOOD IN KITCHEN, BOUDOIR, OR OFFICE—

JUST A MINUTE, SISTER!

I WANT TO HELP YOU OUT OF THIS RUT—TO MAKE YOU AS RICH AS FRUIT-CAKE, IN FACT! I WANT TO SEE YOU RIDING IN YOUR OWN ROILS-ROCE.

THAT'S WHY I WANT TO SELL YOU A LOT IN SWAMP MANOR WHERE VALUES WILL DOUBLE EVERY WEEK THEY DON'T TREBLE, MAKING YOUR SMALL INVESTMENT IN TEN YEARS GROW CIPHERS FASTER THAN A WAR DEBT! RIGHT ON THE DOTTED LINE, PLEASE!

THIS MONEY QUESTION WORRIES ME! WHEN I DIDN'T HAVE IT, IT WORRIED ME AND NOW THAT I'M GOING TO BE RICH AGAIN, I'M WORRIED ABOUT THE WOES OF THE WEALTHY.

I OUGHT TO GET A JOB AT A PHOTOGRAPHER'S AND HAVE MY BRAINS DEVELOPED! I'M THE SAP OF MY FAMILY TREE! I WENT OUT TO SELL—I WAS SOLD INSTEAD—AT LEAST ONE OF US WAS, FOR I GAVE HIM ALL MY SAMPLES AS FIRST PAYMENT ON THE LOT!

IT'S TOO ROUGH A GAME, SKEEZIX. YOU CAN WATCH THEM BUT I WOULDN'T PLAY.

THE PESKY KIDS!

HERE BOYS, I'LL KICK IT BACK TO YOU.

WELL THEN, BY GOLLY, HERE'S A DROP KICK. I USED TO BE GOOD AT THAT.

MISSED IT!

I'LL TELL 'EM IT'S COMIN'!

LOOK OUT, SKEEZIX!

SO?

AW, THAT'S A SHAME, HONEY! LET'S SEE. UNCA WALT DIDN'T MEAN TO HIT YOU.

IT DIDN'T HURT.
